OTTAWA, April 19. (CP). — Charges that Canada Packers and Canadian Swift's reached an "understanding" on mornings before the livestock market opened on the prices they would offer were heard before the Stevens price spreads and mass buying probe today.

From 22 years' association with Gunns Ltd., before the merger into Canada Packers in 1929, and five years' connection with the merger, Alexander Mackenzie, Toronto wholesale butcher, described to the committee the system which he estimated caused a loss of 50 cents to $100 per 100 pounds to the producer. Mr. Mackenzie left the Canada Packers last June.

Chain stores, the Toronto witness further charged, bought meat around 85 cents to $1 per 100 cheaper from the packing plants than the retailer could purchase. Sometimes sales were made to chain stores at less than cost "because of the volume of cattle on hand." Advantages given to these chain stores resulted in the small buyers having to pay more for their meat.

Conferred Daily

Buyers in the two large packing houses would confer early in the morning with the section head of the beef, sheep and other departments, Mr. Mackenzie said in explaining the understanding on prices. Then a representative of one of these large packers, usually Canada Packers, would telephone the other and come to an "understanding" on the prices their buyers would offer.

Prior to the merger, this practice of a price understanding did not exist. "It was open competition in those days," said the Toronto witness.

R. A. Wright, president of the Western Canada Livestock Union, criticized the Dominion Agricultural Co. Ltd., operating in Western Canada. "To date it has failed in carrying out its original purposes," said Mr. Wright. "We have been told it is the function of the banks to supply these necessary credits, but we hope that there will soon be evolved by this company a credit system that will function more closely in harmony with its original purpose."

The committee will continue its sitting this afternoon.

ENTER 98 CAKES IN BIG CONTEST

Mrs. L. Eastwood, 172 Antrim Street, Won First Prize.

OVENS TOO HOT.

A deluge of feather cakes descended on The Examiner office yesterday. From nine in the morning until six at night, they arrived in all manner of containers. Ladies and gentlemen and children bore carefully these triumphs of the culinary art that were so good that it was very difficult for the judges to decide the prize-winner. In all, ninety-eight cakes were received in this contest which was sponsored by the Egg-o people, with Egg-o Double Acting Baking Powder required as one of the main ingredients.

They came from as far away as Indian River and Lakefield and they will be dispensed to the

GOLD ISSUES BADLY SHAKEN BY BUDGET TAX

Shares Fail to Recover Losses During Day After Drastic Drop in Early Trading.

LIST CLOSES WEAK.

General Industrial List Little Affected—Food Stocks Firm at Toronto and Montreal.

(By The Canadian Press)

Gold mine shares suffered severely on Canadian Stock Exchange to-day following imposition of a 10 percent tax on gold, dropping drastically in early trading and failing to make up the losses during the day. They closed weak at prices substantially lower than yesterday.

In contrast some of the food stocks in Toronto and Montreal were firmer on the cut in the sugar tax from two to one cent a pound. The general industrial list was little affected by the budget.

Cigarette Tubes Tax Reduced In Budget

OTTAWA, April 19.—(CP)—A little consideration is given the tobacco smoker in the Rhodes budget it was seen today. The excise tax on cigarette tubes, imported or manufactured in Canada, is reduced from four cents to three cents a hundred. No reference is made to tobacco.

Bakers' cakes and pies have been placed on the exempt list from sales tax in the budget brought down by Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Finance Minister. While not specifically stated, the exemption does not include biscuits, cookies or other similar articles.

BRITAIN FIGHTS STAVE OFF RACE FOR MORE ARMS

Spurred by French Note Stating German Action Smashed Hope of Disarming.

PRESS PESSIMISTIC.

Claim if Note Final, Nations Must Look to Own Security.

By B. C. PUGH
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 19. — (A.P.)—Fighting to stave off a feared race among the nations to re-arm, statesmen began to-day a renewed struggle for some basis of agreement.

They were spurred to redoubled activity by the French contention, stated in a note to London, that Germany's increased defense appropriations have smashed all hope of disarmament through bilateral negotiations.

Authoritative sources said Great Britain is determined to continue efforts to obtain at least a limited arms convention.

Amid these moves to-day, the London press, in a pessimistic vein, headlined accounts of the French note with such captions as:

"Grave disarmament crisis," "Direct arms talks killed," "Disarmament deadlock," and "France blames Germany."

The Morning Post said the French memorandum is a "waft of refreshing candour, loosed into the sultry, suffocating atmosphere of make-believe" and ends once and for all the hollow pretense that disarmament is either safe or possible under existing conditions.

7,000 Word Story.

The definite French position was revealed in a British government "white paper" which told last night in 7,000 words the story of how European nations have sought to reach a basis for an arms accord.

The paper was released after London had received in the note from Paris a demand that a full disarmament conference resume discussions where they were dropped last fall.

Delegates to the conference left Geneva, after the withdrawal of Germany from both the parley and the League of Nations, hoping to 38TH ANNUAL EVENT.

BOSTON, April 19.—(AP)—Dave Komonen of Sudbury, Ont. won the 38th annual Boston Athletic Association Marathon today.

Pawson, Henigan and Whitey Michelsen, favorites or former winners, had dropped out at the end of 17 miles.

Komonen was running strong at the finish. His time was 2 hours 32 minutes, 53 4-5 seconds.

Komonen, who migrated to Toronto from Finland less than five years ago, was voted the outstanding athlete of the Dominion last year in a Canadian Press poll of sports writers.

He earned this ranking at the conclusion of a season which saw him win the Canadian National Marathon, the Albany and Washington long distance treks as well as several other American and Canadian jaunts over shorter distances.

DR. PRATT'S FATE LIES IN HANDS OF PERTH JURY

Aged Physician Listens With Eyes Closed as Prosecutor Pictures Murder Scene.

PANEL RETIRES 12.55 P.M.

Young Defense Counsel Maintains Crown Showed No Motive—Judge Reviews Case.

PERTH, Ont., April 19. — (CP) — Fate of Dr. Wilton Pratt, charged with murdering his housekeeper, Eva Elizabeth McLean, will rest with a Lanark County Assize Court jury today. On completion of addresses by Counsel and Mr. Justice Patrick Kerwin's charge, the case was handed over to the jury at 12.55 p.m.

The 71-year-old physician, his eyes closed and his body leaning forward with arms on his knees, listened to Special Crown Prosecutor C. W. Bell, K.C., picture the woman being drugged, placed on a bed saturated with some "highly inflammable substance such as alcohol" which was ignited and the 60-year-old victim left to burn to death.

"The Crown said this man put that woman to death," said Mr. Bell, "and you have no denial from him. I did not cross examine him, not because of his age or illness, but I didn't wish to draw any admission from a man who takes drugs."

Judge Reviews Evidence

The judge reviewed the evidence in detail and said there was no evidence the accused and the victim were alone in the house and reminded the jury the prisoner was a medical practitioner. There were numerous things about the house to have caused the bruise on Miss McLean's head and he advised the jurors to consider if Dr. Pratt's false teeth, found in the room where the woman was burned, "got therein a perfectly legitimate way."

There also was a "coincidence with the fact the woman did not cry out in pain during the fire, and presence of hyocene in the doctor's room." This drug, described as the most powerful sedative used in medicine, killed all pain, he said, advising the jurors if they were satisfied beyond reasonable doubt the accused had killed Miss McLean, they should return a verdict of murder or manslaughter.

No Motive Shown.

Donald Smith, defence counsel, contended the Crown had shown no motive for such a crime and said if Dr. Pratt "had any intention of murdering Eva McLean he has had the opportunity during the last 25 years." The Crown further had produced no evidence to show the doctor and his housekeeper quarrelled the night Miss McLean was fatally burned in the doctor's Smith's Falls home, Smith argued. "I think there is more than a reasonable doubt in your minds and I leave matters in your hands."

Crown counsel, however, said evidence of witnesses had shown the woman was drunk and unable to move the night before the fire and he asked who carried her upstairs and placed her on the bed, which, he declared, could not have burned to the extent it did without some inflammable substance being poured over it. Tests on similar mattresses had shown this, he added.

Looked Like An Accident.

"Does the evidence not suggest to you the woman was got upstairs and that the accused fired the bed?" he addressed the jury. "His teeth were found there. Is that not an indication he was there that night? Matches were found there. It would

HUSBAND MAKES HEROIC BUT VAIN TRY TO SAVE HER

Terribly Injured, Fred Dion, 38, is Rushed to Belleville Hospital.

FARM HOME RAZED.

Victim Believed Overcome by Smoke—Hired Man, Visitor Escape.

(Special to The Examiner)

FLINTON, Ont., April 19. —Fred Dion, 38, is in Belleville hospital in a dying condition as a result of a heroic but vain attempt to save his wife, 35, from being burned to death in a fire which broke out about 4 a.m. today and burned to the ground their large farmhouse, about two miles from here. Two other occupants of the house, a hired man and an aged neighbour woman, escaped the flames unhurt. Only after considerable searching were the charred remains of Mrs. Dion located among the smouldering debris, but the body was left undisturbed until the arrival of the coroner from Napanee.

When the fire was first discovered early this morning, the hired man, the neighbour and Mr. Dion were able to make their way safely out of the building through the dense smoke. When he discovered however that his wife was still inside the blazing structure, Dion unhesitatingly rushed back to her rescue. He was finally snatched from the flames, in a critical condition, but nothing could be done to save Mrs. Dion.

Barns Escape

The Dion farm is about 15 miles north of Tweed and there is no fire fighting equipment in this isolated section of the country, so the two storey frame farmhouse was soon a smouldering ruin. The flames, however, did not spread to neighbouring barns and sheds and even a large woodpile nearby escaped. Mr. Dion is a well known trucker in this district and for some time has been engaged in the wood business.

He was rushed by automobile to Belleville by his brother, Albert Dion, who occupies the adjoining farm. For some years a young girl had been boarding at the Dion home but fortunately, she had been sent for by her parents about a week ago.

JOB AT AUBURN BE LET FRIDAY

Work is Expected to Start on Addition Within 10 Days.

FOR WEAVING DEPARTMENT

The Dominion Woollens and Worsteds Company will proceed at once with their previously announced plan to erect an addition to their Auburn plant, G. T. Sanderson, plant manager at the Auburn mill, said to-day.

Tenders have been called and the contract will be let to-morrow, Mr. Sanderson stated. Following the letting of the contract, it is expected, that the building work will start within ten days.

Mayor Denne expressed satisfaction at the announcement that the Auburn plant was proceeding at once with their construction plans. "This large addition to one of the city's important industries will mean a great deal to Peterborough, particularly at this time" he said.

For Weaving Department

The new building will be 100 feet long and 75 feet wide, containing a basement and one storey, as an addition to the weaving department of the plant.

Both plants of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds here have been operating at close to peak production for a long period, and with the prospect of the sustained volume of business the addition to the Auburn plant has been considered advisable. New machinery will be housed in it, and other new arrangements in the plant will be made.

New Gold Strike in Peterboro?

Gold said to have been assayed at $55 a ton is reported to have been discovered in a claim staked by Moses Smoke, aged Indian, and Thomas McBride, Cold Springs Blacksmith, who, with a group of neighboring farmers reputedly are preparing to work the diggings.

For several years Smoke, resident of Alderville reservation, was said to have referred frequently to finding of free gold "back there," which meant somewhere in Cavendish north of Peterborough. But it was not until McBride accompanied the Indian to scene of the reported find, samples were sent to assayers for analysis. Reports said the blacksmith and a geologist are at the property now preparing to forward further samples for analysis to Toronto. It was said a syndicate would be formed to operate the project.

MINING HEADS REACH OTTAWA TO PROTEST TAX

Claim Gold Levy Will Halt Low Grade Processing, Hurt Small Companies.

EXCHANGE HOLDS MEET,

President States Impost Still Leaves Mines' Premium 50 p.c. Over $21.67 Price.

(By The Canadian Press)

In the wake of an overnight wave of resentment a delegation of mining men reached Ottawa to-day to protest the government's new 10-percent tax on gold.

Meanwhile the management committee of the Toronto Stock Exchange met in emergency session to decide what measures, if any, should be taken to regulate trading in the face of the tax announcement, made yesterday in the budget of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, finance minister.

Despite pronouncement from some quarters that the impost would halt low-grade ore processing and be found unendurable by small mining companies, President Harold Franks of the Toronto exchange urged the situation be regarded calmly.

"In my view," said Mr. Franks, "the tax on gold is not excessive. It leaves the premium to mines more than 50 percent above the former standard price of $21.67.

He said the suggestion had been made to him that the exchange be closed for at least half a day pending thorough survey of the situation, but added: "I see no reason for that. Most of our larger gold issues are also traded at New York and if there is much depreciation there we would have to adjust our prices here on re-opening in any event."

No Room for Panic

He voiced belief the tax would bring a market "adjustment," but added "I cannot see the slightest justification for uneasiness or panic. . . . In my view the best interests of the community and the market would be served if everyone would co-operate to prevent indiscriminate dumping of good gold stocks. There is not a single element of catastrophe in the situation that I can see."

The delegation which arrived in Ottawa from Toronto included G. C. Bateman, secretary of the Ontario Mining Association; Fraser Reid, president of the same organization; and R. J. Jowsey, president of the Ontario Prospectors' and Developers' Association.

Mr. Bateman said the measure was the "most drastic thing that one can conceive of, and amounts to sheer confiscation of money that otherwise would multiply itself a hundredfold in bringing business to Canada as a result of development of our mining fields."

He maintained the new tax would represent the difference between profit and loss to scores of small mining companies that have been struggling to make ends meet despite the increased price of gold.

Halt Foreign Cash

James Y. Murdock, President of Noranda Mines, said the tax "will waste millions of tons of material which would have been utilized as ore by reason of the increased price.

CANADA MOVES INTO NEW YEAR, SINGLE NEW TAX

Gold Impost of 10 Per Cent. Made to Offset Cent Cut in Sugar Levy.

$10,000,000 REVENUE.

Reducing of Special Excise Tax Smooths Path of British Goods Into Dominion.

OTTAWA, April 19. (CP). Canadians to-day took stock of their National accounts and looked out upon a bright financial horizon as a result of the Dominion Government's budget presented in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance.

Supporting the note of restrained optimism he sounded throughout his budget speech by figures, Mr. Rhodes said the improvements already attained, in government revenues, in exports and in trade generally enabled the government to move into another fiscal year without increasing the tax burden on the people. The only new tax is a 10 percent levy on gold and it is designed to replace a cut in the sugar tax from two cents a pound to one.

With gold selling now at about $35 an ounce tax is expected to net the treasury in the neighborhood of $10,000 but care has been taken to avoid making it an undue burden on the gold mining industry.

It is provided the tax shall not apply to an extent to reduce the price to the mines below $30 an ounce. Furthermore the service charges now imposed by the Royal Canadian Mint for handling gold are done away with.

$8,800,000 Surplus

A surplus on ordinary account in the Dominion Government's operations for the fiscal year 1934-35 of $8,800,000 was predicted by Mr. Rhodes. When this is compared with the deficit account during the year 1933-34 of $24,100,000 the extent of the government's optimism can be gauged.

This does not mean, however, that Canada is to have a balanced budget this year for the ordinary account is apart from the special expenditures on relief and to meet the deficits of the Canadian National Railways which

He also requested the authorities to send word to E. C. Peterson, secretary of the Loyal Order of Moose at Hoquan.

LIBERAL POLICY UPON BEER, WINE IS HELD SECRET

McQuibban Shows Up Late at "Board of Strategy" Six-hour Session.

"NOTHING TO SAY."

Sinclair is Absent, But Shows Up in Whitby to Receive S. Ontario Nomination.

TORONTO, April 19 (C.P.).—Prepared to present a "united Front" at the coming Provincial general elections, Liberal and Progressive members of the Ontario Legislature and district chieftains were homeward bound to-day to whip their constituency organizations into shape for the campaign.

Led by Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, the Opposition members met here yesterday and for six hours discussed the party's problems and made plans for the election. Meagre information as to what transpired during the discussions appeared at the conclusion.

The delegates endorsed Mr. Hepburn's leadership and arranged for a meeting of Liberal candidates who will contest the election, to be held in Toronto April 24, when campaign plans will be completed. No inkling of what the beer and wine policy of the party would be was forthcoming although it was understood Mr. Hepburn will make a statement on this matter in Ottawa this week-end.

Dr. George A. McQuibban, who succeeded W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., as House Liberal leader, appeared at the meeting late yesterday afternoon. Dr. McQuibban, who opposed the Government's beer and wine bill in the Legislature in the face of party instructions to vote in favor, made no statement when proceedings were ended last night. Mr. Sinclair did not attend the Toronto session but appeared at the Whitby convention to again receive the nomination for South Ontario.

"Nothing To Say."

All attempts to have delegates divulge the liquor stand were met with the reply: "Nothing to say." It was understood, however, the policy which Mr. Hepburn said at Guelph last Saturday he would reveal shortly, called for wet and dry candidates to run as they wished in their constituencies without any interference.

Mr. Sinclair's selection as candidate again by South Ontario Liberals was heartily endorsed at the Whitby meeting. When the standing vote was called only one person voted against the former Liberal leader. He was S. G. Carnill, who during the meeting attempted to have a vote of confidence passed in the Ontario party leaders; and when the chairman placed this over until later, opposition appeared from Dr. James Farwell of Harmony.

Mr. Sinclair told his supporters he had been and still was a Liberal.

He pledged his support to the 1934 Liberal platform.

The Conservatives last night also added another candidate to their list for the coming fight at the polls. He was Dr. William J. Chapman of St. Catharines, who will contend the new riding of Lincoln, which combines St. Catharines and Lincoln West under redistribution.

PRATT'S TRIAL NEARING CLOSE IN MURDER CASE

Fate of 71-year-old Physician Expected to be in Jury's Hands Before Night.

TELLS OWN STORY.

Admits He Drank Gin With Neighbor and Miss McLean Night of Fire.

PERTH, Ont., April 19.—(CP)—Defence counsel was expected to complete its case today as the murder trial of Dr. Wilton Pratt of Smith's Falls neared its close. It is probable that Mr. Justice Patrick Kerwin will deliver his charge to the jury this afternoon, the fate of the 71-year-old physician being placed in he jury's hands before court adjourns tonight.

Dr. Pratt, charged with the murder of his 60-year-old housekeeper, Eva Elizabeth McLean who died from burns received in a fire at the Pratt home last Dec. 31, told his story of the woman's death when he took the witness stand yesterday afternoon.

He described his efforts to save the woman from the burning bedroom in his home. Unable to do so he appealed to neighbors for help. Miss McLean died in hospital a few hours after the fire and a burned mattress from the bed on which she slept is one of the court exhibits. The Crown charges she had been drugged and knocked unconscious before suffering the fatal burns.

Drinking Night of Fire

Dr. Pratt said the night of the fire he had been drinking gin with with Miss McLean and a neighbor. He was awakened by smoke while sleeping downstairs. He found Miss McLean on the floor of his bedroom but was unable to carry her from the smoke-filled room.

W. J. Doyle, barber who shaved the doctor in his home the night previous to the fire, said he left the physician as he was "just beginning to dose" and that the housekeeper was "dead drunk."

Mr. Justice Kerwin informed counsel he hoped they would conclude their addresses to the jury by noon today so he would be able to make his charge to the jury this afternoon.

During his session on the stand Dr. Pratt admitted he had taken drugs for years and admitted a bottle of powerful sedative tablets belonged to him but he could not account for one of them being missing. He said the reference in his diary to Miss McLean that he could "see her finish" meant he might have to discharge her. He said he often thought of doing so.

German Visits Abroad Limited To 3 Months

MONTREAL, April 19 (Special to The Examiner) — The Ottawa Imperial Conference has resulted in augmenting trade between Canada and Ceylon. This has been particularly noticeable in the automobile industry.

In 1932 imports of automobiles to Ceylon from Canada and the United Kingdom totalled 85½%. In 1933 these figures rose to 96%. As only a few years ago imports of British cars into Ceylon were less than 30% the increase augurs well for the success of Imperial trade and testifies to the enterprise of the Canadian business man.

Specific grounds alleged for divorce is cruelty by the mother of the dead spouse.

Chu Tse-Ching never saw the man to whom she was legally married. They were betrothed by their parents when they were children, and the man died about one month before the day set for the wedding. Parents of the man insisted upon the marriage ceremony being carried out "to solace the spirit of the dead."

RECOVER BODIES OF TWO YOUTHS LOST IN LAKE

Coroner Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, was called. He gave permission for their removal, and decided no inquest was necessary.

The party which found the bodies consisted of Rollie Miles, Tommy's cousin; George Hull, Tommy's uncle; Sherwood Giroux, Edward Newell, Victor's cousin; and Howard Lee.

A Great Relief.

"We never really stopped searching for them," Mr. Hull related. "It's a great relief to have recovered them. Rollie Miles was out on the lake Sunday looking around for signs of them when he found Tommy's cap."

The two boys broke through the treacherous ice when they left Cain Hull's home about 9 o'clock Sunday evening, December 3, after a visit. They were carrying a lantern when they set out to return to the other side of the lake where they were employed at Fred Hall's place. Although it was known that to cross the lake ice was dangerous, it is thought the boys preferred that route because it was somewhat shorter.

Funeral services for the two young men were held this afternoon at Bruce Curtis' funeral parlors, Havelock. Interment was made in the Havelock cemetery.

Rush Point

Trappers report the muskrat catch better the last few days. Some choice ones have recently been caught on North River.

Mr. Wm. Salter of South Dummer moved to the farm of Mr. F. Squires, recently vacated by Mr. Ed. Forbes. Mr. Salter will be manager of same for coming season.

Mr. Roy Scott of Norwood Creamery staff was in these parts on Thursday last, planning a cream route, including Rush Point, north of White Church, to South Lake, thence to Stoney Lake, around by Warsaw and back to Norwood.

The relief job going on at the North River Hill has been closed down owing to lack of funds.

Mr. Matthew Petherick of Stonehurst farm here, was at Claremont recently, where he traded his purebred Clydesdale stallion for a thoroughbred black Percheron.

Mr. Frank Barton has been plowing for the past week. The very heavy rains in these parts has hindered many farmers from getting on the land.

SABOTAGE.

TOKYO, April 19.—(A.P.)—Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatches said to-day that explosives placed on the track had wrecked a Japanese troop train near Hengtaohotzu, east of Harbin, Manchukuo, killing one soldier.

Chinese eastern railway officials and Japanese military leaders are worried by the increasing frequency of such wrecks in the region.

The sun again may be seen on the horizon in Greenland and will be visible until fall.

SAW LAWRENCE OF ARABIA CHANGE INTO ARAB WOMAN

Was Master in the Art of Make-Up, Says Captain Turner.

VISITED HAREM

By MAJOR CLAUDE PASCOE
(Central press Canadian Writer))

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 19—Did you ever see Lawrence of Arabia transform himself into an Arab woman? No? Well Captain Geoffrey R. Turner, now resident here, says he has.

Capt. Turner

"One evening, sitting on the veranda of my hotel," narrates Captain Turner who during the war was an acting captain in charge of headquarters mechanical transport at Bagdad, "I was quite startled to feel Lawrence's hand on my shoulder.

"'Turner'," he said in friendly tone, 'I rather like you. You're the only officer around here who hasn't tried to pump me. Would you care to come in and see me make up as an Arab woman.?'

"I accepted, naturally, and we went to Lawrence's room. The art of make-up was obviously nothing new to Lawrence. The usual cosmetics and powers were spread out on a table and there were some liquid dyes and stains, besides, that one would probably not find in the dressing rooms of a western theatre. On the wals hung a variety of Arab costumes, the rags of a beggar, the flowing robes of a poor woman, the clothing of a wife of the better class.

"Lawrence proceeded with the process of self-transformation with remarkable dispatch. First he stripped to the skin and I then realized that his whole body, through long sojourn in the east, was as brown as that of an Arab. A few deft touches at the corners of his eyes, a close shave and a little dye, rubbed in with the palm of his hand on the newly shaven chin, some color on his finger nails, and the donning of a woman's robes and headgear, and an Arab woman stood before me.

A Perfect Disguise

"Not only did Lawrence completely alter his outward appearance, but he altered his walk and general carriage. It was an Arab woman to the last detail, that I watched descend the stairway and shuffle out into the street. I never knew his mission on that occasion nor did he ever tell me. Doubtless, his life would have been the forfeit of discovery, and he went unarmed.

In Persia, Captain Turner had a curious experience when, in company with British intelligence officers, he said he visited the king, a king, incidentally, who was later to be deposed by a corporal in his own army. The visitors took along a special ration of gasoline for their royal host and the latter, overjoyed, let them into the royal harem.

"The harem" relates the captain, "consisted of a great hall with flanking suites of apartments, in the very centre of the great pile of masonry that made up the palace. No windows illuminated these quarters, they were provided with artificial light.

Magnificent Scene

"We approached them through a maze of passageways and there was great ceremonial bowing and scraping and opening and shutting of doors. Finally, we entered a huge hall. Great marble pillars stretched from the mosaic floors to the roof and between these pillars priceless drapes hung. In the centre of a hall stood a giant negro beside the largest gong I have ever seen in my life. Nothing else was in sight. As we looked curiously, and a trifle awed, around us the negro struck the gong, and the clanging made us jump.

"Then the drapes between the pillars parted and we saw that they coverel a number of cubicles or small roofs in the centre of each of which stood a beautiful woman, veiled and clad in diaphonous silks, jwels and gold and silver ornaments. The gong clashed again and each woman slowly raised her veil and stood motionless looking at us.

"It was then that I got a real shock, for these beautiful creatures were by no means all of eastern stock. Fair-haired Russians, a French lady, and others who looked like Spaniards were included among them. They made no motion and they did not speak. I looked and the gong crashed for the last time, the drapes descended again, and we were left standing in the deserted hallway.

"The history of those beautiful women would, I feel sure, fill a volume" declared Captain Turner.

"The subsequent feast, composed entirely of vegetable dishes, a dance by some twenty beautiful dancing girls, and the subsequent exchange of gifts followed. The king acepted his gifts and our senior officers received objects d'art. I received a splendid Pessian rug from the royal hands, and it still decorates the hearth of my father's home in England."

MURDER VICTIM?

LONDON, Ont., April 18 (CP) — Provincial Police to-day launched an inquiry into the mysterious deathat Strathroy General Hospital this morning of William Gibson, 65-year-old West Williams farmer, who was found on Tuesday lying in an unconscious condition at the back door of the house where he lived alone.

The elderly farmer, it is suspected, may have been the victim of robbers, as a large bruise was found on the side of his head. He had lain face downward, his body partly in a pool of water on his farm for almost two days, it is believed.

TEA INDUSTRY SAVED CEYLON

Growing Estates Cover Over Half Million Acres With Exports Totalling 700 Million Pounds Annually.

HISTORY OF PLANT.

MONTREAL, April 19 (Special to The Examiner)—Nineteen hundred and thirty-four marks the centenary of the Empire tea industry.

Tea has been known in China for so many hundreds of years that its earliest use fades into legend. It is said that nearly five thousand years ago the philosopher Shennung accidently discovered its virtues. In using the faggots of the tea plant to support a pot on his fire some leaves fell into the boiling water. The fragrance of the steeped leaves so intrigued him that he ventured to taste the brew and was filled with delight at the delicacy of its flavour. In return for this unexpected blessing which chance had bestowed upon him he spread the knowledge of this stimulating beverage.

We first hear of tea in England in the seventeenth century and many and diverse were the uses to which it was put by the uninitiated. There are records of its being served as a vegetable after the liquid had been poured off and again of its being kept in barrels like beer. It soon replaced beer and cider at the breakfast table and gradually the present day British habit developed of drinking tea at any and all hours of the day.

But it was not until the nineteenth century that tea became an Empire industry, and here again chance took a hand. In 1830 a young British officer stationed in Assam observed the tea shrub growing there wild and in great profusion. Having previously seen service in China and being familiar with the cultivaton of tea there he realized the potentialities of his discovery.

Samples of the plant were sent to the Governor-General who decided to explore the possibilities of tea planting in India. Successful experiments were made and just one hundred years ago now, after the spring monsoon in April 1934, the first Empire tea seeds were planted. From that moment a great industry arose which was to bring prosperity to millions and a teapot into every British home.

Later in the century Ceylon was rescued from ruin by the growing taste for tea. Until 1870 Ceylon was renowned for its coffee plantations on which the prosperity of the Island largely depended. About this time a blight peculiar to the coffee plant suddenly made its appearance, spreading through the plantations like a bush fire with results no less devastating. Within a year tragedy had overtaken the coffee estates and what had been a flourishing industry was entirely wiped out. The planters then turned to tea, planting the tea seed where coffee had formerly grown. Like a phoenix rising from the ashes the tea plant throve mightily and in Ceylon to-day the tea estates cover half a million acres. Empire tea exports now approximate 700 million pounds annually.

FUR TRADE STILL LIVELY INDUSTRY

Trappers in Northern Ontario Brought in Pelts Valued at $1,566,055.

TORONTO, Apr. 19 (CP)—Trappers in Northern Ontario during Ontario's past fiscal year took pelts worth $1,566,055, the report of the Legislature's standing committee on fish and game reveals. In addition fur farmers sold skins of silver and black foxes worth $570,-360.

Profit of the game and fisheries department, administered by Hon. George H. Challies, increased by $25,000 despite a decline in revenue derived from licenses and royalties. The increase was made possible through curtailment of expenditure, the report said.

It asserted a study of conditions affecting fur-bearing animals the necessity of maintaining existing closed seasons on animals if the resources of the province are to be maintained.

IN WESTERN PROVINCES

REGINA, April 13 (CP).—Dinosaurs that ruled the world 40,000,000 years ago, caveman antecedents and traces of an Asiatic civilization that inhabited the western hemisphere more than 2,000 years ago will be studied by a newly-formed Saskatchewan Archaelogical Society.

Evidence the cave man once disported himself on the western plains was uncovered near here in the shape of cooking utensils and ancient implements fashioned from stone. Skeletons of pre-historic reptiles, which belonged to the cretaceous period, have been found in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Saskatchewan's newest find, a carved stone goddess, discovered on a highway near North Battleford, is believed to offer conclusive proof an Asiatic civilization once existed in the West. Traces of a similar civilization are now being uncovered in Mexico and the southern United States.

Discovery in British Columbia of a Chinese talisman dating back to 2,000 B.C. has given rise to the theory the origin of the Canadian Indian is Asiatic. The Oriental relic was found entwined in the roots of a tree, centuries old. A message and charm, plainly legible on its sides, have been identified by Chinese authorities as dating back to 2,000 B.C.

Reports of early Chinese historians, of which there is record, tell of an expedition which set out and may have reaches these shores. Authorities believe the invasion moved westward and that evidence of art and habits of these people will be traced across the prairies.

DOCTOR SERVED HALF A CENTURY

Active in Practice, Kingston Physician 50 Years

KINGSTON, Ont. April 19 (CP) —Still actively serving his profession, Dr. Daniel Phelan of Kingston has been practicing for more than half a century.

He was born near Ottawa and graduated from Queen's University in 1877, the year Dr. George Munro Grant was appointed principal. Early professional days of Dr. Phelan brought him in close contact with work at Hotel Dieu Hospital and he did much to aid in establishment of the hospital nursing school.

In 1898 he was appointed surgeon of Kingston penitentiary and held the post a score of years. During his affiliation with the prison, Dr. Phelan served as president of the American Prison Surgeons' Association and was recognized as a prominent criminal alienist.

As a young man Dr. Phelan was an active Liberal worker in the days when Sir John A. Macdonald met his only defeat at the polls, losing in 1878 to Alexander Gunn.

In spite of the humorists there are now more Welsh and Irish than Scots in London.

CANADA'S FINANCIAL POSITION.

While Hon. Mr. Rhodes' Budget review of Canada's financial position shows that the Dominion is a considerable distance away from balancing its budget, yet the situation is distinctly brighter than it was a year ago.

The deficit for the last fiscal year was $135,200,000, a substantial one indeed, but a $22,500,000 improvement over the previous year.

Mr. Rhodes indeed was moved to refer to the fiscal year that has just been closed a year of recovery, "recovery," he added, "that is unmistakeable and of greater magnitude than many had thought possible."

The decrease in the deficit, the Minister of Finance explained, was made possible by drastic reduction in ordinary expenditure, from which $81,000,000 has been slashed off since 1931; further economies in this direction according to Mr. Rhodes, are impossible.

On ordinary account Canada's deficit for the last year was $24,100,000, as against $43,200,000 the previous year, a betterment of $19,100,000.

Capital expenditures and unemployment relief cost the country $52,200,000, while on top of this was the loss on the operation of the Canadian National Railways amounting to no less a sum than $58,900,000.

Despite these deficits, Mr. Rhodes said that for the first time since the depression began it was possible this year to review the year's operations in terms of business improvement, reviving confidence and expanding revenues.

WHY NOT TRY COURTESY?

The National Automobile Club of the United States has issued an appeal to the motorists of that country to drive courteously at all times, and the advice is well worthy of attention, not only from American drivers, but those on this side of the international line.

The same need exists here for courteous driving as in the United States.

As a contemporary puts it, there are just as many discourteous drivers here as anywhere else.

We have the road hogs. We have the reckless drivers. We have the people who never stop at cross streets, but expect everybody else to do so. We have the individuals on through streets who, although half a block away from an intersection, "honk" at the driver of a car attempting to enter from a cross street to stay where he is. We have the drivers who drive too fast across intersections and through school zones at hours when pupils are on their way to or from school. We have the horn-blowers and the fender scrapers and the whole issue of thoughtless, careless or reckless motorists who callously disregard the rights of others.

Courtesy at the wheel would eliminate all these abuses—surely it is worth trying, not only because it would make conditions more pleasant for every motorist, but because it would sharply reduce the number of automobile accidents.

Courtesy always pays, but never more generously than in motoring.

THE C.C.F. RE-ORGANIZATION.

The re-organization of the Ontario section of the C.C.F. effected in a meeting in Toronto last Saturday virtually means that the Woodsworth organization has cut itself away from the extreme socialist element and will now attempt to steer a middle course between the two old parties and the radicals.

Saturday's meeting was a victory for the moderate section of the C.C.F., but whether it will prove a profitable victory remains to be seen; already there is a movement on foot to link up the Labor left wing with the socialist party and thus launch a new political organization in the province that will be independent of the Co-operative Commonwealth forces.

The house-cleaning done by the C.C.F. leads the Border Cities Star to declare that the organization "begins to take the appearance more of a left wing Liberal group," a description likely to be rather vigorously resented by Mr. Woodsworth and his lieutenants, for the Co-operative Commonwealth leaders are firmly resolved to have "no truck or trade" with the old parties.

In fact, Mr. Woodsworth told an audience the other day that if they were dissatisfied with the present Government there would be no use to turn it out in favor of Mr. King, from whom nothing in the way of a betterment of conditions could be expected.

The C.C.F. is having a troublesome time getting under way, and while the ousting of the left wing may help it among Ontario farmers, the possible formation of a new socialist Labor party may, on the other hand, swing a section of urban support away from the Woodsworth organization.

It is likely that Conservative strategists are viewing these manoeuvres with a considerable amount of satisfaction, for if the forces opposed to a return of the present Government are split up among Liberal, C.C.F. and socialist Labor groups the chances of the administration will be considerably enhanced, at least the Government has everything to gain and nothing to lose by a split-up opposition.

THE BUDGET PROPOSALS.

It is to be imagined that most Canadians will read Hon. Mr. Rhodes' Budget proposals with a distinct sense of relief and a considerable amount of satisfaction, for in the main they represent a slight lifting of the burden of taxation.

The concession that will be most generally felt and therefore most popular will be the reduction in the sugar tax from two cents a pound to one cent; sugar being a commodity that is used in every household, the drop of a cent a pound in its price after July 1 when the new rate becomes effective will be joyously greeted.

To make up for the loss in revenue occasioned by the slash in the sugar tax the Government has placed a tax of ten per cent. on gold deposited at the Mint or exported; this levy, however, will not operate when the price of gold is such that the payment of the tax will reduce its value to less than $30 per ounce in Canadian currency.

The income tax is unchanged, and the six per cent. sales tax remains as at present.

An important change is that the special three per cent. excise tax collected on all imports will be reduced by fifty per cent. on imports that are entitled to the benefit of the British preferential tariff.

The stamp tax on postal notes for $1.00 or less will henceforth be one cent instead of three, and there are reductions in the tax on cigarette cubes and sparkling wines.

The tariff changes announced are not numerous, but they are important, and the fact their trend is distinctly downward will be noted with considerable approval. Reductions have been made in the duties on a variety of commodities, most of them used in manufacturing, and a large number of chemical commodities return to the free list.

On the whole the Government has probably gone as far in the direction of tax relief as the financial position of the country at the present time would justify—some people indeed may say that it has gone further than prudence would dictate.

DUTY OF POLICE.

Commenting upon modern ideas of law and order, the Montreal Star reads a timely lecture to parents who are in the habit of terrifying their children with threats to call in the police when they wish to correct them for misdemeanors, or to hold some dire punishment over their heads to induce them to follow out their instructions.

The common impression is that the policemen are appointed to enforce the law. This is true, in a sense, but the ideal policeman is not necessarily the one who uses the most force. Police officers are not the enemies, but the friends of the public. Their duty is to induce or persuade people to keep the law, and to assist them to refrain from becoming a menace to peace and order.

The point arose through the report that a mother in Denver called a police sergeant and requested him to send around a policeman to give her boy the "scare of his life." The sergeant regarded this as outside of his jurisdiction, and declined to assist any mother to lead her boy to believe that policemen are not friendly towards children. Commenting upon this, the Montreal paper says advisedly:

"While the police ought very properly to be a terror to evildoers, it is the height of foolishness to create an impression in a child's mind that a policeman is his natural enemy. Children should be brought up in the contrary belief. Then, when they have grown up, they will continue to regard the police as their friends, and that relationship unquestionably makes for the better preservation of law and order and renders the task of the police the easier to discharge."—Chatham Daily News.

A LENIN ON THE POTOMAC.

Complacency is, or ought to be, one of the cardinal sins. But it is not in that mood or state that we are compelled to wonder at the latest investigation launched in the United States. What we have in mind is the condition the public mind may be brought to when propaganda seeks to mobilize unrest.

In Gary, Indiana, there is a Dr. Wirt, superintendent of schools. This gentleman, some weeks ago, wrote a letter to James H. Rand, Jr., of the Rand Typewriter Company, in which he charged that President Roosevelt's "Brain Trust" was fomenting revolution, plotting the overthrow of the Government. The letter quoted members of the "Brain Trust" (unnamed) as statting that "Roosevelt is merely our Kerensky."

Now a letter of that character was obviously nonsense. Yet, made public by Rand, it has created almost a major sensation throughout the whole of the United States. Wirt, from being an obscure school superintendent, is having his name flared in the headlines, has had his letter read solemnly in Congress, is to have his charges probed by a congressional committee. Even a serious and able newspaper like the New York Herald-Tribune discusses the matter solemnly.

Thought of a revolution in Washington, with a lot of young intellectuals and college professors seizing the Government and installing a Stalin in the White House, is as fantastic as anything that could possibly be imagined. It is just hopeless. Yet here we have the spectacle of a whole nation giving serious thought to a claim of that sort, with people engaging in fierce controversies over it, and with the House of Representatives launching an inquiry into it.

We may thin ksuch a thing would be impossible over here. But would it be? History shows all too strongly that, in times of unrest and change, the public mind is an extraordinary thing, and that even among supposedly stolid Anglo-Saxon peoples it has been possible to produce fear and extraordinary folly over sheer phantoms and myths. It is a powerful argument for vigilance against the good people—and we have some of them in Canada—who see in every man with a new idea or a foreign name a potential Lenin or Danton.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now we have the Budget to give the boys in Parliament subject matter for another month's debate.

After reading many editorials on the South Oxford result, we find the only thing the commentators seem to agree upon is that Hon. Donald Sutherland was defeated.

Canada is still in the red, but not so much so as a year ago. That is Mr. Rhodes' Budget review of financial conditions boiled down to a sentence.

According to the Globe, the beer question is not the most important issue in the Ontario campaign, which may be quite true, but surely a strange opinion for the Globe to adopt.

The gasoline tax in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick has been raised to eight cents a gallon. The motorist is certainly not the forgotten man when Governments are seeking revenue.

A speaker at a church meeting in Toronto the other night said that 400,000 persons in Ontario held liquor permits. As a matter of fact, the official records show that the number of permits issued to residents of this province last year was less than one-half that figure—192,894, to be exact.

It was nearly three weeks later that Viola was carried out into the sunshine to lie on a couch in the cottage garden above the blue bay.

It was an occasion of great rejoicing, but any celebrations thereof were sternly prohibited by Spot, who maintained a dragon-like vigilance over her and allowed no one but Tiggie to approach. Tiggie, indeed, had been permitted to see her for a brief space of time each day, and was in the habit of studying the morning paper solemnly and conscientiously at her side, uttering occasional commonplace remarks upon what he read, but conversing not at all. She liked to lie and watch him, responding with a smile when he spoke, but speaking herself scarcely at all. She seemed to realize that everything was in abeyance just then except the all-important task of building up her strength.

It was very slow in returning, so slow that the progress made was almost imperceptible. It fluctuated also in a fashion that at times caused Spot very grave anxiety, though only his wife was aware of the fact. That final move of his to bring her out into the sunshine was in the nature of an experiment. She herself would have preferred to remain quiescent in the sunny little bedroom with the slanting ceiling and the white roses climbing around the lattice window where she had lain so long. But Spot, with all his kindness of heart, could be quite firm when he chose and he gently overbore her reluctance.

"No one shall bother you," he said, "but I want you to get some real sunshine into your veins. We'll take you out just as you are. Helen will rig up a bed for you, and the fewer clothes the better."

She yielded with her usual passive submission, and so when Tiggie came to her he found her lying in the garden, wraith-like in the strong sunshine, her arms, wasted almost to the bone, lying bare outside the blanket. His first delight at seeing her there was swiftly swallowed in the shock of beholding the ravages of illness in that untempered light, but his habitual slowness of expression gave him time to conceal it.

"Why, this is just what you want," he said, as he grasped her hand for a moment without lifting it. "Better than a dozen medicines."

She answered him with the pathetic smile which always seemed to be vaguely veiled in pain. "I shall do wonders now," she said in the voice which was seldom more than a whisper.

He sat down and opened out his paper as usual, but he stared at it without reading a word. The sight of her lying there in the vivid sunshine had shaken him to the depths. His own abundant strength seemed in some fashion to make it monstrous. After a time he turned his head and silently regarded her.

Her eyes were closed, but as if she felt his look upon her she opened them almost immediately, and her faint, flickering smile answered it.

Tiggie spoke, as it were in spite of himself. "Are you feeling very rotten?"

She hesitated and he saw her sigh before she finally replied, "I suppose I'm lucky to be here at all."

"Oh, don't put it like that!" said Tiggie, wondering if in discussing the matter he were seriously abusing Spot's confidence. "You know I'd do anything to get you well again, don't you?"

Her eyes still faintly smiled at him though a mist of tears rose at his words. "Yes. And I have tried," she said. "But—I sometimes think that—it's a pity. You'd be better off—really—if I didn't."

"What?" said Tiggie. He leaned forward, swept by a sudden rush of feeling beyond his control. "You really think like that? You don't, Viola? You can't."

Her lips quivered in answer. She tried to speak and failed.

Hastily he restrained himself, and once more laid his hand over hers, feeling it cold in his clasp. "It's all right. Don't be distressed!" he said. "But you mustn't say that sort of thing, dear. I can't stand it."

Her hand moved softly in his, but not seeking to escape his touch; it was more like the stirring of a frozen bird responding to its warmth. She found her voice, and though it was small and thread-like it had a certain steadfastness.

"It's—so nice of you to care," she said. "I know you do—and I didn't mean to hurt you. It's only that—now that the reason for it is over—now that there is no future to plan for—I can't feel that you ought to waste yourself over me any more. You see—I could never be a real credit to you. I should only be—a burden."

The tears were on her cheeks now. Tiggie pulled out his handkerchief and gently dabbed them away. His own emotions were deeply stirred and he had difficulty in holding them in check.

"You mustn't," he said. "You mustn't. I've never been able to tell you yet how much you are to me. I hoped you'd understand."

She made a brave effort to smile at him, seeing his distress. "Oh, I do," she said. "I do. But—it's as if we'd married on false pretenses, isn't it? And that—troubles me."

"Oh, let's talk sense!" urged Tiggie persuasively. "I'm rough and ready, and it's not easy for me to express things, but you'll get to know me better presently, and then you'll understand."

"You don't think it should be—undone again?" she suggested faintly. "Please don't be vexed at my saying it! You see, the reason for it all is gone now."

"My dear," said Tiggie quietly but forcibly, "the reason—so far as I'm concerned—is greater now than it ever was. There, I think you've talked enough. If I can't convince you now, I shall later. Just leave off worrying and take me on trust!"

"You're very kind," she said with a sigh. "I don't know why. I can't understand it at all."

"Never mind now!" said Tiggie gently. "But I'm your husband, remember, and it's my job to take care of you."

Her eyes had begun to droop wearily, but they widened a little at his words. "Don't tell anyone!" she murmured. "It's not as if—as if we need, is it?"

"No, no, not yet," said Tiggie kindly. "There's plenty of time for that. But don't forget you belong to me will you? Never forget that!"

He spoke earnestly, and again her hand stirred in his own with a small clinging motion that made his heart beat with a strange fierceness. She was so fragile, so helpless, so pathetically dependent upon him.

As her eyelids slowly closed, he pressed her hand reassuringly and released it. Then he spread his paper once more, but for a long time he sat gazing at it without reading a word. He could not fully fathom her scruples, but they moved him to the depths. Poor tired little soul, groping her way half reluctantly back into the world that had so cruelly ill-used her! What wonder that she shrank from the forming of new ties now that the actual need was past? She was like a slave escaped from bitter thraldom, fearful lest another galling yoke should be laid upon her scarred shoulders. He was certain now, beyond all doubt, that but for her extremity of need she would never have consented to link her life with his. She had been driven by stern circumstance alone, and now, had she but the means to her hand, she would fain free herself again and drift away.

He took a stealthy glance at her and saw that she was sleeping, but even in her repose the lines of sorrow and of suffering were piteously clear upon her flower-like face. She looked like a solitary child who had never known the joys of childhood, in whose heart grief alone had found place.

"She doesn't love me of course," he said to himself. "Only as a friend. It's that she's trying to tell me. But she needn't be afraid on that account P'raps I'll be able to explain that next time."

He returned to his paper with the air of one who has a duty to perform, and conscientiously read and re-read the first paragraph he saw until its meaning began at last to filter through the haze of his troubled thoughts.

He did not know that her eyes presently opened and dwelt upon him with a long, long look in which a strange veiled yearning seemed to linger, and they only closed again at length to hide the rising tears.

When the time allotted for Tiggie's visit came to an end, he left her very quietly with a smile and a touch of the hand, and joined Spot, who was signaling him from the porch.

"What do you think of her?" he asked in an anxious undertone as they turned into the cottage together.

"Think!" said Spot. "Just what I've always thought. My opinion doesn't alter from day to day."

"Well, what is it?" said Tiggie with blunt directness. "I may as well know it as not. Is she going to get well?"

"Oh, my dear fool," said Spot, "what is the use of asking me that? Am I to take refuge in the usual platitudes? She is better than she was, and I see no reason why she shouldn't. I'll tell you my opinion if you like. I think there is very little incentive left, and the vitality is low. If her husband were to come home"—he paused, and looked reflectively at Tiggie—"it might make a difference."

"Great heavens above!" ejaculated Tiggie with involuntary force. "D'you really imagine she wants that—rotter?"

Spot stroked his chin gravely. "I think she wants—someone," he said.

"Well, but——" Tiggie spoke almost inarticulately; he was quivering with a nervous agitation that seldom assailed him—"that's not possible! I tell you she isn't! If he died to-morrow—she wouldn't shed a tear."

"P'raps that's the trouble," said Spot.

Tiggie glared at him with actual ferocity for a moment or two, and then flung away. "Don't know what you mean," he said gruffly.

Spot did not attempt to explain himself. He was too fond of Tiggie to have any desire to provoke him to anger. After a pause he said quietly, "Well, I'm not the sort to waste time on idle surmisings. We're doing the best we can for her, and no one can do more. I'm hoping this sunshine treatment may make a difference. We shall see."

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Red Williams

TORONTO'S GREAT FIRE, 1904

Thirty years ago, this evening Toronto suffered the worst visitation by fire in its history. It was a windy spring night, with occasional showers, and most of the people in the small Toronto of those days were at home, for they had not got the out-of-home spirit of the present generation. Shortly after eight o'clock a fire broke out in a warehouse in the business section downtown; there was no indication that it was anything but an ordinary fire, when a sudden burst of wind sent the flying embers far and wide.

Within three hours practically the whole entire wholesale area was ablaze; the fire got completely out of control. Around 11 o'clock it looked as if the whole town was doomed. Then Providence intervened; there was a sudden change of wind; the fire was stayed, and the excited spectators went home thankful that it was no worse. And it was the money loss was over $1,000,000.

It was a bad blow for Toronto, but in the end it turned out to be a blessing in disguise. Although for years the ruins of the fire remained a witness to that April night fury, time has brought its compensation. The Royal York Hotel and the great railway terminals have replaced the ruins, and other improvements have resulted. It was a costly experience but well worth while to the Toronto of today. I wonder if any reader recalls that wild night, wild in more ways than one. The hotels did a record business, even after hours, but who cared about license laws on such a night?

THE BROWSER

"Anthony Adverse" isn't at the top of the best-seller list any more ...."The Thin Man", "Work of Art" and "Ulysses" are up there now. People are buying "Ulysses" because they have been forbidden for so long to buy it. Very few will read it straight through or understand all of its intelligibility. It is one of those books that have an influence on writers and that's all ....Joyce is like Gertrude Stein. She is thinking, incidentally, of coming back to America soon.... just for a visit....Sinclair Lewis' "Dodsworth", made into a play, is a hit on Broadway. Sidney Howard did most of the work on it....The name of Tom Lennon's novel has been changed from "Echoing Laughter" to "The Laughing Journey." He works for Variety in Hollywood ....Ernest Hemingway went to Africa and an amoeba got him. His most recent article for Esquire read as if the amoeba had written it. Hemingway has a good time....H. L. Mencken wrote 300,000 words of a "Treatise on Right and Wrong" and threw 220,000 words away.... Name three others who would do that....A book collector told the Browser that the first 5,000 copies of "Anthony Adverse" are worth $25 and the copies of the Literary Review contain Hervey Allen's article on the sources of the book are now selling for $4.50.

Writers are getting cautious.... after Hervey Allen's experience with all those people, including the Browser, who persisted in ferreting out his sources....At the conclusion of his Civil war novel, "Long Remember," not yet published, he uses up four pagers telling all the books he read before he wrote the book....Mark Hellinger is going to Iceland....How the Browser wishes HE could go to Iceland. His barber was born in Iceland and is always talking about it....Charles Nordhoff has been to Iceland. So has James Norman Hall. They are the two fellows who wrote "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Men Against the Sea." Why can't the Browser go to Iceland?....Last August, Hall set out in a small boat to go to Pitcairn island where Fletcher Christian and some of the other mutineers of the Bounty landed and made another life for themselves. He reached there and then was shipwrecked. He's writing about it in the Atlantic Monthly. He says, "I met all the ghosts of the Bounty's company."....The recent number of the Atlantic also has a lovely poem by Charlotte Kellogg. She is riding on a swift train and from beside a huddled group along the track a hand flashes out and waves to her—and she waves back, and the poem is about all the dark-huddled groups in many lands who she has loved and known. That's all, but it makes a fine poem....Her last book, "Jadwiga: Poland's Great Queen", is in its third edition. It would make a good motion picture.

The Browser is deep in A. G. MacDonnell's "Napoleon and His Marshals"....What does the Browser care about Napoleon's marshals? Not very much, and yet....and yet, this book keeps him reading while he eats, while he shaves. What a fascinating gang they were, Murat, Augereau, Bernadotte, Lannes, Berthier, Massena, Ney, Davout, Bessieres, MacDonald, Oudinot, Poniatowski, Grouchy and all the rest... jealous, cantankerous, proud, loyal, disloyal, ambitious, fumbling, shrewd, stupid, timid, bold, a Round Robin of extraordinary fellows....Murat always designing new uniforms, Augereau a street urchin grows up, Lannes falling over a precipice with his horse, having himself strapped into the skin of a newly flayed sheep and leading his troops into battle....always snarling at each other, writing complaining letters to Napoleon....Marshal Lefebre said dry to the people of a little town in Franconia: "We have come to bring you Liberty and Equality, but don't lose your heads about it; for the first one of you that moves without my leave will be shot."....And what a fabric of bloody glory Napoleon wove out of that dull and glittering stuff. (The Browser likes the book)....MacDonnell is the author of last year's delightful "England, Their England"...."All Quiet on the Western Front is still selling with total world sales of five million....Matthew ("Robber Johnson is in Malaga, riding around in a decrepit Renault....Carl Sandburg is in Honolulu, giving lectures ....The Browser talked to Maurice Hindus not long ago, and heard him talk and found him as honest, thoughtful, humorous, and wise as he expected the author of "Humanity Uprooted", "Red Bread" and "The Great Offensive" to be....It was a rich experience for

WORSE THAN OLD LICENSING LAWS

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—The more one studies the provisions of the proposed beer and wine bill, the more one can see how evil it is, it is far worse in many respects than the old licensing law, and the open bar for that law had in it a clause prohibiting the serving or giving of intoxicating drink to minors under eighteen years of age, and to give the police their due that part of the law was well enforced, but under the present bill, conditions would be set up, that would make the enforcement of such a clause impossible even if it was incorporated in the act, then again we had a black list which provided for the restraining of the habitual drunkard and which though harder to enforce helped some, but the present bill has not one redeeming feature. "It was conceived in sin, and shaped in iniquity." If allowed to live it will be an evil octopus stretching out its tenacles in every direction to destroy the prosperity, the souls and the bodies of our people. It is like an unwanted child, for its parents Premier Henry and Honorable Mr. Price have already declared their intention of handing it over as soon as safely delivered to a wet nurse to be brought up and it is evidently expected to be evil minded for they are going to give this nurse instructions to rigidly control it. I have grave doubts about the capability of this nurse to control it, for she already has one of the Conservative government youngsters of the same breed on her hands, and that she has not been very successful in her control of that one, is evidenced by the fact that the past years of its life has been full of breaches of the L.C.A. I have here a clipping from a paper where one man had ten permits, another had 200 bottles of beer in his car, another place 160 cases of liquor were found, but why enumerate, if this is control, what would it be loose? I think this bill is a challenge to every father and mother who have any care for the future environment of their children, to vote at the next provincial election only for those candidates who will promise to oppose the putting of this act into force.

The present government by their action in bringing forward such a measure at the present time, instead of finding a solution of the great problems of the unemployment of our people, the hopeless position of our young people, and a more economical system of carrying on the government of the province have forfeited every claim to our confidence, both in their ability, and their ideals. The people have asked for bread and they have offered them booze.

Thanking you,

George Leader.

Kaladar Foreman Held For Conversion

BELLEVILLE, Ont., April 18 (CP)—Everett Hughes, foreman timekeeper and paymaster on Highway No. 7 near Kaladar, was arrested Tuesday afternoon by Constable John Kelly and faces charges of conversion of funds. It is alleged, that Hughes had a man's name on the payroll since September last, as a workman on the highway, but that the man had left his employment that month, and that Hughes converted this pay to his own use. Hughes was released on bail of $5,000 to appear at Kaladar on Wednesday.

INSULL ALLOWS PHOTOS BUT IS MUM FOR MOVIES

ABOARD THE S.S. EXILONA at Milazzo, Sicily, April 18 (AP)—Samuel Insull has softened his attitude toward portographers, but he still isn't ready to talk for the films.

It was only a day or so ago that he angrily muttered "This mug is my own," when cameramen flocked about. To-day, however, as the Exilona put in at Milazzo to take on 80 tons of olive oil, he altered his stand.

He agreed to pose for photographers, but it was "nothing doing" — firmly and with finality—to all entreaties that he "say something" for movie sound apparatus.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 19 (C.P.). — Cross currents prevailed throughout the stock list to-day. Initial irregularity began with a drop in Canadian gold shares, but profit-taking later appeared in some of the tobaccos and alcohols. Trading volume expanded in the later dealings. Heaviness embraced Auburn, McIntyre, and Dome. American Telephone was off a shade, but a steady to firm tone was shown by U.S. Smelting, General Motors, Consolidated Gas, and Liquid Carbonic.

Transfers approximated 1,400,000 shares.

GROUP CLOSES WEAK IN LATE SELLING WAVE

Gold Leaders Break $2 to $6.50 in Early Trading on Toronto Market.

PARTIAL RECOVERY.

On Rumors Modification Looked For on Government's New Tax on Gold.

TORONTO, April 19.— (C.P.)— The mining section of the Toronto stock exchange was severely shaken to-day by the Federal government's new tax on gold, some of the gold leaders breaking $2 to $6.50 in the early trading. Partial recoveries were registered in the early afternoon oh rumors that some modification of the tax could be hoped for, but nevertheless, selling was heavy in the last hour and prices closed weak.

Dome took the main nose dive, hitting $32 in the first half hour, off 6.50 from yesterday's close. It recovered to $37 but failed to hold, closing at $36 for a net loss of $2.50. Hollinger closed $1.85 down, Lake Shore at $49.25, off $3.75, and net recessions of $1 to $1.25 were registered on Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves, Pioneer and Bralorne.

Some of the secondary golds flopped quite severely and although partial recoveries were made, selling persisted till the close. Base metals were steady except Noranda and Hudson Bay which are heavy gold producers. Noranda finished the day down about $1.50 net and Hudson about 40 cents.

STRIKERS ASK AID OF POLICE

Refused Relief and Would Return to Work But Are Barred by Jobless Pickets.

IN EAST WINDSOR.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 19.—(CP) —An appeal for police protection so that they may return to work was made by striking employes of the Canadian Motor Lamp Limited today. A deputation waited on James S. Allan, K.C., County Crown Attorney asking his assistance. He referred them to the East Windsor Police Commission.

According to the 11 men in the deputation they also spoke for 57 others all of whom desire to return to work but are prevented from doing so by pickets composed almost entirely of unemployed of East Windsor and led by Workers Unity League members.

Strikers made application to welfare authorities for assistance but this was denied them and they say their families are in need so they want to return to their shop places.

"Moonshine" Murder Charged To Finn

SUDBURY, Ont., April 19.—Terminating a man hunt that reads like a chapter in the annals of the Royal Northwest Mounted, Sergeant A. R. Knight of the Provincial Police arrived this afternoon in Sudbury with his man, Kusti Nisula, a Finlander whom early today in a shack by the shore of White Water Lake he arrested on a charge of murder.

With him he brought through a treacherous trail in the wilds, Jack Haplavuari, a friend of Nisula, who is held as a material witness.

Nisula, according to the police, clubbed a fellow countryman, Otto Hietarinne, to death yesterday afternoon about four o'clock, in a drunken brawl. Outside Nisula's cabin they found his body. There was a gash on the top of his forehead. Clutched in his left hand, was a strip of yellow cloth.

It had been torn, police claim, from Nisula's shirt.

Toronto Exchange Keeps Doors Open

TORONTO, April 19 (C.P.). — The management committee of the Toronto Stock Exchange met for a few minutes this morning to confer on the possible stock market effect of the new gold tax and decided to carry on as usual. There had been some talk of closing till noon to afford more time for consultation, but the idea was squelched at the meeting. There was to be a free and open market at all times, the meeting decided.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 19 (CP)—Trading was still at a standstill on the cattle division of the Toronto Livestock Market this afternoon, with a few cows the only stock selling. The run was the lightest in weeks, 20 cattle, 40 calves and 390 hogs received.

Five hundred cattle remained on the market from Wednesday and as all buyers had left the floor it appeared likely that number would have to be carried over till Monday. A few common to medium calves went at $4 to $6 cwt, while hogs had settled and were selling unchanged at $7.50 f.o.b for bacons $7.85 off truck and $8.25 off car.

No sheep or lambs were received.

HOGS IN ONTARIO

INDUSTRIALS ISSUES QUIET

Food Stocks Only Reflect Government's Budget Cut in Tax on Sugar.

LOSSES PREDOMINATE.

TORONTO, April 19 (CP)—Some of the food stocks, mainly Consolidated Bakeries, the Loblaw stocks and Canada Bread, reflected the Governments' cut in the tax on sugar in the industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day but generally the budget provisions had little effect. Brewery stocks were not cheered by the adjournment in the tax on malt and beer, which on paper at least appeared to be beneficial. Narrow losses predominated at the close.

The big volume leaders were the oils though the turnover was also heavy in some of the distillery shares and in Nickel and Loblaw 'A'. Recessions of ⅛ to ⅓ came out for Imperial, International Pete, McColl Frontenac, both issues. Other interlisted shares fell behind including Brazilian, C.P.R., and Ford 'A' but losses in these were limited to ¼-point. Nickel dropped 15 cents and Smelters 2 points.

Greater Production Seen In Rayon Yarns

MONTREAL, April 19 (C.P.).— Providing the reduction was not too great, increased consumption of cloth made from the yarn was foreseen to-day by A. O. Dawson, president of Canadian Cottons, in discussing the reduction in rates on spun rayon yarns under the British preferential tariff announced in the Budget of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance.

The difference to the trade would not be great as Canadian manufacturers would meet the prices of the British goods which would in consequence be sold at a lower rate thus increasing consumption, he stated. The new rates will encourage the importation into England of Canadian natural products, Mr. Dawson believed.

DROWNS IN CREEK.

SUDBURY, Ont., April 19.—(C.P.)—Believed to have rolled from the bank when he took a weak spell, the body of Henry Weeks, 56, was found in a creek near his home in Martland township yesterday. Provincial Constable E. W. Keen investigated and Coroner J. S. McKessock visited the scene of the drowning last evening and declared an inquest unnecessary.

TWO GRASS FIRES

Two small grass fires in various sections of the city engaged the attention of the City Fire Department yesterday afternoon. Just another of the self-evident signs that Spring is really here, and that it has at last turned the mythical corner.

NEW SPRINKLER SYSTEM

A new sprinkler system is being installed in the porcelain plant of the Canadian General Electric Company, on Townsend street.

This improvement to the factory, especially as an increased protection against possible fire loss, was one of the factors in the council's decision to lay a larger main on Townsend street, and the work is being advanced by the company. The cost of work was reported to be about $5,000.

FIRST BUTTERFLY

Bearer of Spring's glad tidings, a butterfly—the first to have found its way into The Examiner office this season, was this morning captured on Water street by Samuel Corrie.

The butterfly was of a dark color with yellow markings. After being inspected the insect gratefully spread its wings in the warm rays of the afternoon sun and fluttered away to enjoy the maximum of its brief existence.

SEE ROOSEVELT READY TO RENEW WAR DEBT TALKS

U. S. Official Observers, However, Hold Parley at Present Untimely.

BRITAIN'S FIRST MOVE.

Little Hope of Collecting Over One Thousandth of Full Sum From All Debtors.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(A P) —President Roosevelt is as ready as ever to renew war debt discussions with Great Britain, but a view today from an official quarter held little hope for such a parley or any immediate successful settlement.

Authorities here noted a demand in London for writing down Great Britain's debt, made by Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal leader, during a debate in the House of Commons.

It can be stated that Mr. Roosevelt has not altered his policy "that a debtor may at any time approach a creditor with representations concerning the debt and ask for readjustment."

Many here feel, however, that additional debt talks at present would be untimely.

Mr. Rosevelt himself announced the adjournment of last fall's extended debt meetings in Washington "until certain factors in the world situation — commercial and monetary—become more clarified." More than one official feels this time is not yet.

The president now has under consideration a message to the United States Congress on the war debt situation. It is generally expected that he will confine himself to a factual report on the existing status.

Wait on Roosevelt

Most leaders on Capitol Hill are waiting for Mr. Roosevelt to speak before talking further themselves. An indication of the tenor, however, is contained in a clause approved by the House of Representatives in passing the reciprocal tariff bill that nothing in it should be interpreted as giving the executive power to cancel debts in negotiating the trade agreements.

In less than two months—June 15—debt installments totalling $174,647,000 are due. Great Britain owes $85,670,765 of this total.

Treasury officials feel certain of collecting only about one-thousandth of the full sum due from all debtors.

Finland's June 15 installment is $166,538. Finland is the only debtor nation which has paid in full every time and officials look for her to repeat.

That leaves $174,480,000 in the doubtful category. Responsible authorities expect at best only a few million in token payments.

The British budget omission of debt payments or receipts caused no surprise. In fact President Roosevelt's budget message to Congress last January counted on no debt receipts either in the fiscal current year or the next.

various charitable institutions of the city, not forgetting half a dozen to the House of Refuge at Lakefield.

The prize-winners and their awards are as follows: 1st, Mrs. L. Eastwood of 172 Antrim street (lady's watch); 2nd, Mrs. J. A. Robinson of 627 Weller street (6 Community Plate salad or pastry forks); 3rd, Mrs. A. Mander of 155 Stewart street (Supreme Aluminumware bake sheet); 4th, Mrs. A. Olin of 504 McDonnel street (5 lb. tin Vitone); 5th, Mrs. John E. Gynane of 510 George street, 2 lb. tin Vitone); 6th, Mrs. R. J. Manley of 208 Rutherford avenue (1 lb. tin Egg-o Baking Powder); 7th, Mrs. Louise Jackson of 169 Edinburgh street (half-pound tin Vitone); 8th, Mrs. H. C. Spurway of 507 George street (half-pound tin Egg-o Baking Pawder).

The judges in the contest were Mrs. C. J. Ray, Miss A. Jamieson and Miss Sybil Kendall. They performed their duties in the most thorough fashion by considering in turn the outside and then the inside appearances of the entries.

They judged the outside by shape, size, relation to recipe and color of crumb, while the inside was judged by texture, lightness, moisture and flavor.

A potent factor in the judgments, and one that might well be noted by housewives, was the decision by all three ladies that fully ninety per cent. of the cakes had been baked in too hot an oven.

"Many of these lovely looking cakes were absolutely spoiled at the start by being placed in much too hot an oven" said the convenor.

The prize-winners are asked to call at The Examiner office and receive the awards.

find agreement through diplomatic exchanges.

But leaders were forced to-day to cast about for some new solution, with the French conclusion that Germany's moves have "rendered vain" all separate Franco-British negotiations.

In her new budget, Germany made provision for increased appropriations for army, navy and air forces.

The bulky British memorandum last night included a German statement of position not previously revealed. It said, in part:

"The German Government wishes to possess a defensive air force and short range machine, not including bombing planes, from the beginning of a convention, in numerical strength which would not exceed 30 per cent. of the combined air forces of Germany's neighbors of 50 per cent. of the military aircraft possessed by France, whichever figure is less."

Differ With France.

The British, seeking not only to reach some bilateral agreement with France but also to get the French and Germans together, never have agreed with France's contention that Germany is violating arms provisions of the Versailles Treaty; nor is London ready to agree that increases in the German military budget are proof that the Reich is re-arming illegally.

Germany has expressed a willingness to agree to supervision of arms, provided any regulations drawn are made to apply equally to all nations.

The Times, commenting to-day on France's charges against Germany, as contained in the note to London, held there is no proof that Germany is going beyond a reasonable measure in national defence.

The Telegraph suggested that the French note voiced a rejection of all schemes for limitation of armaments advocated by Great Britain and Italy.

This newspaper added that if it is France's last word, all powers are free to make arrangements for their own security.

King, Guelph, admitted to police that he had run down Miss Veronica Sevigny, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Louis Sevigny, while she was roller-skating here on Tuesday night. Police said he lied when first questioned, claiming that another car had struck the girl.

Miss Sevigny is at her home, where she was taken following an X-ray taken at the Brantford General Hospital yesterday The X-ray showed no fracture of the skull as had been feared at first. Her principal injuries are cuts and bruises to her head and a severely bruised left leg.

NO LOWER PRICE COMING IN BEER

Carling Brewery Head Claims Shifting of Tax Will Make No Difference.

TOTALS 19½ CENTS GAL.

LONDON, Ont., April 19 (CP)— Denial there will be a reduction in the price of beer as a result of the changes in excise duties announced in the Federal Budget was made to-day by D. Clive Betts, manager of Carling Breweries of the Brewing Corporation of Canada, operators of eight large breweries in the Dominion.

Mr. Betts said the consolidation of the tax on beer and the tax on malt plus the loss of the 15 per cent shrinkage in the manufacture and bottling of beer which has been removed by the Government would mean that the tax on the finished product will be approximately the same as it has been under the old taxes.

Previously the tax was three cents a pound on malt immediately it was extracted for brewing purposes. In addtion there was a tax of 12½ cents on every gallon of the finished product.

Under the changes, all the tax, which is 7½cents per pound, goes on the malt. The breweries must pay their tax before they sell their product. Previously they only paid part of the tax, that of 3 cents per pound on the malt, before selling. As there are approximately 2¼ pounds of malt to a gallon of beer, the new tax will amount to 17 cents per gallon. Add to this the loss of the shrinkage allowance and the tax remains at approximately 19½ cents per gallon, or the same as previously

21 New Cars Handled By Lillico Motors

Two brand new Dodge sedan automobiles slid into Peterborough shortly after midnight at the end of their 300-odd miles trip from the factory at Windsor.

Delivered to Lillico Motors on order for a local doctor and business executive, the two cars brought the total number of new automobiles handled this season by Lillico Motors to a peak of twenty-one cars.

A general pickup in business conditions throughout the province is not only reflected in the increased demand for cars of all makes, but is also evident in the great activity at the various motor manufacturing plants.

At the Chrysler Corporation plant at Windsor, of which Dodge Brothers is a division, automobiles are being turned out at the rate of 180 per day, while according to one of the officials at the plant, the present day roll is the largest in the entire history of the Corporation.

In a visit to the plant at Windsor yesterday, The Examiner saw the new air-flow Chrysler and Dodge cars in the making on the assembly line.

One of the units on the assembly line at the time, and which was turned off at the other end as a complete Chrysler air-flow coupe was stated by plant officials to be on order for Dr. H. B. Longmore of Campbellford.

FORMER CURATE WOULD SPREAD BUDDHISM HERE

One-time Canadian Curate, Alleged War Spy, Crossing Canada.

BRITISH EX-M.P.

"Amazing Success," Trebitch Lincoln Says of Preaching Here.

By A. F. ROBERTS
(Central Press Canadian Writer)

VANCOUVER, April 19. — The amazing career of Ignatius Trebitch Lincoln—one-time Anglican church curate, of Halifax and Ottawa, who became a British M.P., a German spy and finally a Buddhist monk—has entered a new phase, that of a propagandist for the ancient religion of the east.

Lincoln, now known as Abbot Chao Kung, has a forceful personality, which is far from being submerged in the placidity one might expect from a monk. When he arrived in Vancouver recently en route to Europe—where he plans to establish a monastery—he was denied admission to Canada because of his recorded anti-British activity. He appealed to Ottawa and was granted transit privileges.

It was not enough, however, for the self-assured abbot who immediately announced that he would give lectures on Buddhism in Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal en route.

"I regard Canadians as ready for Buddhism", he declared, "and while we do not proselytize, we will spread knowledge of the faith. The Canadian people represent a very good composition of two ingredients of racial character, the influence of British institutions and a blending of some of the good qualities of the Americans without going too far in the direction of purely materialistic worship.

To Hold Public Meetings

Abbot Chao Kung and his party of four nuns and five monks—most of them former citizens of central European countries—will therefore hold public meetings in the various Canadian cities through which they pass. The Canadian government has said, however, that they must leave by May 5, so their stay will be brief.

In Vancouver Lincoln admitted that he had made two visits to British Columbia under assumed names in recent years.

"I realized that the memory of my activities during The War and afterwards was too fresh in the minds of the people" he declared in explaining the assumed names. "There was still bitterness in their hearts and I knew that I would have met with difficulties just as I have now.

"I felt when I made those previous visits there was little chance of my success in entering Canada. Therefore I came under an assumed name.

"I am certain, also, that if I had adopted the same method this time, I would have escaped delay, but I felt that by this time Canadians are convinced of my sincerity and I wished to put this feeling to the test."

Cabled Prime Minister

The monk's egotistic attitude was revealed after the Canadian government had given him permission to cross the Dominion. He dispatched the following cable to Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in London:

"From British territory where I have been kindly permitted to land, I send you for the British government and British people my assurance that I am their friend, not their enemy. Please accept my sincere wishes for their welfare, prosperity and peace."

Although he declares that he has put all the past behind him, Lincoln admits that he has had an amazingly colorful career. He is now 55, tall and spare, and he says every ounce of superfluous flesh has been removed by his strict adherence to the Buddhist vegetable diet.

TREBITSCH LINCOLN

Born in Hungary of Jewish parents, he went to England as a youth and then to Canada to assist a Presbyterian mission to the Jews. Somehow, somewhere he switched faiths and emerged as an ordained curate of the Church of England. He was ordained by the Bishop of Montreal when he was 23 and preached in a tiny church in Halifax in 1902.

"In a week, Sir John," he once told an English judge when being tried for forgery, "the whole town of Halifax was talking of this extraordinary young man—me! I wish, in my heart of hearts, they hadn't done it, for it meant my downfall. It turned my heart—I mean my head."

Thence on to Ottawa

From Halifax he went to Ottawa, preaching at St. George's church with "such amazing success" (his own words) that his head was turned worse than ever.

He left Canada blazing with a new ambition and for fourteen months was curate in a Kentish village. He became naturalized and won a post as secretary to Seebohn Rowntree, a leading Liberal. He was elected to parliament from Darlington in 1906.

When the World War broke out, he was for a time censor of Hungarian letters in the post-office and was then sent to Amsterdam on a secret mission. On his return he pretended to have wormed great secrets out of the Germans and was eventually accused of endeavoring to "hold up" the British admiralty. He left hurriedly for the United States in 1916.

He was arrested in New York on the forgery charge, extradited and sentenced to three years penal servitude.

When the term was completde, he was deported to Hungary, but almost immediately made his way to the ex-kaiser's quarters at Amerongen.

"I told the British I would devote my whole life to working against England, and I am already beginning" he stated at that time.

Arrested Again

He became involved in the Kapputsch, which endeavored to overhrow the German republic government. In 1925 he benefitted by resident Hindenburg's general amnesty and skipped to China, where e is said to have been head of e anti-British propaganda.

In 1926 he was arrested in Vienna on a charge of selling forged documents to Chechoslovakian officials purporting to show that Germany and Austria were trying to stir up a revolution in that small republic. He was dismissed and disappeared, turning up next in a Buddhist monk's costume in Pekin.

During 1927 he visited the United States under the name "Dr. H. Ruh," giving lectures on Buddhism. He was entertained in Vancouver on his way back to the Orient and thoroughly fooled a large number of prominent citizens.

In 1931 came dispatches from Peiping, saying that he had become a Buddhist priest under the name Chao Kung. Twelve circular scars had been burned on his shaven head to indicate that he had been admitted to the priesthood.

"Christianity has become bankrupt and Chinese Buddhists should send missionaries to spread their doctrines abroad," he said.

Apparently this unusual man, the first foreigner to take the Buddhist vow in China, is following his own advice.

ROBB DISPUTES EXTRAVAGANCE BY GOVERNMENT

Claims Henry Regime Cut Expenditures From $46,000,000 to $35,000,000.

AT ELGIN RALLY.

Charges Nixon Double-crossed Party by Voting for Beer Bill.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 19 (C.P.). — A defence of Premier George S. Henry's Government policies, particuuarly the wine and beer angle, was before Elgin County electors to-day. Hon J. M. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health defended his Government's record when he addressed the annual meeting of the Elgin County Liberal-Conservative Association last night.

He pointed to the fact the rest of America had inaugurated sale of wine and beer for public consumption, and declared Ontario could no longer continue the present position. The Government, he said, did not intend to obscure its record by bringing in the wine and beer legislation as it had "nothing to obscure."

Dr. Robb said the liquor question could not be separated from politics as long as there were laws and regulations governing consumption and distribution of liquor. He scoffed at Opposition statements that the Government's Beer and Wine Bill had been supported in an effort to keep the question out of politics.

Double-crossed Party.

Harry Nixon, Progressive Leader, had double-crossed his party, the minister charged, when he voted in the Legislature for the Bill. Then Mr. Nixon had explained he had done so in an effort to prevent the Bill becoming an issue in the election campaign, Mr. Robb added.

Charges of extravagance on the Government's part, made by Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, were denied by Mr. Robb, who declared in the last four years ordinary expenditures, exclusive of interest charges, had been lowered from $46,000,000 annually to $35,000,000.

The present debt was $529,000,000, he said, but the Government had invested in five interest-bearing ventures, including the $185,000,000 given to finance the Hydro Commission; $58,000,000 in loans to farmers and to the housing scheme.

Mr. Robb declared the debt would be cut to $299,000,000 if all these asset swere liquidated.

BEHIND the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

THE OLD FORMULA

of making pictures 'cheap and cheerful' seems to have been scrapped in recent months by the British film producers, following the success of such pretentious pictures as 'Rome Express,' 'F. P. I.' "The Private Life of Henry the VIII' and 'Catherine the Great' in which expenditures were heavy. The latter film cost approximately $400,000, but this record has now been captured by Gaumont-British, following the completion of 'Jew Suss' at a cost of over $500,000. The picture took over seven months to make and was directed by Lothar Mendes famous German megaphone-wielder.

forty featured players appear in the cast sheet, headed by Conrad Veidt, the late Sir Gerald du Maurier, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Frank Vosper, Benita Hume, Joan Maude and Pamela Ostrer. The story has been filmed with as much secrecy as possible and no details can be learned as to the plot. It is known, however, that this is another historical costume film.

are also hard at work on 'Chu Chin Chow,' adapted from the musical extravaganza which all ex-service men tried to see on leave during its long London run at His Majesty's theatre. Some of the original stage cast are in the picture. The bandit-cave sequences have been completed on the great feast scene of this Arabian Nights story.

BRITISH INTERNATIONAL

Pictures are also filming two other costume films, 'Dubarry' and Blossom Time,' so encouraging is the reception of the costume picture. The cast for the first-named has not yet been selected, but Richard Tauber, the famous Austrian tenor, has been chosen to portray the role of Schubert in 'Blossom Time'. John Drinkwater, the eminent British dramatist has written the dialogue for Blossom Time' and Schubert's famous compositions will also be introduced as in the stage version.

TROUBLE IN

Vienna held up the filming of the exterior scenes of 'Blossom Time.' At that time, the British technicians were virtually imprisoned in the Hotel Bristol there. Wire barricades had been constructed outside the hotel, but, besides keeping out rioters, these also kept in the technicians! The Staatsopera, at which Tuber was singer, was also closed indefinitely, as were many other theatres in Vienna. The cessation of civil war activities, however, now makes the filming of 'Blossom Time' permissible.

ANOTHER ELABORATE

cinematic fantasy now in production at the Gaumont studios is 'The Tunnel' in which the credulous are expected to believe that some day Europe and America will be linked by a tunnel under the Atlantic, permitting trains to make the subterranean journey from London to New York in twenty-four hours!

steel and coal industries are booming as a result of the huge orders that come pouring in for the construction of the submarine tunnel and then world-wide terror is caused by its collapse as thousands of workers are trapped. Fire, flood and explosion set stock markets crashing in this tale of toil and stress, but success comes at the finish, with the express rushing toward New York and arriving spectacularly only twelve minutes late! Thousands of players will take part in this ambitious film and enormous sets, representing huge factory towns, great machine-shops and stretches of the tunnel under construction are now being built.

IT IS INTERESTING

to note that the first talkie made at the Gaumont studios was 'High Treason,' directed by Maurice Elvey. A great success in Canada, this film was also an imaginative visualization of the future and dealt with a tunnel under the English Channel. In that picture, there was a scene of explosion, panic and disaster in the tunnel. Maurice Elvey will direct the new picture of this infinitely more ambitious picture with a similar theme.

BEER NOT WINNER OF BOAT TUSSLES

Other Drinks Good Enough for Men in Training, Says Cambridge Authority.

LONDON, April 20 (C.P.). — It is untrue to say beer was the training drink of the victorious boat crew of Cambridge University, said a letter from an authority of the University read at a meeting in Redcar, Yorkshire, by Dr. C. C. Weeks, a temperance advocate.

When a man joined the University crew he was not allowed to exceed three glasses of beer daily, the letter said.

"During the last two years," it was added, "the crews have drunk as much lemonade and orangeade as beer. As far as I know there is no advantage in drinking beer, and I have never done so for training purposes. I find that lemonade and orangeade are good enough."

THE KIDS RIGHTS.

SEATTLE, April 19.—(C.P.)—Big kids and little, from three to 18, are getting signatures to a petition for a play-field out Magnolia Bluff way.

"You see," said Billy Connell, "we're not supposed to play in the street, and three are two vacant lots in the neighborhood.

"So we kids thought if we took a petition down to the county-city building, maybe the city would make a playfield out of them."

DR. PRATT'S FATE LIES IN HANDS OF PERTH JURY

appear the whole thing looked like an accident." He also recalled evidence to show a powerful sedative in the form of a tablet was unaccounted for and pointed to evidence of experts who said the woman "could not have undergone such burns without making an outcry unless she were drugged. If that were the case, how did she get to the door? (where she was found unconscious). It has been suggested the bed when it caught fire was caused by this woman dropping a cigarette. They want to suggest she herself caused the fire. We suggest the mattress actually was fired."

Defence Address.

"You gentlemen have to be shown that Dr. Pratt murdered his housekeeper," said Mr. Smith in addressing the jury.

"There is no doubt that the Crown has to prove a motive."

Referring to the entry in the diary of January 18, 1933, Mr. Smith said that the word "finish" in the sentence, "I can see her finish in the not too distant future," meant the finish of Miss McLean as his housekeeper, as she later left his employ. The entry of "Another problem to solve," was meant by the doctor the finding of a new housekeeper.

"Regarding motive," said Mr. Smith, "you must remember that Dr. Pratt and Eva lived 25 years together and that they must have been pretty fond of each other. There is no doubt that persons living together that long might have a quarrel. The Crown has not shown any motive. Dr. Pratt would not murder Eva McLean unless he had a big reason."

Mr. Smith pointed out that Mrs. Parker saw hypodermic needles in Dr. Pratt's room and Mr. Doyle also saw them. "There is no doubt that Dr. Pratt takes drugs and he had the means in his home."

If he had any intention of murdering Eva McLean he has had the opportunity during the past 25 years. The Crown has produced no evidence to show there was any quarrel the night before the fire. Everything was all right between them when Mr. Doyle left the evening before the fire.

Possibility of Mistake.

Referring to circumstances Mr. Smith pointed out that in circumstantial evidence there is a double possibility of mistake. The witness may be mistaken or the wrong inferences drawn from his evidence.

"What could be more possible than to find a persons false teeth in his bedroom. There is evidence that he had an oyster stew the night before the fire. There is the possibility of him having dropped his teeth.

"There is also evidence that the Crown has produced a burnt book. It was given evidence that one was found on a chair in the room. They were damaged by water and must have been on the floor in the room. We have no evidence when the book was burned. It might be three or four months ago. We have the evidence of Prof. Rogers that the book was burned. There is the possibility that the book might have been burned from an ember from the burning sheet.

"There is evidence as to a bruise on the back of Miss McLean's head. Dr. Frankish said that bruise might have been caused anywhere between 18 hours or a few minutes before death. You have heard evidence that it is slippery on that night and Eva was not in a fit condition when she went to the station."

Mr. Smith referred to the position Miss McLean's body was found. "Is there not a possibility of someone having kicked her head while going upstairs."

Referring to the bedclothing Mr. Smith pointed out the fact that the bedclothing was smouldering the day after the fire. "You have also heard the evidence that a mattress would smoulder and also that a witness picked up the mattress and bedclothing and threw them out the window. There could not have been much fire in them.

"I think it is quite possible that that mattress fire was started from a cigarette. There is the bedclothing with holes in them which corresponds to cigarette burns.

Deceased Was Drunk

"The defence has produced evidence to show that Eva was fairly drunk that night. There is evidence to show that Miss McLean was dead drung and was sitting in a kitchen chair.

"There is the possibility she struggled up the stairs and into Dr. Pratt's bedroom and lit a cigarette and fell asleep. There was no alcohol found in her stomach but the possibility is that she became ill. She might have got out of the bed in a drunken stupor and in severe pain struggled out of the burning room. There is evidence that she had the strength to move and moved to the position she was found at the head of the stairway.

"The crown has produced no scheme or plan on the part of Dr. Pratt to murder Eva McLean. His actions are consistent with his innocence.

"From the start Dr. Pratt showed genuine concern for Miss McLean. There is evidence that the blind was up and the light was on. Do you think a person going to commit a crime would leave the blind up and the light on.

No Motive Proven

"It is up to the Crown to prove that Dr. Pratt murdered Miss Eva McLean. There has been no motive proven by the Crown.

"Is there any weight to the Crown's evidence regarding a motive," said Mr. Smith.

"If you are not shown it is your duty to return a verdict of not guilty. I thing there is more than a reasonable doubt in your hands and I leave matters in your hands," concluded Mr. Smith.

Mr. Bell, in his address, discounted the evidence of Mrs. Viola Parker, who was employed at Dr. Pratt's for two weeks over a year ago that there were 30 to 40 holes in the rugs and blankets at the Pratt residence and since then there has been none.

No Denial From Doctor

"The Crown said that this man put that woman to death and you have no denial from him. I did not cross examine him, not because of his age or illness; I didn't wish to draw any admission from a man who takes drugs. At the opening of this trial I took the position that there would be no advantage taken of this man and not the slightest advantage has been taken; it's not motive, but intent," said Dr. Bell. "Motive lies sometimes locked so tight that it cannot be brought out and someimes it lies on the surface."

"You have also to consider that many a man becomes abusive and the next morning considers what he has done.

"You have to consider the points that he sat down and put on paper words to the effect that her finish was coming. Consider if all those things you have heard could all be coincidence.

"Let us look at how she died. There surely cannot be a reasonable doubt if the evidence can be believed.

How Did She Get Upstairs

"Was Doyle telling you the truth when he said he went to the kitchen and Miss McLean could not get up out of the chair? Well, how did she get upstairs?" said Mr. Bell.

"It has been suggested that some one ran upstairs and in doing so kicked Miss McLean on the head. There is evidence that the bruise was caused by a heavy blow of some kind. If she had sustained an injury while she was out, would she not have said something about it?

"Does the evidence not suggest to you that the woman was got upstairs and the accused fired the bed? His teeth were found there; is that no indication that he was there that night? Matches were found there. It would appear that the whole thing looked like an accident."

Referring to the position of the body at the head of the stairs, Mr. Bell said, who else was there to get her to the head of the stairs besides Dr. Pratt.

"There is evidence as to the one tablet missing from the hyocene bottle.

"The accused said yesterday that he might have taken it himself, but yet there was morphine and other drugs which were not as powerful as the hyocene still in the room.

"It has been said that the woman could not have undergone such painful burns without uttering an outcry unless she were drugged. If that was the case how did she get to the door?

Coming To From Drug?

"By what she said while on the way to the hospital is evidence as to her coming from under such a powerful drugs, Dr. Frankish told us.

"Consider, too, the suggestion in her trance. 'I shouldnt' have done it.'

"The undertaker heard her cursing and got enough to confirm what she said while in the hospital. Whom was she cursing and view that, and consider to what conclusion you are driven. It has been suggested that the bed when it caught fire was caused by this woman dropping a cigarette. They want to suggest that she herself caused the fire."

Mr. Bell pointed out several occasions on which Miss McLean had liquor and that when Dr. Frankish made his examination of the stomach there was no evidence of alcohol. What does that suggest to you?

Mr. Bell discounted the evidence that the mattress and quilts smouldered all day Sunday while there was a sleet storm in progress.

Alcohol Used on Mattress?

"We suggest that the mattress was actually fired with some highly inflammable substance such as alcohol and if not with alcohol some other highly inflammable liquid as there were a lot of them about the house."

Mr. Bell referred to the fact that Dr. Pratt gave away some books for safe-keeping when he returned from the hospital and put out of the way other things.

Mr. Bell called attention to two or three things said by accused when he took the stand in his own defence yesterday.

"What does it suggest to you when there has been evidence that mattresses which had no alcohol on them did not burn so profusely as one which did."

As the crown counsel neared the end of his address Dr. Pratt leaned forward in his chair with his arms resting on his knees. His eyes were closed. He seemed in deep thought.

Mr. Bell concluded his address shortly after 11 o'clock.

TRADING STARTS SURE SHAKE-UPS FOR MAJOR PRO HOCKEY CIRCLES

Howie Morenz Talked of For Other Prominent Players Discussed as Due for Move to Fresh Teams. Change of Uniform While

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 19 (C.P.) — When the hockey trade winds of spring carry the news that Montreal Canadiens do not shudder and otherwise express repugnance at talk of trading Howie Morenz, you begin to realize that plenty of business may be done over National League counters before next fall. Already a few money-tills are open.

Any trade involving Morenz, who is as much a part of the Flying Frenchmen as Babe Ruth is of the baseballing New York Yankees, would naturally overshadow all other deals. Chicago Black Hawks want the aging comet and, if they will pay, perhaps Howie will finish his career with the Hawks. His entire career of 12 seasons has been spent with Canadiens.

Two or three years ago Dandurand, managing director of Canadiens, laughed at offers of $50,000 for the great Morenz. But the Stratford Streak is older and nearer the end of his trail now. The Hawks may get him for Mush March, a pint-sized winger and some cash.

Meanwhile there may be two Patricks on the ivory highways—Lester seeking talent for his New York Rangers, Frank for Boston Bruins. Both clubs require strengthening and the indications are becoming clearer that Frank Patrick, managing director of the N.H.L., will resign his job and succeed Art Ross as manager of the Bruins.

If Frank takes over he will find himself with Tiny Thompson, Eddie Shore, Marty Barry, Dit Clapper and Nels Stewart forming the framework of a team that needs plenty of padding. The Bruins finished at the bottom of the United States section standing last season because there was no wallop when the first string men were off the ice—and very little at anytime when Shore was serving a 16-game penalty.

In New York, Brother Lester was quoted as saying Ching Johnson, Frank Boucher and Bill Cook had very little more good hockey left—"but where am I going to find players as good?" Most critics believe the elder Cook will not start another season. But they don't see, either, where Lester is going to improve on Johnson and Boucher all of a sudden.

Anyway Lester is looking over the amateur field carefully. There is talk he will replace Andy Aitkenhead in goal and that several forwards, including Ossie Asmundson, will be re placed. Duke Dutkowski and Albert (Battleship) Leduc, defencemen, are unlikely to be with the 1934-35 Rangers.

Perhaps Conny Smythe will spring the real surprises in the trade marts, but the Toronto Maple Leaf boss has said very little about his intentions. It is considered likely however, that Alex Levinsky, major league hockey's only Jewish defenceman, will be traded. New York and Chicago clubs are said to be interested in Mine Boy as a gate attraction.

Harold Cotton, Charlie Sands, Bill Thoms and the veteran Happy Day are others who may not be with the Leafs. Day finished a good season in smashing style in the league play-offs against Detroit Red Wings and if he wants to start another season it is believed the Leafs will want him too. Levinsky's place would be filled possibly by Bill Hollett, rookie who was loaned to Ottawa Senators last season or Fred Robertson, who played with Detroit Olympics in the International League.

SCATES ELECTED SOFTBALL PREXY

Brinton Carpet and Regent Theatre New Entries in Mens' League.

Fred Scates elected president of the City Softball League by acclamation at the general re-organization meeting held last night in the Duffus' Board Room. About thirty attended the session which was marked by a clearing of the decks for action in this loop. Only two teams were represented, though several others were mentioned.

Dave Leether reported for the committee to the annual O.A.S.A. convention, and the committee was thanked for its successful work. The treasurer's report followed, showing a balance on hand of $23.-80, considered satisfactory. Entries were called for next, but Brinton Carpet Company and the Regent Theatre were the only teams to respond. The Westclox representative stated his team was considering an entry but had so far run into trouble trying to raise the needed money. If this can be adjusted, the club will enter. Others mentioned but not represented were Omemee, C.G.E. and Dunlop Tire Co.

The election of officers came next. Honorary presidents named were: W. H. Taylor, Alderman Hamilton, J. J. Duffus, Isaac McNabb and Norm Lang. Fred Scates was the unanimous choice as president. Four were nominated for vice-president, Percy Harrison, Bert Deck, Pat Calladine and George Dormer, the latter being elected. Dave Leether was returned unanimously as secretary-treasurer. The executive members will be named later.

It was decided that the secretary would arrange for the grounds this year, and the executive would attend to the appointment of umpires and a caretaker. A motion was passed that all entries must be in by April 30th, accompanied by the entry fee. The secretary will write to prospective clubs inviting them to attend the next meeting, a general one, which will be held at seven-thirty o'clock in Duffus' on May 2nd. The meeting then adjourned.

INTERMEDIATE GROUP ADDED TO CHURCH SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Salvation Army Bugle Band and Lakefield United Church Are New Entries.

ANNUAL MEETING.

An intermediate section will be added to the Church Softball League this year, it was decided at a meeting of the league last night in the Y.M.C.A. A representation of twenty-eight, from ten Sunday Schools, cleaned up a great deal of business. Don Charlton was in the chair.

Two new organizations were represented, the Salvation Army Bugle Band, considering an entry in one of the younger sections, and the Lakefield United Church, which will enter a junior team. Dave Leether of the O.A.S.A. addressed the gathering on affiliating with the Ontario body and having a picked team from the junior section represent Peterborough in junior O.A.S.A. playdowns. The only objection found was the financial obligation attached to long trips. The matter was left over till a later date.

Harold Rehill, last year's chairman, outlined the past season's activities in which seventeen teams took part. Don Charlton gave the financial report, showing a balance of $2.32. Bill Anderson of St. James', Len Agnew of Mark Street, Reg. Kingdon of George Street, Whitty Thirnbeck of St. John's, and a Lakefied man, were elected to the executive for this year along with Don Charlton of the Boys' Work Board. The Lakefield man, to be named by the Sunday School, will look after the Lakefield end of the league. This executive will meet on Friday evening at 7.30 in the 'Y' to elect a chairman and secretary, and to draft rules and act upon suggestions made last night.

Lower Junior Limit.

They will consider lowering the junior age-limit from 21 to 20, a controversial subject. Teams entered in this section at present include St. James', George Street, All Saints' and the Lakefield United. St. Paul's, Trinity, Knox and St. John's may supply teams. Lakefield will play home games there and may take up collections to pay travelling expenses. Special arrangements will be made for refereeing their games. Junior players may play only two City League games.

An intermediate section will be formed with teams likely from Mark Street, Trinity, George Street, and St. John's, while St. Andrew's, St. Paul's, All Saints', St. James, and Knox are prospects. No City League players may play in this division. A play-off between the junior and intermediate winners will likely occur to decide a church representative to meet the South-end League champion, and Lakefield and district, or other district champions for the intermediate B title of this district.

The juveniles (under 17) and the midgets under 15) remain unchanged in rules. Knox, Trinity, George Street will have teams in both sections, St. James' and St. Paul's will have one team each and perhaps two; while Mark Street and St Luke's are expected back in. All Saints', the Salvation Army, and St. Andrew's gave notice they would have one team each for the first time. Murray Street and St. James' may be back after a year's absence. The former is undecided about which section to enter.

New Suggestions.

Suggestions made included: Players may play up to two games in a section higher than their own; and players in final games must have played two games in that section. The league is opposed to any team receiving any money for commercial advertising purposes.

Much work remains to be done, and the decisions made by the executive on Friday will be submitted to the Sunday Schools. Entries will probably be asked for by May 1st with play commencing the second Monday in May. A formal opening with members of the Ministerial Association and the Boys' Work Board present, is expected. Managers are advised to 'phone Don. Charlton, 159 Rubidge Street (2206J) for any further information and for entry forms. With nothing further to be done, the meeting adjourned.

TROTZKY WAITS WELCOME SIGN

Bags Packed But Russian Exile Finds No Haven Open.

FRIENDS TO PROTEST.

PARIS, April 19 (C.P.). — While Leon Trotzky sat on his packed trunk to-day waiting for some nation to put out the welcome hat, his Parisian friends made plans for a demonstration in protest against the order expelling him from France.

The Russian exile's secretary said that everything is packed in the cottage at Barbizon where Trotzky lived secretly and directed his "Fourth International" until local police found him. Trotzky, he said, is ready to go as soon as he receives a favorable answer to any of the appeals he has sent out for a refuge.

Police who were stationed around the villa ostensibly to protect the exile from enemies devoted most of their activity to holding back crowds of curious persons.

French sympathizers of Trotzky through their organ "Verite" summoned their forces to the Paris City Hall for manifestation to-morrow, to express indignation over the "decree laws of Fascism."

A protest also was voiced by the executive committee of the Socialist Party against the "shameful attitude of the Government in expelling Trotzky at the injunction of Venal Press."

AN APPEAL TO COMMON SENSE

Student Body at Collegiate Hear Temperance Lecture.

ALCOHOL A NARCOTIC.

An appeal to common sense was this morning made to the student body at the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, in an address on Temperance, ably delivered by Edmund P. Sewart, of the Temperance Educational Association of Toronto.

Mr. Stewart, who illustrated his address with a number of interesting lantern slides, was introduced to the students by L. J. Pettit, who pointed out the lecture, which has been delivered in practically all the collegiate and vocational schools in Ontario, had been approved by the Department of Education.

Quoting from the findings of the British Medical Research Council, Mr. Stewart declared, "the direct effect of alcohol in the nervous system, is in all stages and on all parts of the system to depress or suspend function—from first to last, alcohol is a narcotic."

Speaking more particularly of the effect of alcohol on the human brain, the speaker said, alcohol dulls judgment; gives rise to loss of self-control and lack of self-criticism.

Stressing the point, the speaker urged the dangers of using alcohol while driving an automobile. Any man even slightly under the influence of alcohol, he said, is a man whose brain is not functioning properly, and when that man was a motor car driver the result was quite frequently an accident or fatality.

"Have courage to stick to your total abstinence principles," the speaker counselled. "Never be afraid to refuse a drink. Weaker ones than you may be grateful for your example."

The problems of alcohol could not be solved by legislation, Mr. Stewart believed. It is a matter, he urged, which is up to every individual in the country.

As a contrast to alcoholic drinks, the lecturer recommended as natural healthy drinks: milk, water, orange, tomato and grape juices.

Show Boat Days Has Brilliant Costumes

Brilliant and new costumes will be the feature of the production, "Show Boat Days," at the Grand Opera House this afternoon and evening and Friday evening.

Satins and silks predominate, in warm, glittering colors. The Minstrel show, which will be a part of the entertainment, will be garbed in costumes of black and gold and mauve and white. The minstrel men carry tambourines, an up to date touch.

The chorines, who come out in shorts for the jazz numbers, will be of contrasting type when they appear in period costumes, with long skirts, pantalettes and old-style bonnets, for several song hits.

And a bride's gown of silver metallic lace almost stops the show when it appears in the finale of the piece.

The song hits are exceptionally fine, with outstanding numbers in George Coleman's "That Why Darkies Were Born," and Florence Glenny's rendition of "A Man of Mine," with chorus of forty voices.

The singing and dancing chorus makes a beauty highlight in the show.

"Dream Home" is another colorful interlude that will make its mark on the memories of the audiences.

A novelty effect is managed by an electric 'ripple' machine that sends realistic ripples over the moonlight and the water of the back drop. The closing brings a miniature Show Boat on and sends it sailing down the river by moonlight.

All in all, "Show Boat Days" is certainly going to be one of the smartest productions of its type seen here in many a moon.

FEW DOG TAGS BEING BOUGHT

Dog Catcher Will Likely be Appointed at Next Council Meeting.

Too Many Running Loose.

Despite repeated warnings that dog tags must be purchased, dog owners have been so slow in securing tags for their pets that Mayor Denne said yesterday the City Council is going to hasten the sale of tags by appointing a dog catcher.

Too many dogs have been running loose about the city, added the Mayor, and there have been many complaints.

The Council may take some special action in regard to police dogs. For sometime it has been known that some members of the Council have favored the plan adopted elsewhere of putting a special tax on police dogs. Ten dollars has been suggested as the proper tax for this breed.

Questioned on this point, His Worship said, "It will probably come up at the next Council meeting when they appoint the dog catcher. Meanwhile dogs have been tied up."

ROMANTIC HISTORY OF INSTITUTE OF THE SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH

Second Oldest Community of Nuns in Dominion of Canada.

CAME TO CANADA IN 1851.

For nearly forty years the sombre black habit and white guimpe of the Saint Joseph Sisters have been familiar to the citizens of Peterborough. They are known for their work in our schools and for their charitable ministering to the old, the ill and the orphan. But the story of their origin, a story that is shot through with romance and tragedy, is perhaps known to few. Our readers may find this story interesting, and the occasion of the opening of the beautiful Gothic chapel at Mount St. Joseph seems an appropriate time to recall it.

Dates Back to 1650

The establishment of the Order of St. Joseph dates from the year 1650, just eleven years after the founding of the Ursulines of Quebec. Associated with its early days were two great saints of the Church, St. Francis of Sales and St. Vincent de Paul, the great apostle of Charity. It's first mother-house was in the historic city of Lyons, and two of the earliest institutions were erected on the hills of St. Bruno and the Chartreuse, spots redolent of many of the great saints of the middle ages. During the French Revolution its houses were confiscated and many of its members put to death.

In those troubled days a number of the sisters were in prison, awaiting the guillotine when word came of the fall of Robespierre. Among these was a saintly nun, Mother St. John de Fontbonne, who after the Revolution became the re-foundress of the Community.

First Sisters in America

The first sisters of the Order came to America in the year 1836, and the first Mother-house was established in the year 1847 in Philadelphia, which was the first capital of the United States. Four years later Count de Charbonell, second Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto, invited the sisters to come to Canada, in October, 1851. The pioneer band of four was singularly cosmopolitan; for one was French, one German, one Irish and the other an American, a convert to the faith, born in New Jersey.

The first of these to pass away was Sister Alphonsus Margery, the convert, who died in Hamilton in the year 1855, and was buried under St. Mary's Cathedral in that city. One of the first Separate schools in Toronto was named after her, on account of her zeal for education.

The next to die was Mother Delphine, the superioress, who after years of heroic labors and sacrifices, passed away at the age of forty-two and in the twenty-seventh year of her religious life. Mother Delphine, whose name in the world was Mlle Marie Antoinette Fontbonne, was a niece of Rev. Mother St. John Fontbonne, the first superior in France after the Revolution. She left as a legacy to the Mother House in Toronto, the rosary with which her aunt had consoled herself that awful night in the prison hour of Saint Didier when she expected to be led to the guillotine in the morning.

The next to die was Mother Martha Bunning, the German sister. After establishing the Community in Hamilton in 1852, she returned to Toronto, where she died in 1868, and was buried beside Mother Delphine in St. Michael's Cemetery. This was two years before Sedan and the Franco-German war, and, no doubt in heaven the French and the German girl, who had labored together for years in the cause of sweet charity, and whose remains lie side by side, prayed alike for German Uhlan and French Chasseur, an object lesson to warring nations.

The last of the little group to pass away was Mother Bernard, the youngest of the four. Leaving her Irish home she came to America and for fifty years she labored in Toronto, where her name is a household word. She died at Sunnyside in 1901, and her remains rest in "God's acre" beside those of the other two co-foundresses of the Order in Canada.

Came to Peterborough 1890.

In the year 1883, on the invitation of Bishop Jamot, the first St. Joseph Sisters came to Cobourg from Toronto. Later in 1890, they took charge of the Convent school in Lindsay, where a temporary Mother-house was established, and also of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. They had already houses in Port Arthur and Fort William, which territory was included in the newly erected Diocese of Peterborough. That same year the Sisters in Peterborough were canonically separated from the Mother-house in Toronto, and became a distinct Diocesan Community under the jurisdiction of the late Bishop O'Connor.

In the year 1899, the present Mother-house, Mount St. Joseph, was established. The first superior was Mother Austin, who died among her beloved poor in the House of Providence in the year 1901. When she began her labors in Peterborough she had just nineteen sisters to supply the needs of the five houses of the Institute in the diocese. Now, after forty years, the community numbers more than four hundred. This is exclusive of the Diocese of Pembroke, to which the Mother-house in Peterboruogh gave twenty-seven sisters when it became a separate diocesan unit a few years ago. Owing allegiance to our local Mother-house are the various communities in this diocese, and also others in the Archdioceses of Ottawa and Edmonton and in the Dioceses of Alexandria and Sault Ste. Marie.

Wonderful indeed has been the growth of the little mustard seed, and, on the present auspicious occasion, all the many friends of the Community will wish for the Sisters an even more abundant harvest of good works in the years that are yet to be.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands of sufferers from itching, bleeding, or protruding piles have learned that quick and lasting relief can be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves nor cutting remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts lifeless. To end Piles an internal medicine should be used to stimulate the circulation, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for hundreds of patients with a marvellous record of success, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID Tablets from their own druggist with a rigid money back guarantee.

So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store say, "No matter what kind of Piles you have, one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must show you the safe, clean way to get rid of your Pile misery or money back."

Driver With Overload Forced to Split Cargo As Police Protest Plan To Tow Fish On Rope

VAUDREUIL, Que., April 19. — (C.P.).—Carrying a load of live fish 7,000 pounds in excess of the 5,000-pound weight limit set by the Quebec Government at this time of year, a truck from Chatham, Ont., bound for Montreal, was stopped here to-day. The truck and its load weighed 12,000 pounds.

The driver was told he would have to either unload his fish here or make arrangements for its transportation in three trucks. The driver told police he would rather "tie each fish on a line and drag them to Montreal behind his one truck rather than unload."

He was told this would be impractical, and he decided to charter two other trucks to complete the journey within the stipulations of the law. The difficulty was the truck in which the fish had travelled from Chatham to Vaudreuil was equipped with a tank. No such truck could be found here. The pick of the catch was left in the tank-truck, while the small fry, to the evident sorrow of the driver, divided space in the two waterless trucks for the 30-mile drive to Montreal.

PLANS TO SAVE CORNISH COAST FOR MEMORIALS

Scheme Afoot to Forever Preserve Historic Clifflands in Wild Grandeur.

ST. AGNES HEAD.

LONDON, April 19 (C.P.). — An appeal to Cornishmen and friends of Cornwall throughout the world to preserve St. Agnes Head and the surrounding clifflands and part of St. Agnes Beacon as open spaces forever is being launched.

The country, which includes some of the finest coastal scenery in North Cornwall, is in danger of being built upon extensively and haphazardly, and it has been decided, before it is too late, to purchase the threatened lands, amounting to 460 acres without the Beacon area, and hand them over, in their wild grandeur, to the National Trust.

It is intended that the lands thus saved shall be preserved as a memorial to Thomas Tonkin, the historian of Cornwall, who died in 1742 and was a member of the chief branch of a notable Cornish family; John Opie, the historical and portrait painter, who was born at St. Agnes and lies buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, London; and also to the tin miners of the district, who in the past have emigrated from Cornwall to all parts of the world.

The land to be purchased includes three famous valleys — Chapel Coombe, Trevaunance Coombe and Trevellas Coombe, four miles of rugged cliffs between them and the unenclosed portions of St. Agnes Beacon with its magnificent view across Cornwall.

CANADA MOVES INTO NEW YEAR

brought the total deficit last year up to $125,200,000.

Mounting railway revenues, however, Mr. Rhodes said, have improved the position of the Canadian National Railways and they are expected to call upon the government this year for only $48,000,000 compared with their requirements of $67,000,000 last year.

No estimate is placed on the other special expenditures for the present year. The Government has in mind, however, an extensive program of public works to increase the momentum of the recovery drive and stimulate employment and the finances for this purposes will fall under the head of special expenditures.

Few Tariff Changes.

Tariff changes are comparatively few and the 1934 session of Parliament will be the first session under the Bennett Government to pass by without substantial tariff changes. Only 72 items of the Customs Tariff are altered, and of these 24 are downward revisions, 15 reductions in the British preferential rate to give British producers a greater share in Canadian trade, 13 reductions under the intermediate and general tariffs and only three are increases. The other 17 changes are mere clarifications of wording.

Changes in the excise and sales tax are few and are all in the way of a lessening of the tax burden. The sales tax remains at six per cent., but bakers' cakes and pies are made exempt along with equipment of making maple sugar and milk albumen for use in making poultry or animal food.

Of the excise tax changes, the most notable is the cutting in half of the sugar tax which will be felt by housewives, confectioners and bakers. The tax was first imposed last year at two cents a pound, and is now down to one cent. The tax on glucose and grape sugar is reduced to one-half cent a pound.

A reduction is affected in the taxes on beer as the present 12½ cent gallonage tax on beer and the three-cent per pound tax on malt are consolidated in a single levy of 7½ cents a pound on malt. The new tax becomes effective July 1.

Boost for British Goods

A distinct step to make smooth the path of British goods into Canadian trade was taken. Mr. Rhodes announced the special excise tax of three percent of the duty paid value of all imported goods had been reduced to one and one half percent on goods of Empire origin entitled to enter under the British preferential or treaty tariff.

The change may cost the treasury between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 and in the event of a depreciation of British currency boosting the value for duty placed on British goods the advantage accorded would be great.

Another step in the advancement of Empire trade was indicated by Mr. Rhodes when he forecast orders-in-council reducing the Empire content requirement from 50 to 25 percent on a list of between 100 and 200 chemicals. The change would bring these products within the range of the British preferential tariff from which they are now excluded by the requirement that 50 percent of the material and labor going into their manufacture must be of Empire origin.

Blow to Bootleggers

Bootleggers, smugglers and other lawbreakers with an eye to modern methods of eluding the police will find an obstacle placed in their way by another provision in the tariff. This prohibits the importation of smoke screen apparatus for use on vehicles or boats. Police are understood to have recently found themselves foiled by lawbreakers who surround their boats or motor cars with cloudsof smoke and escape.

No changes are made in the income tax rates though a few alterations are made to remove existing inequalities.

Based on the improvements recently in evidence a total revenue of $360,000,000 an increase of $39,000,000 over the $324,000,000 obtained last year in anticipated. Expenditures on ordinary account will also be higher this year and are placed at $351,200,000 compared with $347,702,000 last year. The anticipated balance of $8,800,000 will be applied on capital and special expenditures.

Aimed to Ease Burden.

Commenting on the changes and general condition, Mr. Rhodes said:

While the demands upon the treasury have not permitted any general lowering of the rate of taxation, it is felt that the reductions, remissions, and adjustments already outlined will have the effect of easing the burden in those cases whree it has borne most heavily, and that the single increase in taxation will not result in undue, if any, hardship.

Thoughtful observers have with one voice expressed the opinion that the process of recovery from this unprecedentedly severe and prolonged depression would be gradual. Indeed, it may be fairly asserted that too rapid recovery would present the danger of an unhealthy reaction, and that we could be far better off in the long run if improving conditions should conform to the truth of the old adage, "Slow, but sure."

Trade Increases.

At the same time, while the improvement has been gradual, it has not only been sustained—but has progressively increased. This is evidenced by the splendid increases in both imports and exports for the month of March, which show a proportionate advance in volume of trade hitherto unprecedented.

It is generally recognized that this depression and its blighting effects have been world wide. This fact of itself has had the tendency to produce a "depression psychology," followed by what might be termed a "depression weariness." The result is that we do not so readily recognize and properly appraise the incontrovertible evidence of reviving activity which have made their appearance.

These signs of improvement are so marked as to indicate beyond question that we are on the road to recovery. May we with renewed hope, fresh courage and firm step press on towards the goal of better and happier days which lie not far ahead.

TEACHERS UNPAID ASSISTANCE SOUGHT

Dysart Township, Haliburton County, Has Financial Trouble.

LINDSAY, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Township of Dysart, in which is situated the village of Haliburton, is unable to pay the salaries of its teachers. The revenue from taxation is exhausted and Public School Inspector Brown has been requested by the township council to apply to the Department of Education for financial assistance.

The saw mill at Fenelon Falls, formerly owned by G. Isaac, has been purchased by Herbert Jones, of that village. It will resume operations at once. The machinery for the new sporting goods plant which is locating in the village arrived this week. The Toronto firm will move to the village as quickly as possible.

Small Girl Injured

Little Audrey Burke, ten-year-old daughter of Albert Burke, Lindsay, was seriously injured Tuesday night when she was run down by a cyclist. Medical examination showed that the little girl was suffering from painful injuries and nervous shock. Chief of Police Lawler has announced that he will take steps to curb reckless riding.

At a meeting of the Janetville Community Club it was decided to build a rink in the village this fall. An extension of the Hydro will be asked in order to light the arena with electricity.

CANBERRA (CP)—During his visit to the Australian Commonwealth next January Prince George will not be asked to lay corner stones or officiate at opening ceremonies, "except in very special circumstances," the committee in charge of the reception has decided.

Lakefield

The A.Y.P.A. meeting on Monday night took the form of a court whist party with five tables played. Prizes were won by Miss Odell Watson and George Stenner, and the Consolation prizes by Miss Phyllis Lake and Bernard Johnston. The committee in charge served refreshments and a social half hour was spent. The committee who had been so efficient in planning and carrying out the evening's program, was Mrs. Mendel Smith, Miss Lilian Mason, George Clappell and Joe Blewett.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon F. Northey of Toronto were in the village last week visiting friends.

Rev. W. B. Walker was in Picton last week attending the funeral of Rev. J. B. McCormack, who was Mr. Walker's immediate predecessor in the pastorate of the Lakefield Baptist church. Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. McCormack will regret to hear of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gilman were in Bobcaygeon on Tuesday last.

Mr. R. J. Crawford was in the village from Belleville on Saturday.

Miss Mildred Bailey of Peterborough was a week-end visitor at her home in the village.

Mrs. W. J. Charlton was in Toronto last week.

Mr. Gordon Porter, B.A., of Kingston, is in the village called by the serious illness of his father, J. A. Porter.

MINING HEADS REACH OTTAWA

It will definitely cut Canada from the flow of foreign money that has been coming in with increasing volume for the development of the industry that saved Canada in the darkest days of the depression.

In Manitoba some saw the gold tax as an equitable levy, but others frowned on the measure as detrimental to the mining industry. Hon. J. S. McDiarmid, Manitoba's Minister of Mines, and H. Drummond - Hay, mining executive, thought the tax reasonable.

Mr. McDiarmid said mining operations on a sound basis would be continued even though stock prices might fall. Production, he added, was the important consideration. Mr. Drummond-Hay said he thought the tax fair to well-developed properties.

Views Differ in West

Elsewhere in the West, however, this view was not shared. At Vancouver, W. W. Boultbee, secretary-treasurer of Braiorn Mines, said the tax was excessive. At Winnipeg, President J. D. Perrin of San Antonio Mines said taxation of gold mines was not constructive and added the measure came as a complete surprise to the industry.

In the West a general welcome greeted announcement of the sugar tax reduction of one cent a pound made possible by institution of the gold tax. In other parts of the country, however, sugar wholesalers said they would pass the reduction on to the consumer, but doubted if it would make much difference to sales.

Little comment was forthcoming on other features of the budgets. Bakers rejoiced over elimination of the six per cent sales tax on pies and cakes. Winery officials expected the cut from $1.50 to 75 cents in the tax on sparkling wines might increase consumption of those beverages. The United Farmers of Ontario praised guardedly the forecast of legislation to ease farm debts, but their secretary, H. H. Hannam, remarked the forecast was not sufficiently detailed to permti any comprehensive comment.

St. Andrew's Y.P.A.

MARMORA, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence). — The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Association was held in St. Andrew's Hall on Tuesday evening with a good attendance of members. Miss M. Hudgins presided, in the unavoidable absence of the president, George O'Neill. Opening devotions were led by Rev. O. W. Hollingsworth.

Maxwell Green dealt with "Current Events." Miss P. Wilson gave a reading from "Sentimental Tommy," the book by James Barrie. In Bible study the subject "Righteousness and Goodness" was taken.

A hymn contest was put on by Flora Sanderson and Edith Henry. At the close, three games were played under supervision of Miss Bernice McInroy.

St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. met at the White Hall on Tuesday evening for a business session. Reports were given of the three Lenten Missionary lectures and also of the play which met with such success in the previous week.

Full arrangements were made for the entertaining of Campbellford A.Y.P.A. on April 27th, when the latter will stages its successful minstrel show in the Town Hall.

The French Government is considering the reorganization of its air forces.

MARMORA ENJOYS FOUR-ACT COMEDY

"Nothing to Do," by St. Andrew's Men's Association, Fills Town Hall.

MARMORA, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The strong appeal which good local amateur acting makes to the playgoing public was further evidenced on Wednesday evening; Marmora Town Hall's seating accommodation being overtaxed, as St. Andrew's Men's Association presented the four act comedy, "Nothing to Do."

The part of Mr. Robins, a retired businessman, was ideally portrayed by George O'Neill. That of his partner in life was admirably taken by Mrs. Garth Sabine. In her high society parades, Mrs. Robins is influenced by Mrs. Johnson, wife of a newly-rich carpenter. In impersonating this character, Mrs. W. role of her overawed and stuttering husband was well taken by Dr. D. L. Curtis. Quite at home in her part of Maria Antony, a maiden lady of refined taste, was Mrs. F. R. Wells. In Ernie Hilldrake, a tramp (ably portrayed by Garth Sabine), Maria discovers a long lost lover and their reconciliation in a darky's milk wagon serves as a precedent for the healing of other estrangements featured in the play.

The exceedingly humorous character of Rastus Snowball, the coloured milkman, was cleverly acted by Hubert Hollingsworth. Equally clever was Nettie Thomson in her characterization of Sophie Meakins, the colored maid kept by the Robins. The dialogues and mannerisms of this couple kept the audience in great merriment..

As Deacon Sparkins, the colored preacher, Ford Woodhouse made a decided hit. Dougald Sanderson, as an officer of the law, completed a good all-round cast.

A young mens' orchestra, under direction of Herbert Heumann, played selections between the acts.

Fleetwood Man's Arm Broken Sawing Wood

FLEETWOOD, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mr. Ernest Staples was the victim of a painful accident while sawing wood at the home of his father, Mr. Archie Staples on Friday afternoon. The belt, which had come off the machine, was being replaced by Mr. Staples, when his coat was drawn in with the motion, and the large bone between the elbow and wrist was broken. A smaller bone was also broken while other bones were badly splintered. The patient was removed to Ross Hospital, Lindsay.

The accident was most untimely as Mr. Staples was engaged in syrup-making, having tapped the trees in his own maple bush and those in a neighbor's, Mr. Norton Mill's, as well.

W.M.S. HAS CHARGE OF CAVAN SERVICE

Mrs. C. M. S. Scott of Peterborough Speaker at Thank Offering Service.

CAVAN, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—On Sunday evening the service in Cavan United Church was under the auspices of the W.M.S. Mrs. Perrin, president of the W.M.S. conducted the service.

The Rev. Dr. Lang led in prayer The choir contributed music appropriate to the missionary service. Mrs. (Dr.) Scott of Peterborough, who with her husband spent sixteen years in India, gave a very interesting talk on missionary work in that country, along educational evangelistic and medical lines. A number of figures dressed to represent the different castes among the people added much to the interest of her address, particularly among the children present.

The W.M.S. thankoffering was given as well as the loose collection going towards the W.M.S. allocation.

Mr. Gordon Staples is home for the summer, having completed his year at the O.A.C., Guelph.

GEN. GRIESBACH WILL VISIT CITY

Former Commander of First Brigade to Address Annual Banquet of Rangers.

Sponsored by the Red Patch Club, a smoker and concert is to be held at the Armouries tomorrow evening, in order to give all ex-servicemen of Peterborough and district an opportunity of meeting Major General the Hon. William Griesbach, former commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Major General Griesbach who resides in Edmonton, is particularly anxious to meet the men who served under him, and also all other ex-servicemen, Lieut.-Colonel G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., told The Examiner.

He is to be guest speaker at the annual dinner of the Peterborough Rangers, and is in the city primarily for that purpose. The smoker was organized in order that Major General Griesbach may meet the ex-servicemen of this district as it is on very rare occasions that he is in this section of the Dominion.

Is not always the result of overwork.
Often it is largely due to auto-intoxication or to nerve exhaustion.

PERCY RUBIDGE.
Word has been received here of the death in Prophetstown, Ill., on April 15th, of George Percy Rubidge, at one time a star member of the Peterborough lacrosse team. The late Percy Rubidge played with the local team in the days of Lionel King, Jack McCabe and other notable players, and had a host of friends here who will learn with regret of his passing. He had lived in the United States for many years. The funeral took place at Prophetstown on Tuesday of this week.

MRS. THOMAS KERR
(Examiner Correspondence)
LIFFORD LINE, April 19.— The funeral of the late Mrs. Thomas Kerr which took place from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harvey Gray on Sunday afternoon was very largely attended. Rev. V. Walker, pastor of the Ballyduff Presbyterian Church had charge of the services at the graveside when interment was made at Janetville Presbyterian cemetery.

The late Mrs. Kerr, who was a highly respected pioneer citizen of Manvers was eighty-two years of age and has spent her later years with her daughter, Mrs. Gray at whose home she passed away on Friday. Previous to her marriage to Mr. Kerr she was Jane MacDonald and a number of years of their happy married life was spent on the farm now occupied by Robert Wright. She was a staunch Presbyterian and a Conservative in politics. She was the mother of four sons and eight daughters, John Kerr, of Toronto, Andrew of Oshawa survive their mother while Robert and George predeceased their mother some time ago. Her daughters, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. George Page, Mrs. James Strachan all of Manvers, Mrs. Gillis of Toronto, Bella of the Western Provinces, and Agnes on U.S.A. Two other daughters, Jennie and Elsie passed away some years ago.

MRS. JAMES H. JONES
Early Saturday morning, April 14th, 1934 there passed to her eternal rest one of those noble souls whose lives enrich the world, in the person of Mrs. James H. Jones of Midland.

Although afflicted for some time she bore her affliction with Christian fortitude.

All who knew Mrs. Jones testify to her gentle spirit and Christian character.

Mrs. Jones was formerly Miss Mary Amelia Switzer, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Switzer of Emily township, Ontario and all her young life until marriage was spent in Emily where she was an earnest worker in all the departments of Bethel Methodist Church, now United.

In the year 1907 she was united in marriage by Rev. Francis Johnson of Lindsay, to Mr. James Jones of Midland.

The funeral which was held from the family residence 150 sixth street, Midland, on Monday, was attended by a large circle of relatives and friends. The services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. Auld of St. Paul's United Church, Midland, of which the deceased was a member. Very comforting was the message her pastor brought to the bereaved ones, showing the wonderful Christian influence the loved one had left behind her.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother and sister are her bereaved husband and daughter, Winnifred and four sisters, Mrs. Lewis Jones of Port McNicoll; Mrs. Alvin Drain of Lakefield; Mrs. Moses Ruth, Miss Ida Switzer and two brothers, Mr. Sayward and Eugene Switzer all of Emily township. The many floral offerings bore silent sympathy for the bereaved ones.

The remains were laid to rest in Lakeview Cemetery, Midland.

Softening Rinses Best Method Of Making Oily Hair Lustrous

Katharine Hepburn

By GLADYS GLAD

The charming Katharine Hepburn, whose brilliant performance in "Little Women" endeared her to the hearts of this entire nation, has very lovely red-gold hair. Katharine takes excellent care of her tresses always. She generally uses an egg shampoo for cleansing her locks. And her hair always seems soft, fluffy and lustrous.

Soft, lustrous hair is a pleasure to behold regardless of its shade, usually. There's such a clean, fragrant freshness about it. Certainly, nothing is pretty about dank, oily hair that hangs in limp, greasy strands. Yet there are a good number of women who complain to me that they are afflicted with just such locks. They claim that their tresses become oily just a few days after shampooing. And as a result, they must resort to very frequent shampoos in order to keep their locks presentable.

As a rule, the best way to make oily hair soft and lustrous is through the use of softening rinses. There are a good many rinses of this type that can be successfully administered by an amateur at home. The beauty of them is that they are not intricate, and are well suited for the woman of limited means.

The first of these two rinses is the soda rinse. This rinse is particularly designed for use on excessively oily hair, as it helps to remove the excess oil from the hair, and makes it soft and fluffy. As is the usual procedure, before the rinse is used, the hair should be shampooed and thoroughly rinsed. Then a solution of ordinary baking soda should be prepared, two teaspoons of the soda being used to a pint of clear water. And after all the soda has dissolved, the solution should be used as the final rinse.

The second of these rinses is the winegar rinse. This rinse is primarily a softening rinse, and gives the hair gloss and luster. It is particularly beneficial for kinky, wiry hair, for it soften such hair, eliminates the wiriness and makes the hair easier to wave softly and becomingly. This rinse should consist of half a glass of cider vinegar and a pint of clear water. And the solution, of course, should be used only as the final rinse.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Exercise

Kay: Morning is an excellent time for exercising, unless you are high-strung, nervous, or in ill-health. In such a case, slow, rhythmic exercises in the evening are best.

Make-Up

V. F. T.: I think that a soft ochre shade of powder, and a dark brown shade of eyeshadow cream would blend harmoniously with your coloring.

Mouth Wash

Charlotte: An excellent mouth wash can be made by adding one-fourth of a teaspoon of borax, one-fourth of a teaspoon of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoon of peroxide to a glass of warm water.

"HAVE YOU NOTICED WHAT A BRILLIANT POLISH OLD DUTCH GIVES TO THE PORCELAIN BATHROOM FIXTURES?"

"INDEED I HAVE. AND I KNOW WHY. IT'S BECAUSE OLD DUTCH IS MADE WITH PURE 'SEISMOTITE,' THE BEST NATURAL CLEANING MATERIAL."

Old Dutch polishes as well as cleans

Because it is made with pure "seismotite," the best, natural cleaning material, Old Dutch not only gives scratchless cleaning on fine porcelain, enamel and tile surfaces, but polishes as well as cleans.

Old Dutch is economical because it does more square yards of cleaning per penny of cost. Its flaky, flat-shaped particles cover more surface, contact it completely, and do more cleaning than the chunky, gritty particles present in ordinary cleansers.

Old Dutch is ideal for all cleaning—kitchen utensils and floors, painted walls and woodwork, or windows and mirrors. It's kind to hands, doesn't clog drains, is odorless and removes odors. There is no substitute for the quality and economy of Old Dutch Cleanser.

HYPNOTISM AID TO MEDICAL MEN

Parisian Doctor Says It is Genuine Science and Can be Made Valuable.

MONTREAL, April 19 (C.P.) — Hypnotism is truly a genuine science and could be of valuable aid to the medical world, believes Dr. Raymond Papillon, Parisian scientist, who is visiting here.

Dr. Papillon has spent much time in scientific investigations and among his many subjects for study is hypnotism as practised by the Tibetan monks who, he says, are acknowledged as originators of the science. He is convinced these monks practice a really genuine science and through their efforts it spread through Russia into Europe in the early part of the 19th century.

Dr. Papillon is convinced it is quite possible for a man to hypnotize himself by holding a bright object a short distance from his eyes and gazing fixedly at it for some time. Similarly a man possession deep-set eyes is able to hypnotize people if he can cause them to concentrate on his eyes. The medical value of hypnotism lies in the fact that while a patient is under hypnotic influence his sub-conscious mind is open to suggestion and so the hypnotic is able to delve into the depths of his mind and so discover the cause of his ailments, said the doctor.

Your Health

by DR LOGAN CLENDENING

A reader asks me to discuss the subject of sciatica, its causes, symptoms, diagnosis, prognosis, and treatment.

"Sciatica" si a very general term used for any pain in the sciatica nerve. The sciatica nerve is the longest nerve in the body, arises from the spinal cord low down in the back, and proceeds down the back of the leg, breaking up into divisions which go clear to the toes.

Sciatic Nerve.

It is reasonable to expect, therefore, on account of its length, that many irritative factors could produce pain in this nerve. Indeed, it is customary in medical circles to consider sciatic pain under two divisions: (1) pain of the nerve itself, and (2) pain of the nerve due to inflammation or pressure on the nerve from disease of the structures through which it passes.

Among these latter might be dislocation of the sacro-iliac bones in the pelvis, such infammation as from appendicitis, or inflammatory disease of the female organs.

Probably the most frequent cause of pain of the nerve itself is due to infection somewhere in the body far away from the sciatic nerve itself, such as in a tooth or tonsil or gall-bladder.

The treatment of sciatica will obviously depend on the cause. In the case of dislocation of the pelvic bones, support to these by means of corsets, or pads, or casts, usually gives relief.

In few cases of the disease is it possible to give very much relief by means of drugs by mouth. In the primary form of neuritis of the sciatic nerve, removal of focal infection frequently does good. But by all odds the best treatment in the acute stage—and the treatment most often neglected—is rest in bed.

It is possible to kill the pain in the sciatic nerve by injecting anesthetic substances directly into it. A long hypodermic needle can be thrust down through the skin until it reaches the nerve: then it is pushed into the body of the nerve itself, and a solution of quinine-urea injected into the nerve. This deadens all sensations in the region of the nerve.

Besides this, the use of heat is a well established form of treatment. In the old days, the best way to do this would be to have the patient lie down on his stomach and have his wife put a piece of flannel over the place where the pain was, and with a moderately hot iron, iron over the flannel until she had produced redness and relief. Nowadays electrical treatments by means of diathermy seem to be better than this old-fashioned treatment, perhaps because they are more mysterious.

CLIFFORD'S INN WILL BE WRECKED

Ancient and Historic Pile in London to Make Way for Modern Buildings.

LONDON, April 19 (CP)—Historic centuries old buildings of Clifford's Inn(near the corner of Fetter-Lane and Fleet street are to be demolished this summer to make room for modern development.

Law students used Clifford's Inn in 1344. Judges sat in the hall to settle boundary disputes which arose after the Great Fire of London.

Buildings to be erected on the site will supply a want in the neighborhood, the owners say. Part of the property belongs to the Office of Works.

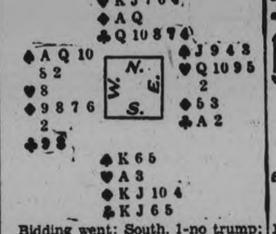
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

MATCHING WITS

Half the fun of the game comes in matching wits with opponents, as North and West did on this hand, but East was too slow witted to note that his partner had detected the only method of defeating the contract.



Bidding went: South, 1-no trump; North, 2-hearts; South, 2-no trumps; North, 3-clubs, as a two-suiter seldom plays to best advantage at no-trumps; South, 5-clubs, ending bidding.

The opening lead was the three of spades. Dummy played low and West's queen won. West led back his lone heart, looking for a ruff in case East held the ace of trumps. Without an instant's pause the declarer played his king, as is he wanted to lead trumps towards dummy.

The declarer led a low club towards dummy, before East realized the fact that his partner sought a ruff. East played low. Dummy won the trick, then another round of trumps put beyond East's power the opportunity to give his partner a heart ruff. Both West and North thought faster than East could.

East led his jack of spades through dummy's king, but the declarer held no more of that suit. The ace and queen of diamonds were led by north. Dummy's king overtook the queen, and North let go his two lowest hearts on dummy's last two diamonds.

The ace of hearts won the next trick. The declarer ruffed dummy's last spade and dummy ruffed the declarer's last heart. Then the declarer spread his cards for game, having lost only to the two aces held by East and West.

What's the Bid?

Before tomorrow think what you would do with the hand shown below when the player at your right makes an opening bid of 6-diamonds.

Neither side is vulnerable.

Some time ago the hand was given to me by Dr. Bond Stowe of New York. He sat South, and had passed. His partner held the hand shown above.

I do not often recommend two meat dishes in a day, and you may omit the sausage for luncheon if you wish. Eggs would be a good substitute, either scrambled eggs or in an omelette. The sponge cake waffles make an interesting dessert.

Today's Recipes

Sponge Cake Waffles. Three eggs, one cup sugar, one cup of cake or pastry flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, three tablespoons melted butter, one-fourth cup cold water, one-half teaspoon lemon extract. Preheat waffle iron (about 10 minutes). Beat eggs until light. Beat in sugar. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Beat into egg mixture. Beat in melted butter, cold water and lemon. Bake on hot waffle iron until steam no longer escapes at edge.

Scalloped Tomatoes—One can tomatoes, one teaspoon sugar, salt, pepper. Few drops onion juice, buttered bread crumbs. Drain off some of the tomato liquor, season with sugar, salt and pepper and onion juice. Cover bottom of baking dish with buttered crumbs, add tomatoes and sprinkle top quickly with buttered crumbs.

Lamb Chops With Mustard—Have thick loin or double rib chops weighing about one-half to three-quarters of a pound each. Cover both sides with prepared mustard, dip in melted butter, roll in bread crumbs or cracker meal; broil on both sides and serve with melted butter mixed with the juice in the broiling pan.

I'M PROUD OF MY FLOORS — THAT'S WHY I ALWAYS USE—

HAWES' FLOOR WAX

AS FAMOUS AS HAWES' LEMON OIL

Cut Your Work in Half!

It can be done—and your Floors won't suffer either!

Gone—yes, gone are a full half of the weary back-breaking hours you formerly spent waxing and polishing floors, once Poliflor gets to work on the floors of YOUR home. And—best of all—your floors will look better than they ever did before and will stay that way far longer.

To prove that you can save work, time and money in floor care, try Poliflor in your own home—make the test that thousands of women who now use Poliflor regularly have made—The Shine and Shuffle Test . . . it proves that all floor waxes are not the same—that Poliflor out-wears, out-shines, out-saves any other floor wax that any woman may now be using.

The SHINE and SHUFFLE TEST

While you still have some of your present polish left, get from your dealer a tin of Poliflor and test them both. Use Poliflor on one floor in your home where the finish must be right. Then take a floor where wear is extra hard and do this floor also with Poliflor Wax.

On your other floors use the polish you have been using. Test the results over a period of time—we leave the decision to you.

POLIFLOR IS A DIFFERENT POLISH —a genuine British Wax made from a scientific formula. It combines 10 different waxes in one, each playing its part in producing the finish—the lustre, the wearing quality, the ease of application and polishing.

TEMPERANCE TALK GIVEN AT MEETING

Interesting Program at St. James' Church X.L. Mission Circle Meet.

The X.L. Mission Circle of St. James' United Church held their Easter meeting last night at the home of Miss Zetta Wood, Lansdowne Street, with an unusually large attendance.

Miss Jean Hammond, the president, ably presided and presented a most interesting program. An Easter story read by Miss Edith Wright was the prelude to many fine numbers given by the Circle girls.

Continuing the worship period, a very impressive story "On the Way to Emmaus" was told by Muriel Moorhouse, in lieu of the usual Scripture lesson. Earnest prayer in behalf of the work was offered by Mrs. Rose. The study session included a report on temperance by Connie Wagar, and an interesting chapter from "Lady Fourth Daughter" of China, was given by Hazel Nixon, who told of the progress of education which has been going on recently.

The reception of the Easter thankoffering was an important part of the business session, and plans were made for the holding of the annual "Mother's Day" service, with a committee in charge, composed of the leader, Mrs. Wagar, the president, Jean Hammond, Aileen Rose, Mrs. Rosborough and Jessie Martin. This part of the program closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which the social hour took the form of a shower to a recently married Circle member, Mrs. William Anderson (nee Alice Scott). The introduction to this was a "lucky chair" number, which of course was won by the bride, who was wholly taken by surprise, when a lovely basket of gifts was brought into the room. Mrs. Anderson thanked the girls who had remembered her in so practical a manner in token of their friendship.

The decorations were carried out in Easter colors, mauve and yellow, and the service of delicious refreshments brought the happy evening to a conclusion.

Assisting Miss Wood, the hostess, in this service were Misses Dorcas and Hazel Nixon and Miss Eva Spurway.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Rosborough, Gladstone Avenue.

HOLY SPIRIT WITNESSES, FULFILS MAKES GOOD PROMISES OF GOD

Switzerland has 8,000 hotels, with about 62,000 employes, according to a report just issued.

"Work of Holy Spirit" is Subject of Dr. C. J. Rolls' Address.

FOUR FIGURES.

The largest midweek attendance greeted Rev. Dr. C. J. Rolls last evening in St. Paul's Church, when he discoursed on the subject: "The Work of the Holy Spirit." In his introduction, he named the symbols of the Spirit in the New Testament: when it is referred to as the spirit of truth, it is a symbol of light; as the spirit of witness, it is a symbol of a seal which attests; as a spirit of reproof or conviction, it is symbolized by a sword; as a spirit of holiness, symbolized by a dove; of life, symbolized by breath or dew; as spirit of love, it is symbolized by fire; and etc. These sixteen reference in all testify that the Holy Spirit is one who witnesses, fulfils, and makes good the promises of God.

The resume was reduced by the speaker to four figures: the wind, water, a dove, and fire. As the wind, the spirit impels, urges on; as water, it fills with unbounded zeal, so that one becomes, as it were, intoxicated; as a dove, it influences one in all his acts; and as a fire, it inspires and illumines. In these ways men are influenced by the spirit's presence and power, and the speaker was convinced of the reality of such.

Proceeding to further elucidate his position, he mentioned that fact that the dove has no gall, as other birds or animals. The simile to the holy spirit is therefore apt, for where there is no gall, there is no bitterness. In man, too much bile causes ill temper, and so no man in the power of the spirit will lose his temper. Again, as a gift of God, a rule or standard, the spirit convicts, so that the individual who come under the influence of the spirit is convicted of sin, and led to seek restoration and reconciliation. "There are some who maintain that the gift of the spirit means speaking with tongues, but I hardly think so," continued Dr. Rolls, "John mentions speaking with tongues as given for a sign, but we do not live by signs, and no where in the New Testament have we warrant for saying that speaking with tongues is a sign or proof of the possession of the Holy Spirit. Hence such a position is foolish to-day."

Continuing, he said the sabbath also was given for a sign, and that Christ did not intend that we perpetuate a sign.

The first work of the spirit is to regenerate, to bring about a new birth, producing in each a life that is like the life of God. Next, there comes growth, whereby the individual is moulded into a living witness of Christ. This means taking off the rough corners in one's life, the unifying of the personality into a thing of beauty and character. "Is man immortal?" asked the speaker. "O course he is. God created in his own image. God is essentially and inherently immortal; man is derivately. As immortality comes from God, it is imparted to man as His creature, so that man derives his immortality from his Creator. Man has therefore a soul which is immortal."

In conclusion, he pointed out that the possession of the holy spirit by the individual meant the removal of all fear, the taking away of anxiety and trouble, and the bringing of peace within. Humanity is crying out for relief; for peace within; God is ready to impart such peace when we are willing to receive it.

Rev. Dr. Barr conducted the service; Rev. Mr. Millyard gave the announcements for the remainder of the week, and Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe offered prayer. A duet, "Softly and Tenderly Jesus is Calling," was rendered by two members from George Street Choir.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

A short time ago we wrote an article on suiting the needle to the thread and the thread to the material. And in that article we promised to take up other points than those treated which were kinds of needles, when and why fine needles should be used, and word about large needles. Another point discussed simulated hemstitching which can be done with coarse needle and fine thread without drawing any threads in the textile. Today let us consider advantages and disadvantages of elongated eyes in needles.

* * * * * *

Needles with elongated eyes may be darning or embroidery needles. The reason why the eyes of these needles are thus shaped is that they can be easily threaded and will carry the heavy yarns and wools comfortably through textiles.

* * * * * *

Embroidery or crewel needles, as they are also called have the egg-shaped eyes and may be sharp or blunt. The latter are used on cross-stitch canvas or other material in which the weaves should be pushed apart rather than pierced. A sharp needle is apt to catch on the heavy strands of cross-sitch canvas, and put through them without carrying the worsted smoothly, which is an annoyance entirely relieved by the use of the blunt needle.

* * * * * *

Fine crewel needles are recommended for ordinary sewing when a person has poor eyesight, since the elongated eye maks the needle much easier to thread. It is true that whenever a needle has such an eye it is a little thicker at the eye end than a regulation sewing needle is. An expert needlewoman is sensitive to this although it is slight, but for the average worker whose eyesight is getting a trifle poor with advancing age, or for any person who has difficulty with threading needles, it is wise to try crewel needles in very fine sizes.

* * * * * *

The length of needles varies decidedly. There are very short needles which are preferred by some workers. There are long needles called milliner's needles. These are excellent for gathering, as many stitches can be taken on the needle before the thread is drawn through. Also they reach longer distances than ordinary needles. Short needles are liked when each stitch must be taken separately. The matter of suiting the needle to the hand is important.

* * * * * *

There are fur needles which have flattened sides with sharp edges to cut the skins, without tearing them as ordinary needles would have a tendency to do. Sewing fur is an operation differing from ordinary sewing, but of this we shall write another time.

WORK OF Y.M.C.A. AFFECTS EVERYONE

Do Much Better Work if Not Hampered by Financial Problems.

No well informed man or woman needs to be told that the Y.M.C.A. merits support—that it supplies a vital need in any community. Just as long as youth feels the restless urge to go "somewhere" and do "something" we face the choice of either providing the right kind of place or allowing the agencies of evil to work unchecked and take the consequences in lawlessness and in the wreckage of countless lives including perhaps some that are near and very dear to us.

Citizens are asked to picture for themselves what the Y.M.C.A. stands for, the work that it does and how much better it could do that work if it were unhampered by financial problems.

The work of the Y.M.C.A. directly or indirectly affects every person in the community whether they participate in its program or not. The parents of a family of girls may say: "The Y.M.C.A. isn't our concern but what is of more vital concern than the character and ideals of the young their daughters must meet in these days when young people are thrown together away from parental control. The training in character and high ideals in which the 'Y' is a most valuable supplementary agency and in these days is of the most vital concern to all citizens.

Mrs. M. Baird, Orillia Addresses Societies

The annual Easter thank offering meeting under the joint auspices of the Women's Missionary Society, Elizabeth Bell Auxiliary and the Alpha Mission Circle of St. Andrews United Church was held in the Sunday School auditorium on Tuesday evening.

The meeting which was presided over by Mrs. B. L. Barns, president of the W. M. S. opened with the call to worship followed by a hymn. Mrs. F. McNeely read the scripture lesson and the season of prayer was lead by Miss Burgess., Miss H. Tremaine and Mrs. B. L. Barns.

The special speaker for the occasion was Mrs. Matthew Baird of Orillia, who gave a very inspiring and instructive address taking for her subject 'The King's Highway.' Mrs. Baird outlined very clearly many of the stumbling blocks to be found on the highways of life such as Nationalism, racial prejudice, industrial conditions, etc.

During the meeting Mrs. Ford Turner sang a very appropriate solo, 'The Voice of the Wilderness' with the accompaniment played by Mr. Rice. The dedicatory offertory prayer was made by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner. The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Kerr.

So You Blondes Can't Take It, Eh?

Do not expose your body to sunshine recklessly.

Dr. Sceva Bright Laughlin

Summer's coming, and before long we'll be out on the beaches acquiring a nice coat of sun tan. So it behooves medical men to come to the fore, warning us that we musn't get too much sun. Particularly blondes, is the latest advice. It seems that blondes are different, and if they get too much sun they'll come down with a nervous breakdown, or something. At least this is the opinion of Dr. Sceva Bright Laughlin of Salem, Ore. He says that Jean Harlows and Clara Bows are susceptible to such things, and he's made a study of blondes, for years, he says. It appears that blondes haven't enough pigmentation in their skin to withstand the sun's rays whereas brunettes can take it. And Dr. Laughlin knows his sun, too. He once taught school near Jerusalem. The reason he includes Clara Bow in the blonde category is because all red-heads eventually become blondes. Clara missed being a blonde by only a generation or two. Of course, this sun stuff also applies to men.

May Start Buddhism In Canada

TREBITSCH LINCOLN

Notorious character who has led a life of adventure for many years, Trebitch Lincoln, now a Buddhist monk, is to cross Canada on his way to Europe and attempt to set up a Buddhist monastery in this country. He is accompanied by a dozen member of his new religion. The above photo shows him in his Buddhist trappings. It was taken aboard ship in Vancouver.

Expedition Seeking Source Of King Solomon's Wealth

While reports have recently been flashed around the earth of the recent discovery of the Queen of Sheba's lost city in Arabia, Count Byron de Prorck, U.S. explorer, unaware of the reported find, was fighting his was through the forbidden Abyssinian wilds in search of the fabulous lost land of Ophir, from where King Solomon is believed to have derived the great wealth that made him exceed all the kings of the earth for riches. The count and his party of scientists are combing the unexplored region between Lake Tsana and the Blue Nile. The base of operations is at Addis Ababa Abyssinian capital and seat of the Emperor Haile Selassie (above left), Lion of Judah, claiming direct descent from Menelik, son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. Besides finding the lost mines of Solomon, De Prorok's expedition expects to find valuable data of early Nile civilization and traces of prehistoric man in the spot that many scientists contend is the cradle of the human race.

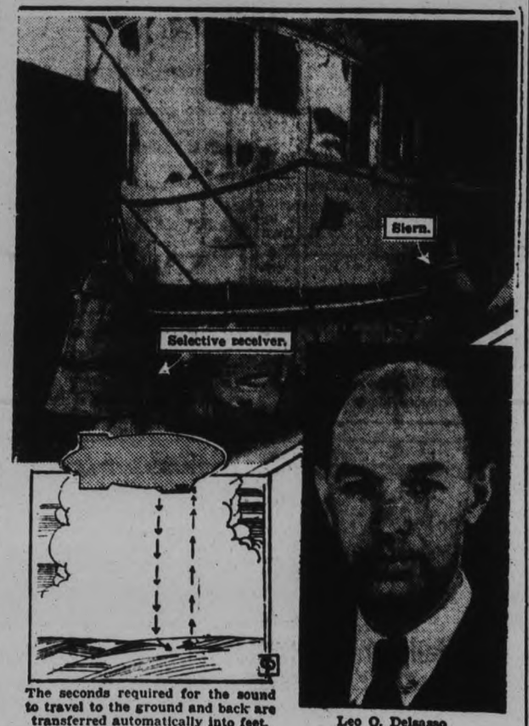
New "Sound" Recorder

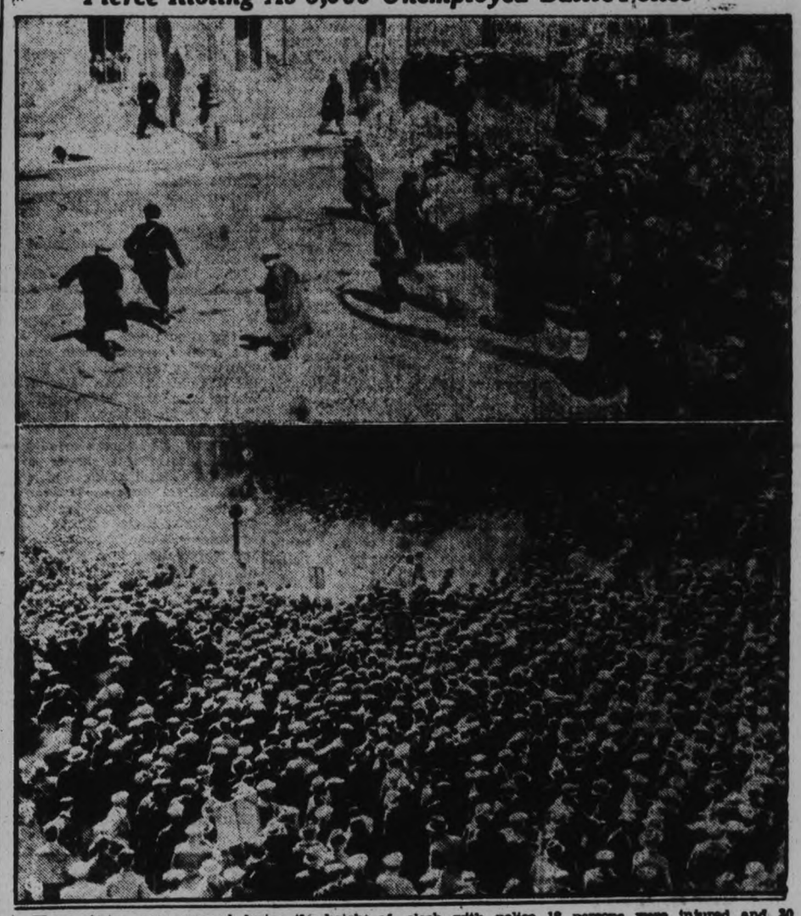


The seconds required for the sound to travel to the ground and back are transferred automatically into feet.

Leo O. Delsasso

From the sea aviation now has an altimeter that reveals instantly to the pilot his distance from land, whether it be underneath, in front of his speeding ship or off on one side. After five years of research, Leo P. Delsasso, associate in physics at the University of California, has produced an acoustic altimeter that "hears" the earth and warns whether a ship of the air is approaching too rapidly toward a possible crash. Not only that, but it tells the pilot the number of feet he is distant from looming disaster. The pilot watches a small dial mounted on an instrument board. But back of the dial, hidden from his view is a co-ordination of acoustical and mechanical principles and devices that took years to perfect. To perfect the altimeter Delsasso designed a new type of microphone. He calls it a selective receiver, in that it will only record one pitch of sound. And the "mike" disdains all the multitude of noises emitted from an airpane engine and structure excepting the lone pitch to which it is tuned. The new altimeter registers within 10 feet of absolute accuracy. "If a plane is landing 'blind' in a dense fog," said Delsasso, "pilots tell me that if the altimeter shows them they are 20 feet above the field they feel safe to cut off the motor and glide easily to a landing." Here, at last, is an instrument long awaited by aviation, one that picks out a mountain ahead and warns long in advance of its presence. A life saver!

Fierce Rioting As 6,000 Unemployed Battle Police



These photos were snapped during the height of rioting at Minneapolis, Minn., when a mob of 6,000 unemployed moved on the Minneapolis city hall, demanding continuation of the CWA (relief work) at union wages and increased relief allowances. In the clash with police 18 persons were injured and 30 jailed. Photo, top, shows a part of the crowd as police began to hurl tear gas bombs in an effort to disperse it. CHEMISTS ARE STRIVING TO MAKE ALL FOODSTUFFS IN LABORATORY

Germany Determines to Avert Starvation by Blockade.

REMAIN INDEPENDENT.

BERLIN, April 19. — Germany is striving for self-sustenance.

The reich's most famous chemists are concentrating on making every known food stuff in the laboratory in an effort to achieve complete independence of foreign imports.

Agricultural institutes are working feverishly on the replacement, wherever possible, of imported products, by home-grown ones. Where they fail, chemists are striving to discover methods of making them artificially. Amazing results already have been achieved in both fields.

Germany is well on the way to becoming wholly independent of foreign foodstuffs. German scientists believe the point has been reached where the reich never again can be starved out by a blockade.

"The production of every known organic foodstuff in the laboratory now is possible," declares Professor E. Abderhalden, famous director of the Physiological Institute of the University of the Halle. "With this great achievement, a century-old dream at last has come true."

Taste Is Flat

Innumerable experiments in which animals have been fed for long periods at a time with chemical substitutes of natural foods, proved that the nutritive value of the artificial product was in no way inferior. "The only drawback of fodder, for instance, that is made in the laboratory, is its flat taste," the noted chemist stated, adding that efforts are now being made to make it more palatable. This it is pointed out, would be especially necessary for "laboratory Ersatz," foods destined for human consumption.

But even more remarkable are the achievements in the fields of agricultural research. Many new plants, vegetables and fruits, wholly unknown to our forefathers now have been created and systematically cultivated to a high point of perfection. Large quantities already are being harvested in Germany each year.

German scientists were sent to all parts of the world. The globe was virtually combed in an effort to find new plants which, after a complicated process of crossing and grafting with other related plants, finally could be developed to a point where they would grow on German soil and thrive in the central European climate. Here, too, surprising results were attained.

Another "Burbank"

Of all the institutes engaged in this research, the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute of Agricultural Research in Muencheberg, near Berlin, without a doubt has been the most successful. Its success has been truly marvellous. The director of the institute, Professor Erwin Baur, has won for himself, the name of "Germany's Luther "Burbank." He is commonly referred to by the German newspapers as the "wizard" in this field.

Two products which he created, made him famous throughout the world with a single stroke. One was his tobacco plant which contains no nicotine and will grow in northern climates. The other was the potato which cannot be frost-bitten.

His next discovery of greatest importance to Germany was the non-poisonous lupine. After years of experimenting he finally succeeded, not only in extracting the poison from this otherwise highly nutritive plant, but in removing its bitter taste as well. The new plant grows on practically any soil, even the sandiest, and is very hardy.

Cattle Fodder

The first bag full of seeds was sold to a farm for 53,000 marks. Last fall the first harvest of this unique plant—200 tons—was brought to market. This year vast fields now uncultivated, will be producing this valuable cattle fodder, thus replacing millions of marks of imported products.

"Soon we will have completed work on the white lupine and in another year the blue lupine will be ready for distribution," Prof. Baur declares. "The blue lupine contains a very high percentage of protein. Furthermore it produces a small fruit which I am convinced soon will be as popular in Germany as the green pea or the bean. At any rate it is just as edible and nutritive.'

"Our latest achievement is a new kind of barley. It needs only to be planted once and its harvest is four to five times as great as that of the usual barley seed," the noted savant explains. "Furthermore, we all but finished with the cultivation of a new plant whose seed contains from 16 to 18 per cent. oil and is therefore well adapted to replace the soja bean.

Improving Fruit

"But this is not all," Professor Baur goes on to say. "Besides new plants we have endeavored to correct and improve old ones. For instance we now have produced a new kind of apple and pear which are immune to fungus and bacteria —a grape vince which is immune to the disastrous louse, and a tomato which will withstand frost, like our new potato.

"Then we have produced a new kind of strawberry which is a cross between the small and the large one, possessing the sweet aroma of the former and the lusciousness of the latter."

Incidentally, Professor Baur while touring South America recently, brought back with him a number of black pigs. These were crossed with a domestic German kind. The result was astonishing. These 'new' animals were found to be wholly immune to the dreaded hoof-and-mouth disease. The meat of the pig is declared to resemble in taste that of the wild boar.

Radiotelephone service from Hong Kong, China, to Shanghai by 1935 is predicted.

PIONEERS OF DISTRICT.

LINDSAY, April 19.—John C. O'Leary, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Downeyville, is to-day celebrating his 94th birthday. With four years as a nonagenarian passed in good health, Mr. O'Leary is still hale, hearty and active enough to help with the chores around the old family homestead where he resides with his married son Dennis.

John O'Leary is a son of Patrick O'Leary, the first Irish settler of that name to settle in these parts and to whose family at the present time many citizens of this district are bound in relationship. Patrick O'Leary married an Irish girl, Catherine Cuff, and coming from Port Hope settled near Downeyville along with other Irish pioneers.

The homestead on which he first settled has been kept in the O'Leary family ever since and John O'Leary still lives on the farm upon which he was born. Another portion of the old homestead is now occupied by his son John.

Recalls Early Days

Mr. O'Leary can still recall the countless hardships the men and women of his generation had to bear. The heavy work of breaking new land with slow-moving oxen, the tallow candle and inadequate agricultural tools. He has seen wonderful improvements brought about by the self-sacrifice of men like himself, who toiled mightily that a new generation might enjoy the results.

On the occasion of his 90th birthday, a family reunion was held to honor the old gentleman, and in speaking, the Rev. Father Galvin, parish priest at that time, referred to Mr. O'Leary's many excellent qualities of character and to his fidelity to his religious duties. He presented him with a Photo-blessing of Pope Pius XI.

Mr. O'Leary has always stood high in the estimation of the people of this district. He is a staunch member of St. Luke's Roman Catholic Church at Downeyville and a member of several of the church societies. At present he is in good health and friends who know him believe he will be still hale and hearty when the century mark is reached.

Relatives in the immediate family include four daughters, Mother Mechtilde, of St. Joseph's Academy, North Bay; Sister Philomena of St. Mary's Convent, Peterborough; Mrs. William Herlihey, of Lindsay and Mrs. Frank Brady, of Ops; two sons, Dennis and John, of Downeyville, and one sister, Sister Mary Ignatius, of the Good Shepherd's Convent, Toronto.

Humane Society

The regular monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Humane Society was held on Tuesday evening in the council room of the Chamber of Commerce when appreciation was expressed for assistance received from the Daughters of the Empire—Chapters 57th, Major Bennett, Otonabee and Peter Robinson. It was decided that, with the consent of the city authorities, the annual Violet Day will be held shortly. Miss Fowler of the children's department of the Public Library gave an interesting talk on her work among the children and emphasized the importance of interesting them in kindness to animals; she mentioned a list of animal story books which are available and which are being used by the children.

The convenor of the essay contest reported that several essays have been received and reminded contestants that there are just two weeks in which to forward their copies. The Inspector's report for the month of March was as follows: Horses examined, 55; humanely destroyed, 1; dogs brought to shelter, 20; humanely destroyed, 15; placed in homes, 2; claimed by owners 2; cats humanely destroyed 15; complaints investigated 30; emergency calls 4; stables inspected 2; telephone calls 150.

LONDON (CP)—An 81-year-old Norfolk woman, Mrs. Margaret Terrey, arrived at Croydon after an 18,000-mile air tour of Africa. She said it was her idea of a holiday to visit interesting points along the African air route.

Those old favourite shoes of yours may have lots of mileage in them yet

—If you keep them "Nugget"-ed. For "Nugget" works well into the leather, keeping the wet out and the sun from baking it hard. "Nugget" penetrates right into the seams and welts, protecting and weather-proofing.

Shoes that know the simple "Nugget" ritual, last far longer than the hard, dry uppers in footwear left to the mercy of the weather. They look better, too. And, when your shoes grow dusty or mud-spattered there's a bright, gleaming "Nugget" polish underneath that will come shining through at the flick of a cloth. All this for next to nothing per shine.

Ladies who wish to keep their white shoes smart will appreciate "Nugget" White Kid Cleaner.

Herd Ruins Newark Opening by Taking 12-5 Triumph Over Bears.

(By The Associated Press)

The fifty-first season of the International League was well under way to-day with prospects not only of good attendance but a brand new "grudge" rivalry which should draw a lot of fans through the turnstiles before the season ends.

In all some 33,000 fans, with fine weather as an added attraction, poured through the gates to see yesterday's four opening games. The Newark Bears, 1932 champions and leaders during the regular season of 1933, were the outstanding attraction as they clashed with the Buffalo Bisons, who won the title last season in the play-offs. About 13,000 turned out to see the Bisons come through with a nine run rally in the ninth inning as a trio of Newark pitchers "blew" sky high.

At Syracuse 10,000 spectators saw the chiefs make their debut with a 2 to 1 victory over the Montreal Royals while crowds of 5 000 saw the games at Baltimore and Albany.

It was at Albany that the big storm struck and it wound up with the umpires declaring the game forefeited to Toronto by the usual 9 to 0 score in the tenth inning. A series of Maple Leaf protests that Albany players were batting out of turn caused plenty of confusion through the game and when they went into the tenth with the score tied at 8-8 the disputes increased. Toronto scored five times in that inning; Albany got three back, then when fans began throwing cushions on the field Umpire Roy Van Grafian walked off and declared the contest forfeited.

The Syracuse Chiefs' first appearance was something of a triumph for the remains of what used to be the Jersey City Club. The veteran Fred Fussell held the Royals to five hits, fanned six and lost a shutout in his duel with Chad Kimsey only because he walked three men in the sixth.

Led by Mize, who cracked four singles and Goodman, with a homer, the Rochester Red Wings got off right by triumphing 9 to 6 over the Baltimore Orioles.

Walter Brown hurled four-hit ball for Newark in seven innings to give the Bears a 5-3 lead as they came up to the final frame. But Larocca, Duke and Aube all failed to hold the Bisons in check in the "comedy" ninth and four hits, five walks and a few other odds and ends of bad pitching gave Buffalo nine runs and the game.

Robertson Memorial Team Scores Victory Over Vancouver Province 22-19.

WINNIPEG, April 19.— Robertson Memorials, Manitoba's hopes for Dominion senior men's basketball supremacy, swept through the ranks of Vancouver Province with a devastating second half rally last night to defeat the British Columbia cagers 22-8, to even up their Western Canada final series.

The coast quintet won the opening game, 33-22, and the third and fourth game of the three-out-of-five game play-off will take place Friday and Saturday. If a fifth game is necessary it will be played Monday. The series winner will meet Montreal Nationale, Eastern champions, in the Canadian finals at Montreal.

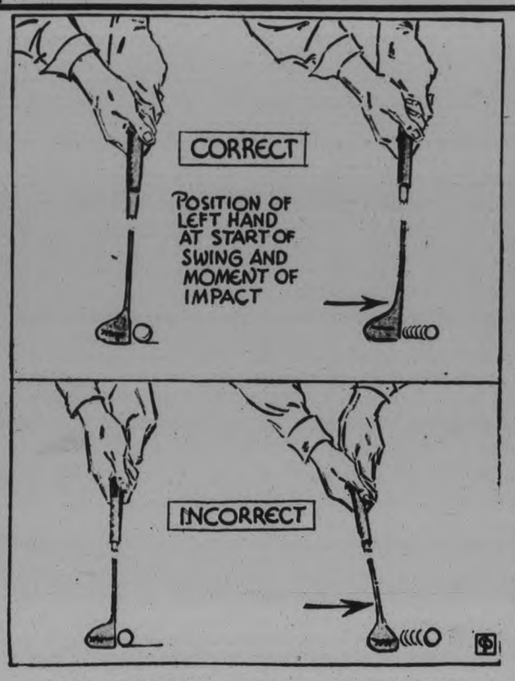
BALANCE BETWEEN ACTIONS OF HANDS VITAL—MORRISON



By ALEX J. MORRISON
Golf's Foremost Technician

The chief difference between the good and the ordinary player — what is it? This question is always uppermost in the minds over 80 per cent of those playing golf. Those outside the game also would like to have some satisfactory answer or explanation of the great difference between the two classes of players.

The average player asks: "Why can't I play as well as the other fellow? I'm just as smart as he is in other things and I have just as good if not a better physique?"

There is only one answer, although it may be expressed in a thousand different ways, that is: Application.

One of the ways this matter of application can be dealt with is in regard to the use the player makes of his arms and hands in swinging the club.

The good player, by whatever method he follows, establishes a certain amount of balance between the action of both right and left hands. The ordinary player fails to do this. Not only does he try to propel the club solely with his strong hand, but also allows the weak hand to interfere if not actually oppose this action.

This lack of harmony will not, of course, permit a smooth swing. And even the good player, when he goes 'off' his game can trace his downfall to a failure to keep both hands working in harmony. That harmony is directly dependent upon the way in which the weaker of the two hands is used.

For instance, if you play right-handed, you should give all of your attention to your left hand, your right hand will take care of itself, it needs no prompting. And to make sure that your left hand is going to function in hitting the ball you must see to it that the very first move you make in starting the club away from the ball finds this hand moving as outlined in the accompanying illustrations marked as correct. If it moves as indicated in the drawing marked "incorrect" you will find that you have little or no use of your left hand in the downswing.

RUTH AND FOXX START ANNUAL HOMER PARADE

New York Outscores Philadelphia Rivals 11-5—Two Circuit Blows for Foxx.

GIANTS-CUBS WIN AGAIN.

Hitting of Ryan Helps Champions Beat Phillies at N.Y. —Braves Even Series.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., A.P. Sports Writer.)

With the major league baseball season only two days old, the home run marathon Babe Ruth, the old clouting king, and the young pretender to the throne of swat, Jimmie Foxx, already is under way.

The first wallops by this pair of rivals as they met at Philadelphia yesterday, provided the high spots of the second day of the campaign but there were plenty of other good jobs done on the ball field, including a total of 16 homers for the day and four more five-hit pitching performances.

Foxx, the home run ruler for the past two season, connected for his first 1934 homer in the second inning of the diamond Donnybrook which saw the Yankees square the series with an 11 to 5 triumph over the Athletics. He repeated the feat in the fourth frame, again with empty bases, while the Babe bided his time until the eighth, then outdid his rival's efforts by poling a mighty clout clear across the street to a porch roof, bouncing the ball into an open window of a house. By that time Bill Dicky had settled the game by driving home six runs with a homer ,two doubles and a single.

Chick Hafy of Cincinnati and Zeke Bonura, the White Sox rookie first baseman, also fabricated two homers apiece while Chuck Klein hit his second of the year and Joe Medwick joined him at the head of the parade.

Again Lose to Cubs

Neither Hafey nor Bonura could bring victory by his feats. The Reds got only four blows off Gny Bush aside from Hafeys' pair and yielded to the Cubs, 8 to 4. Bonura's circuit crashes accounted for three of the White Sox runs against Detroit, but Goose Gosling and Gerry Walker brought home five tallies by the same method and the Tigers won, 6 to 5.

Along with the Tigers and the Cubs, the New York Giants and Washington Senators, last year's world series rivals, cropped up as twotime winners. The world champion Giants down the Phillies for the second time, 6-2.

The Senators gained their second triumph over the Red Sox by a 5-4 count.

First Shutout

Irvin (Bump) Hadley of the St. Louis Brown had the honor of pitching the first American League shutout. The Browns also were blanked until the ninth when George Puccinelli, Bruce Campbell and Oscar Melillo solved Monte Pearson for the runs that brought a 2-0 victory over Cleveland. Fred Frankhouse and Huck Betts pitched Boston Braves to a 3 to 2, five-hit triumph over Brooklyn's Dodgers.

Rainville Advances Martin Eliminated

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 19 (C.P.).—Marcel Rainville of Montreal yesterday entered the quarter-finals of the Mason and Dixon tennis tournament here with two straight-set victories over United States opponents.

However, Walter Martin of Regina and Toronto, the No. 1 ranking Canadian player, was eliminated 6-2, 6-3 in the second round after he had won his first round match in straight sets.

Rainville got into the quarter-finals by downing Tom Mangan of Washington by 9-7, 6-4. In the first round the diminutive Montrealer defeated Hugh Miller of St. Louis, 6-2, 6-3.

Along with Rainville in the quarter-finals were J. Gilbert Hall of East Orange, N.J., Frank Shields of New York, Lester Stoefen of California, W. C. Wright of Philadelphia, Bryan M. Grant of Atlanta and Bell.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer
Softball, Bowling, etc.

By C. J. P.

It comes about once again that the Girls' Softball League holds its annual meeting at eight tonight in Duffus'. And all the frails who take their softball very seriously will be sashaying around. Frails is what certain of the gentry mixed up in sports calls the gals, even though all of them are not so frail. In fact, it is a well known fact that certain members of the frailer sex have to watch their calories extremely close to keep the scales pointing this side of 120—or whatever the danger-line is. Nevertheless, excess avordupois (or in other words, tonnage) may be spotted a great deal more frequently in the bleachers at the damsels' games than on the diamond. In fact, some of the spectators are so fat that they have trouble fishing around in their dips for a big nickel when the coffee-pot is passed.

• • • • • •

We are informed on very reliable authority—in fact, the guy that tells us has a sister who married a doctor's second cousin—that softball is an extremely healthy exercise indeed, and one conducive to shedding weight rather than the piling on of the same. All of which is interesting, although we have a sneaking suspicion that the femmes play the game for the fun of it rather than for any beneficial results that might be obtained. And, if you ask us, we'd say that the fans who enjoy the game aren't unduly bothered either about a few extra ounces here or there. Even if you don't ask us, we'll say it. However, the point we're gradually getting around toward is that meeting this gloaming. There wont be much trouble getting the guys out, but we'd like to see a big bunch of lasses on hand. It's their league, and they should see that it's run right. Officers will be elected, teams entered and considerable chatter heard about this, that and the other.

• • • • • •

Before we forget it—the old brain-pot isn't flashing many nuggets these lazy spring days—we might mention a request that comes from the clerk at Camp 5, Apsley. He says that about ninety per cent of the boys working there come from this town or district. They've worked faithfully all winter, losing few days—despite the cold—and now that summer is almost here, they'd like to get out in their spare time and play football and softball games. He thought it would be a nice thing if some of the local sportsmen would donate a few balls, bats or other such equipment, and says it would be much appreciated. They should be sent to Camp Clerk, Camp 5, Apsley.

• • • • • •

Quite a crowd took in the men's softball loop meeting at Duffus' last e'en, but entries were scarcer than lemonades at a bachelor's farewell party. In fact, only Brintons and the Regent Theatre really entered, though several others were mentioned. C.G.E. surprised everyone by failing to show up. Must be some trouble down that way as they should have a good baseball and a softball team this year—but so far they haven't got organized. Jake Beckerman was there for the Westclox and looked as sad as an actress who hasn't had a wedding for nearly six months when he stated that unless he could raise some dough that team would have to stay out this year. No fooling, it would be a shame, and we hope he finds the necessary shekels shortly.

Percy Harrison, whose battling spirit and teams, added a lot of color to this league for year, rang up "No Sale" when asked if he'd be in. Percy told us he was too busy and besides he wanted to spend a little time with the missus this summer. Very worthy, but we'll bet the little wife will often miss Percy just the same as ever this summer—and he'll be parked down at Central yelling his head off for one team or the other. Sports gets you that way. The officers elected couldn't be beat, we think, all being experienced, popular and workers. The prexy is Fred Scates; vice is George Dormer (and he's another bird that told us last fall he was all caught up on this game); and the old reliable, Dave Leether, is again secretary-treasurer. Executive will be named later. Other teams wanting entry have only till April 30th to cough up the fee and enter, and next meeting is May 2nd—another open one.

• • • • • •

Church Softball League got off to a swell start in a "Y" meeting yester eve, a big representation doing considerable business. Two surprise entries, but very welcome ones, were the local Salvation Army Bugle Band and the Lakefield United Church. Some twenty-five teams in the various sections will likely comprise this growing loop this summer. They created an intermediate division, and there is a possibility of the junior section affiliating with the O.A.S.A. at a later date htis year, the winning team—or a picked outfit—then going into the junior Ontario playdowns. Complete report of what transpired at the successful session appears elsewhere in to-day's paper.

We liked an article which began this week in Liberty Magazine. It was written by John J. McGraw just before his death. Speaking of the battling Baltimore team on which he used to play, Jawn cited a case to show the fights there used to be. In this game, he said: "There was a runner on first and he started to steal second. As he left the bag he spiked Dan Brouthers, our first baseman, on the foot. Brouthers retaliated by trying to trip him. He got away, but when he got down to second, Heinie Reitz tried to block him off while Hughey Jennings covered the bag to take the throw and tag him out. The runner managed to evade Reitz and jumped at Jennings feet first in an attempt to drive him away from the bag. Jennings dodged the flying spikes and threw himself bodily at the runner, knocking the breath out of him.

• • • • • •

"In the meantime, the batter hit Wilbert Robinson, our catcher, over the hands with his bat so he couldn't throw, and Robbie tramped on Tim Hurst's feet with his spikes and shoved his big mitt into the umpire's face so he couldn't see the play. But the funniest part of it all was the decision Tim Hurst made—he punched Robinson in the ribs, called it a foul ball, and sent the runner back to first base!" The fiery Jawn came from a tough school, and he loved to battle. He claims the real reason for his retirement was the changing style of the game—strategy has given way to power, and enmity to handshakes. And he says Conny Mack should quit also, the modern game isn't the same game they learned to play. It's a good article all through.

DAVE KOMONEN LISTED AMONG FAVORITES TO LEAD PACK HOME

Clarence DeMar and Smiling Jimmy Henigan Two of Veterans in Long Grind.

26 MILE COURSE.

HOPKINGTON, Mass., April 19 (C.P.).—A mug and a laurel wreath lay 26 miles down the blistering road to Boston to-day, the goal of more than 225 Canadian and United States runners who cought to capture a glory that was born in Greece.

With five past winners entered, the wiry plodders prepared to match heart, legs and lungs over the marathon course of the Boston Athletic Association—26 miles, 385 yards.

It was estimated that close to 500,000 persons would line the course as, at high noon, the starter's gun will bark the signal for the start of perhaps the most gruelling test in sportsdom.

Certain to be conspicuous at the start and during the running are members of the large Canadian delegation headed by Dave Komonen of Sudbury, Ont. Voted Canada's outstanding athlete in a poll by the Canadian Press last year, Komonen has earned the reputation of being the greatest long distance performer on the continent. He was a good second in this event last year.

Strong Representation.

Toronto has its customary strong representation, including Lloyd Longman and that remarkable evergreen vetegan, little Percy Wyer.

Albert Dandurand will carry Montreal hopes and H. Allison Burley of Saint John will get plenty of vocal support from the numerous ex-residents of the Maritime Provinces residing hereabouts.

The seamed, weather-beaten face of Clarence Demar, seven times a winner, will be seen. Shuffling along in his awkward but mile-devouring gait, he probably will pass most of the youths of cleaner limb. Smiling Jimmy Henigan, who won in 1931, will be there, too, singing his swan song, he says, for a man can't run forever.

Along about this time of the year; when it has been firmly established that winter is gone, those who are interested in summer sports are busy forming plans, creating new committees and doing a lot of work that is necessary before the season opens, and this applies to the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club as well as sister organizations.

But this year, in order to have everything ready for the opening on May 24th, a new committee has been formed, known as the "Membership Committee" with Benny Chesler as chairman.

Already this committee has had several meetings and has accomplished a lot of work, but there still remains a lot to do; there is room for everybody and work for everybody; the committee cannot do it all.

There are about 1,000 men in town who are real good prospects for bowling and if the skips themselves will just put a little more "pep" and "push" into this idea, and work in close co-operation with the committee nothing can stop the success of one of the finest summer sports there is.

The boys are asked to hand in the names of any prospects to the chairman and all help will be freely and gladly given.

Charlie Butcher has again been appointed caretaker of the greens and has already begun his duties.

It will not be long before the opening date arrives and once more we make an appeal to all interested in this sport to come out and give a helping hand.

PEDEN AND AUDY SHARE BIKE LEAD

Two Teams Hold One-lap Advantage Over Van Kempen-Bartell Pair.

IN MONTREAL GRIND.

MONTREAL, April 19.—(C.P.)—Two teams which have provided the keenest competition since the race opened early Monday morning last night led towards the close of the third day of Montreal's tenth semi-annual six day bicycle race.

They were "Torchy" Peden, Victoria, and Jules Audy, Montreal, and Alfred Letournier, France, and Henri Lepage, Montreal. These teams held a lap advantage over the field, having covered 1,199 miles 5 laps compared to 1,199 miles 4 laps for Piet Van Kempen, Holland, and Frank Bartell, Newark, N.J.

Peden and Audy gained two laps in a bitter jam near the end of the afternoon sprints to take a clear lead of a lap, but last night another jam broke out in which Letourner-Lepage sprang up to a tie and the French pair, Boucheron and Mouton, climbed from seventh position to fourth. About 6,000 attended.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Gertrude Dinesen,
248 Munroe Ave. City.

Your handwriting tells that you admire people with interesting characters, and so I might suggest that you try to cultivate only those whom you feel will have a sympathetic vibration, towards yourself. Your imagination is of an engaging type and should lend interest to your personality. The small letter formations reflect a fairly even disposition, and as you are refined and interesting, you should make friends with people who will respect your versatility. You are secretive and reticent. You are not as a rule inclined to tell all you know. You honestly desire to be allowed to live your own life, and to do as you think best. Your will power is not sufficiently developed to offer you any worthwhile assistance. However, I do not think that you will let others do: neer over you, for your will seems to be more of an adaptable sort. Your t' shows persistence and good will towards others. You are humorous and entertaining, fond of social good times. You have an excellent imagination, and this should assist you greatly in an artistic way, perhaps in the arranging of your household appointments, or in fancy work. Your general character is excellent.

J. K. Dinesen,
248 Munroe Ave., Peterborough.

Your handwriting illustrates care and continuity of thought. It shows that you are not quite mature yet, and so no doubt your writing will change in a few characteristics as you become older. For instance: You are a little afraid of public opinion, and your sensitive feelings are easily hurt and when hurt, are apt to remain so for a long time. You have much power inherent within you, with which to ensure future success in an artistic line. Your mind just now is capable of spreading out its energies into more than one line of endeavour in an artistic field. You make it a point to complete any undertakings which are worth your time, in all their finality, even to the most minute detail. You 't' bars delineate vision and excellent imagination. You should be fond of music, and all out-of-door sports. Part of your writing, shows that you can be very firm at times, even perhaps a little taciturn or temperamental, but the following signature expresses the real you, thoughtful, optimistic and a great share of definite strength of character. Your sense of color is well defined, and should encourage you to continue with your artistic studies. Your number is seven. Your birthsign is Scorpio, the Scorpion. January and July are the most fortunate months for you to commence new undertakings, especially if you desire excellent results from them. Tuesday is your most fortunate day. Your destiny number is one, and creates the ability to stand on your own feet, but it also makes you quite unconventional at times. It gives you great mental force, makes you excitable too, but really forces you to become progressive. Your talent number is eight, and is the foursquare of business doubled, especially in a financial line. You should have no fear as regards future success, with this excellent number in your numerological forecast. Your personality number is seven. This number has a tendency to make you reserved and secretive at times, and it causes you to mask your true feelings. You can become so reticent that you 'close up like a clam' and are hard to understand. People would do well to listen to the sensitive sevens and not ask them too many questions. Your birthpath number is also a seven, and carries out in detail all the above as referring to your other numbers.

Harry V. Munro,
Millbrook, Ont.

This handwriting depicts versatility. You are very nervous and temperamental. Machinery might interest one of your type, if you care to make yourself study along this line, but you will have to convince yourself that hard work is essential, if you desire success. You are apt to leave tasks unfinished, if you become tired of them. You have too much imagination for your own good. Imagination is a great asset at times but it loses its good quality if allowed to obliterate all that is real and practical. You are born under the sign of Libra, the Balance. Friday is your best day and August and December your best months. Your number is 10.

CATCH COLD EASILY?

DON'T be that worst pest of all — the chronic sufferer from colds, who passes germs on to friends or family. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery builds up the stomach and the blood so that the entire system feels the beneficial effect. William Blore of 273 King William St., Hamilton, Ont., said: "My health failed about six years ago. I had no appetite, lost weight and vitality, my nerves were poor, I caught cold easily—seemed to have one cold on top of another—and my chest would become sore and raw. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and the first bottle helped my case so promptly I took two more and gained in every way. Seemed to be stronger and better than ever." The Mystery of the Nerves

Their Subtle Power

The human body consists of bones and muscles.
The bones make up the frame work.
The bodily organs are muscular.
Digestive organs prepare the food.
The heart pumps the blood to all parts.
The lungs introduce oxygen and eliminate poisons.
Excretory glands get rid of waste matter.
And the nervous system controls them all.
We all know what bones and muscles are like,
But the nervous system is a mystery.
Disorders of the nerves upset all the bodily organs.
You can get the nerves right
By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.
Consulting physicians say
That 60% of present day ills
Result from exhaustion of the nerves.
Such ills disappear with the use
Of this time-proven restorative treatment.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

According to the stellar influences this day is likely to be devoted to social, artistic, domestic and affectional matters rather than business interests. Prudence and discretion are enjoined lest there be overindulgence or extravagance in the pursuit of pleasure. It may be found profitable to deal with secret societies, combines or through measures of diplomacy or tact. Much of the day's enterprise may be fostered by such means rather than direct action.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of much pleasure and social activity, with the stress upon domestic, social, artistic and romantic contacts.

A child born on this day may be fond of pleasure and company, with proclivities of extravagance and indulgence in these associations.

THE ECLIPSES

Give me the ways of wandering Stars to know
The depths of heaven above, and earth below,
Teach me the various labors of the Moon,
And whence proceed Eclipses of the Sun.
—Virgil in Georgic.

BY H. W. L. MAHOOD

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

Amid the most impressive phenomena of the heavens the Eclipses must be accorded a first place. In all ages they have been looked upon with awe. The total lunar eclipse which happened soon after sunset on March 1, 1504 is historic.

Christopher Columbus had landed on the island of Jamaica a few days before. Columbus and all on board the vessels were in dire distress. Their food supplies were used. Columbus made known his need. The natives refused to supply him. Their hope was either to starve the whole crew to death, or to drive them from the island to seek food elsewhere.

Columbus was an astronomer. He knew all that was to be known about this science in his day. He had kept himself informed about the Moon. He told the natives that on a certain date the Moon would be darkened. That the great Deity of which he was a worshipper was angry with those who refused to supply food for his faithful followers. That He would punish all those who had refused with pestilence and famine.

That there would be a sign in the heavens that calamity was about to come. The Moon that very night would change its color and lose its light. The night came. The Moon was in the full. Its light began to fade. The natives were alarmed. They implored Columbus to intercede for them. He promised that he would do so. He retired to the ship and left them alone. Soon they came with an abundance of the best food they had in store. When they came Columbus promised them that his God would withdraw the shadow from the Moon in token of His forgiveness. While he remained on the island Columbus did not have to ask again for food. He had to stay the open hand of the natives.

Miss Majorie Brethen, accompanied by Miss Jean Munro from Norwood, left to spend the week-end with the latter at her home.

Mrs. J. A. Sargent spent the week-end at Oshawa gisiting her uncle, Mr. Long, who has been ill. Many Warsaw people will remember Mr. Long very kindly when he visited Mrs. Sargant and will be glad to know he is very much better.

PHILLIE PITCHER DISAPPEARS

PHILADELPHIA, April 18, (AP) Police have been asked to search for Frank Pearce, pitcher of the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club, who has been missing more than 24 hours. Officials of the club said that Pearce packed his bag to accompany the Phillies to New York for the opening game of the season yesterday and left it with his roommate, Curt Davis. They thought he had missed the train, but on their return to this city last night found no trace of him.

GROSS PRODUCTION TAX UNEMPLOY 8,000 MINERS

OTTAWA, April 19 (CP)—"To tax the gross production is utterly iniquitous. So far as we can figure, if this tax is persisted in, it will mean throwing 8,000 men out of work across Canada," said W. E. Segswort here to-day. With R. J. Jowsey, Mr. Segswort is in Ottawa for the purpose of conferring with Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Finance Minister, relative to the 10 per cent tax on all gold delivered to the Mint. The tax becomes effective to-day.

POULTRY TALK GIVEN MEMBERS

A. D. Runions Addresses Members of Westwood Women's Institute.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WESTWOOD, April 19. — The Westwood Women's Institute met on Tuesday, April 17, in the town hall, for the April meeting. About 40 members were present with Mrs. F. E. Birdsall in the chair.

Two annual reports of committees were given: Mrs. Don Cameron on "Community Activities," and Mrs. Ross Lobb in "Relief Work."

Mr. Runions, the Agricultural Representative for East Peterborough, addressed the meeting. He commended the work done by the Institutes throughout Ontario, and said that they did more for our own province than any other institution in Ontario, and that in his agricultural work he could always count on co-operation from the Women's Institute. He spoke briefly on the competition for girls in Household Science, which includes, Clothing, Nutrition and House Furnishing, and also referred to the Boys' Holstein Heifer Club. Taking "Poultry" for his subject he gave much useful information and valuable hints on poultry raising. He strongly advised buying blood-tested chicks, and gave much good advice on the care and raising of chicks.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Runions and a hearty handclap of appreciation followed. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by the group in charge of which Mrs. Ross Lobb, was the convenor.

Handiest Thing in the house

Every home needs 'Vaseline' Petroleum Jelly. It comes in handy for so many things—the children's bumps, bruises and burns. Prevents scars. Softens chapped skin; relieves wind and sunburn. Eases stuffy head colds, raspy throat. And 'Vaseline' is what the doctor recommends for keeping baby's tender skin from chafing. It's the "Handiest Thing in the House."

BE SURE YOU GET THE GENUINE LOOK FOR THE TRADEMARK VASELINE WHEN YOU BUY.

If you don't see it you are not getting the genuine product of Chesebrough Mfg. Co., Cons'd., 5520 Chabot Avenue, Montreal.

Friday, the thirteenth of April proved an unlucky day for one local resident. Omitting to drain the water from his car, under the impression that spring had really arrived, he found his clyinder head badly cracked next morning. He has decided that he will now continue to drain his car until the 12th of July, to be on the safe side.

NEW INSTRUMENTS BOUGHT FOR BAND

Satisfactory Report Read at Annual Meeting of Lakefield Citizens' Band.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 19. — The annual meeting of the Citizens' Band was held on Thursday evening in the town hall with a representative attendance present. The report of the secretary-treasurer showed a very satisfactory balance on hand in spite of the fact that the receipts for the past year were not as large as 1933. There had been some outlay in purchasing new equipment and in repairing some of the instruments. There had been a considerable outlay for new music and there is a worth while library which is increased from time to time. The equipment, including music, instruments, uniforms, etc., are the property of the village and form a valuable asset. There are some young recruits who are showing real promise, and six or seven young men have been added to the strength, including a couple of excellent drummers.

The following were re-elected to office:

Honorary President — W. H. Casement.

Hon. Vice-President — Theo Crawford.

President—Gordon G. Connell.

Vice President—Trueman Jewell.

Secretary-Treasurer — Allan H. Clark.

Band Master — Walter Madill.

Deputy Band Master — Trueman Jewell.

Librarian — Gordon D. Scriver.

Music Committee — Walter Madill, G. G. Connell and Trueman Jewell.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 19. — An export movement of 500,000 bushels and firmness in outside markets were strengthening factors on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, and wheat prices closed steady at levels ¼c lower to unchanged.

May wheat closed at 65¼c, July at 66c, and October at 67⅞c. At top levels gains of ¼c were registered, but a little belated selling carried quotations back to the previous close.

Selling came mostly from elevator interests, while the best buyers were export and commission house traders. Pit volume was considerably lighter than during Tuesday's market, but at times trading became quite active.

Only odd lots of cash grains changed hands, while coarse grains commodities closed with fractional gains.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 19 — Fine weather with prospects of increasing production tended to reduce prices of butter and cheese on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market, while eggs held a firm tone yesterday. The cheese market was quoted ¼ cent a pound easier at 11c to 11¼c a pound for fresh arriving. Ontario make. Summer cheese was quoted at 11½c to 11¾c for Ontario colored, and 12¼c for Ontario white. Receipts were only 27 boxes.

The butter market was generally quoted at 25c to 25¼c a pound for fresh Quebec or Ontario butter, arriving in carlots or less, while finest New Zealand or Western graded No. 1 butter brought from 25½c to 26c a pound. These were about ½ cent under yesterday's levels. Arrivals amounted to 1,133 boxes.

Graded shipments in carlots or less of eggs continued at 19½c to 20c a dozen for A-large 18c to 18½c for A-medium, 17½c for B, and 16c to 16½c for C. Offerings were 1,855 cases.

Quebec potatoes declined 10c to 95c to $1.00 and New Brunswick Mountains receded a like amount to $1.00 to $1.05. Prince Edward Island Mountains brought $1.20 to $1.30 for 90-lb bags.

ONTARIO GRAIN

TORONTO, April 19. — Ontario grains, f.o.b. shipping point: Wheat Carlots, 79c to 82c.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 19. — Late reactions converted a one-cent gain of wheat values yesterday into a loss of nearly a cent.

Selling to realize profits for early buyers did much to turn the wheat market downward at the last. Advances which preceded the late reaction were ascribed largely to purchasing to take advantage of the fact that wheat had undergone a fall of more than 10 cents from last week's high point, and that corn and oats were off about 9 cents.

Wheat closed nervous, ½c to ⅞c under Tuesday's finish, corn unchanged to ¼c higher, oats ⅝c to ⅝c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 cents.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE ROGERS.

NORWOOD, April 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Mrs. George Rogers was held on Wednesday afternoon from her home in Dummer Township. The deceased had been in failing health since last autumn, bearing her affliction with patience and Christian resignation. She was one of a family of ten sons and four daughters, children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Buchanan, residents of the North School district, Belmont Township.

Surviving are her sorrowing husband, to whom she was married twenty-one years ago; two sisters, Mrs. Norman Tripp and Mrs. Harry Gardner of Peterborough; five brothers: Andrew and John Buchanan of Belmont, Samuel and George of Dummer, and William of Norwood — one sister, Mrs. Hilton, and one brother, Thomas, having predeceased her.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. C. Reeves of Norwood Presbyterian Church, of which the deceased was a member. Miss Lila sang a solo, "Face to Face." Interment was made in Maple Grove Cemetery, Havelock.

The pall-bearers were her six neighbors: Messrs. Alex. and George Ross, Wm. McMillan, Golden Andrews, George Elliott and George Edwards.

A. D. Runions Speaks At Lakefield Meet

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 19. — A. D. Runions gave a very interesting address at the Women's Institute on Wednesday on the raising of Baby Chicks, which may be purchased very reasonably. The preparation of the colony house, its heat and the food suitable for the chicks. The program, sponsored by the convenor Mrs. J. H. Moore, was an excellent one.

The Relief Committee reported for the past month, and the Flower Committee reported that seventeen shut-ins had been remembered with flowers or fruits at Easter.

Owing to the season being so far advanced it was decided to postpone the Arts and Crafts course till the autumn. Cuttings and seeds were exchanged and gardening plans discussed.

Millbrook

MILLBROOK, April 18 (Examiner Correspondence)—Mrs. C. M. Westmacott entertained the W.A. of St. Thomas' Anglican Church for its April meeting on Monday at 8 p.m., the hostess who is also the president, taking the chair, the attendance of members being quite gratifying.

Reports of officers included that of the Junior W.A. superintendent, Miss Margaret Simpson, who mentioned that the juniors are planning to hold their annual tea on June 6, and requested the support of the senior members in the undertaking. The Dorcas secretary, Mrs. H. J. Russell, reported work for the bale which will be shipped next week to the Blackfoot Indian School in the Calgary diocese.

The matter of a delegate to the annual W.A. convention in Toronto next month was discussed, Mrs. H. W. Jordan being appointed; the May meeting will be at Mrs. Jordan's home when a report of the Diocesan meeting will be given. Miss Macnamara completed the study book, "Craftsmen All," the final chapter dealing with the Indian poet, Kilak.

A letter from the Living Message was also read by the secretary, telling of the new Indian mission school opened at Fort George in the James Bay district. The hostess served refreshments during the social hour at the close.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.

The missionary committee, Miss Jean Burnham convenor, was in charge of the program at the Young Peoples' Society on Monday evening, over forty being present. The worship period developed the theme of the evening, that of Stewardship, with the motto, "To have is to owe, not to own." William Ridge and Marjorie Skitch read the lessons, the leader took the prayer and the devotional poem, and Misses Francis Jones and Gladys Williamson sang a duet.

The president, B. B. Dawson, was in charge of the business period, announcing that the Lakefield Y.P.S. will present the play, "My Irish Rose" on May 4 in the basement of St. Andrew's Church. Miss Beatrice Jones gave an instructive talk on Stradivarius and his famous violins, and the study for the evening was led by Miss Stella Hetherington who, by means of the question and answer method, drew the young people into a lively discussion on the subject to stewardship and its many phases.

Clippings on the topic were read by Elwood Fallis, Harold McCamus, and Robert Dunford and the usual recreational hour was enjoyed at the close.

FRANCE MOVING STEADILY AHEAD FROM HER SLUMP

Bank, Railways, Bus Stocks Having Miniature Boom.

TRADE BALANCE BETTER.

Plan Public Works to Relieve Unemployment in Paris, Northern Areas.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

PARIS, April 20. (C. P. Cable).—France is moving steadily forward from the depths of last February. By a painful process of deflation she is lifting her feet out of the mud.

Returning confidence noted three weeks ago was still more marked to-day. The French four percent rents are now higher than 4½'s were a few weeks ago. Bank stocks and public utilities have improved.

As the sequel to a plan of co-ordination between railways and motorbus traffic railway stocks are having a miniature boom. The gold drain has stopped. Sight engagements of the Bank of France now are backed by 77.53 percent gold, against 77.39 a week ago. The legal backing is 35 percent.

Returns for the year's first quarter show an improvement in the adverse balance of trade.

And additional measures are contemplated. Premier Mussolini accompanied his salary cuts in Italy with retail price reductions enforced until all the strength of blackshirt persuasion. France is moving more cautiously. She also has a high cost of living to face, and she must bring it down if the lot of the poorly-paid employees is not to be made harder still.

RADIO CHAIRMAN DENIES CHARGES

Hector Charlesworth Appears Before Commons Radio Committee.

CRCT HAS SURPLUS.

OTTAWA, April 20.—(CP)—Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the Canadian Radio Commission, appeared before the House of Commons radio committee today and branded as "absolutely false" statements made by R. W. Ashcroft of Toronto in evidence before the committee last week.

Mr. Ashcroft's allegations the commission had sent a "roorback" throughout Canada terming him an imposter was denied absolutely by the commission chairman. Evidence to the effect the National Broadcasting Company in the United States had no intention of Co-operating with the commission was refuted when the chairman produced a letter from the stations relation counsel of N.B.C., in which the organization declared it wished to co-operate to the fullest extent with the Canadian Commission.

CRCT Has Surplus

The Toronto man, Mr. Charlesworth was told had stated station CRCT, commission outlet in Toronto, was losing money at the rate of $2,000 a month. On the contrary said the chairman, CRCT was bringing in a substantial surplus each month.

All revenue received from licensing radio sets should be placed at the disposal of the Canadian Radio Commission, suggested Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The money would be used for development of commission facilities and improvement of its programs.

When Mr. Moore concluded, Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the commission, was called. He wished to deal with evidence of R. W. Ashcroft, Toronto, who testified last week.

Mr. Ashcroft had declared the National Broadcasting Company had no intention of co-operating

$10 Dream

PITTSBURGH, April 20.—(C. P.)—For weeks Mrs. Mathilda Forest had been begging her son Forest ,30, to start a garden.

Then Forest, meditating on the job, fell asleep and dreamed—dreamed he found $10. The next day he took a spade and went to work. He turned up a $10 gold piece, crusted with earth and dated 1881. Finishing the job was easy after that. All the neighbors came on the run with spades.

BIG GOLD STRIKE YIELDS $56 TON MAY CAUSE RUSH

Samples From Cavendish Find Already Taken and Sent to Toronto.

KNOWN FOR YEARS.

Expect to Start Work as Soon as the Roads Open Up.

Thomas McBride, Coldspring's blacksmith and discoverer of a supposedly rich gold property in Cavendish township, informed The Examiner to-day that the story of his find has aroused intense interest in mining circles in Toronto and throughout the province.

"I was besieged with long distance telephone calls yesterday, when the news of my find first got really out," Mr. McBride said. "I wouldn't be surprised if Peterborough county sees a gold rush as a result of my find."

Mr. McBride was on his way back to his gold property to stake out more claims. He caled into The Examiner office on his way. He promised to stop off at The Examiner to-morrow on his way home and may present more details on the location of his claims.

(By Staff Reporter)

COLD SPRINGS, April 20. — If the hopes of a few residents of this district are realized, and they are positive they will be, then riches will flow into their laps and Peterborough County will become the centre of one of the greatest gold strikes in Ontario's history.

Residents of Peterborough County have long dreamed that there might be gold in "them thar hills" that gird the silver lakes in the northern townships. Thomas McBride, blacksmith of this village, told The Examiner to-day that he is sure there is rich gold ore around Buckhorn because he has dug it out himself.

"More than that, " he declared, "I know it is a big find. I took samples from several veins on the property, sent them to the Government assayer at Toronto and he reported to me that some of it assayed as high as $56 a ton. There is no guess work about this."

May Cause Gold Rush

Mr. McBride, who is the leader in the local little syndicate of nine, whose avowed purpose it is to work the eight claims they have already staked out, was loath to discuss details about his "gold strike."

If the mine proves up as valuable as he is confident it will then this county will see a rush of miners into the lake district. Mr. McBride and his friends are not going to delay in getting started on the task of proving the full value of their strike. As soon as roads in the north open up they plan to send in a group of workers and start uncovering in real earnest more of the gold.

Subject of Talk

Secrecy has marked everything pertaining to their find up until recently. But a week ago word leaked out in this community that the village blacksmith had "struck it rich" and details of the gold strike began to be the subject of

OPENS MAIL BIDS.

WASHINGTON, April 20 (C.P.).—Spectators whistled in surprise when Postmaster-General James Farley ripped open the envelopes and read the bids to-day for carrying airmail on the 21 routes the United States Government intends to pace in private hands for at least the next three months.

Some of the companies bid as low as 19 cents an airplane mile in offering to fly the mails. The maximum range stimulated in the specifications was from 41 to 45 cents per airplane mile.

Famous Lost Interview Given by Kaiser in 1908 And Destroyed--Is Bared

Hohenzollern Monarch In "Most Amazingly Indiscreet Statements Ever Uttered By Head Of Great Nation" Claimed Inevitable Crisis Was Clash Between Japan And Occidental Nations — Castigated Britain As Traitor To White Man's Cause For Alliance With Nipponese—War Christian—Necessary.

ADMITTED NAVAL RACE ON WITH ENGLAND, PACT WITH U.S. TO GUARD CHINA'S RIGHTS.

(Editor's Note: The Kaiser gave an indiscreet interview to an American newspaper man in 1908. The German Foreign Office, according to the story, blue penciled much of the dynamite. The expurgated version was announced for publication in the December 1908 Century magazine. Before it appeared, however, the Foreign Office requested suppression, and sent a cruiser to New York to pick up the pages and consign them to Davy Jones' locker. When the crates containing the sheets failed to sink, they were fished out and the copiees fed to the flames. The "lost interview" is now published for the first time).

BY HOMER McCOY

BOSTON, April 20.—(AP)—What the Kaiser said to William Bayard Hale, journalist, that night back in 1908—an international mystery for a quarter of a century—was revealed today.

The famous "lost interview," which caused so many headaches and so much speculation, is presented in the May issue of the Atlantic Monthly Magazine by William Harlan Hale, son of the man to whom Emperor William II of Germany spoke so freely, and, as his country thought, so indiscreetly.

This is the gist of the views expressed by the Kaiser:

The inevitable world crisis was a clash between Japan and Occidental nations: East and West must meet, and the West must conquer.

Great Britain was guilty of a sort of political miscegnation in allying herself with Japan.

War was necessary. War was Christian. The Bible was full of fighting. The greatest soldiers were Christians.

The course of history was largely determined, not by the clashing of social forces and economic trends, but by the deeds of great men and personalities.

Thus the Kaiser spoke. It was one evening in July, 1908, that he consented to the interview by Hale. The meeting was on the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, at anchor in the Fjord of Bergen.

Amazing Statements.

In the Atlantic Monthly, Hale writes that the Emperor voiced "the most amazingly indiscreet statements ever uttered by the head of a great nation."

The world situation was precarious at that time. The first-rate Powers were in a fine state of balance—like a mixture of chemicals, ready to explode with the addition of some catalytic substance—rash speech for example.

The Russo-Japanese War was three years past. Germany had come to a cross-roads and was a little off the path. She was carrying on a naval race with Great Britain, a military race with France.

The Algeciras Conference, at which England, Russia and

DRAMATIC ARMS SHOWDOWN FORECAST IN LEAGUE MAY 23

Rumor France to Insist on Investigation of German Armaments Before Entering Parley.

ONLY ONE OF MANY SNAGS.

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY
(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press).

GENEVA, April 20.— League of Nations circles forecast to-day a dramatic showdown on disarmament on May 23.

That is the date when representatives of the nations in the world disarmament conference will return to Geneva in full session to attempt to catch and pull together the flying strings of the many-sided problem of arms control.

There are even unconfirmed rumors that France may insist upon an investigation of German armament before consenting to negotiate any sort of a disarmament treaty.

But the differences of France, Germany and Great Britain form but one section of the problem as a whole.

To-day a tendency was seen in Geneva to link what one official called the "disturbed" disarmament situation with developmetns in the Far East growing out of the newly-stated Japanese policy that western powers must keep hands off China.

Hopeful Signs.

Some progress was seen by well-informed sources here in the British "white paper" revelation at London Thursday that Germany had expressed willingness to postpone reductions of armaments by other powers for five years.

Thi sstand, taken in a previous unrevealed note to Great Britain, it was stated here, may reduce the apprehensions of France regarding Germany's arms — apprehensions which led her to state flatly that there could be no further hope of bilateral agreements with the Reich operating under a budget granting increases for military purposes.

The portfolio mentioned is that of Provincial Secretary, now held by Hon. G. H. Challies.

Minister of Highways Addresses Tory Rally in Campbellford.

GRANTS TO COUNTIES.

Motor Tax is as Low as Any Other Province in Ontario.

(By Staff Reporter.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Apr. 20.—The Henry Government's administrative record of accomplishment and progress in the face of the extraordinary problems created by the last four years of universal dislocation of trade and commerce, with resulting unemployment, was reviewed by the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, at a largely attended meeting in the local theatre last night.

In the visit of one of the most responsible Ministers of the Ontario cabinet, the electors of the northeastern section of Northumberland County realized the near approach of the expected general elections for which further preparations are scheduled in the riding next week with the Liberal nominations at Warkworth on Wednesday followed by the Conservative convention at the same place on Friday.

Referring especially to his own Department, Hon. Mr. Macaulay declared that, with sixty per cent of the paved roads in the Dominion, the government of Ontario rendered a greater service than that of any other province at less cost to the public, and contrasted some of the higher charges for automobiles lincenses and drivers' fees in other provinces with those assessed by the Henry Government. He emphasized the seriousness of the problem which faced the provincial administration in their efforts to relieve unemployment, to provide work for men who were willing to work, thereby "taking up some of the slack" caused by the greatest worldwide depression in business that had been experienced in the last century and a half.

Against the unity of the Conservative party in Ontario and the achievements of the Henry Government, Mr. Macaulay briefly sketched the divided leadership of the Liberals, and dismissed the policies of M. F. Hepburn as being confined to a promise of wholesale dismissal of Tory civil servants and a campaign of "political assassination by slander and innuendo."

N. Alex MacColl was chairman of the meeting, and the other principal speakers were Fred J. McArthur, M.P.P., Cobourg, and W. B. Horkins, K.C., Toronto.

Among those who were called to the platform by the chairman were J. A. Anderson, J. A. Irwin, W. J. Armstrong, R. J. Allan, Wm. Rowe, Robert Innis, Deputy-Reeve E. C. McKeel, T. J. Horkins, Rev. H. P. L. Seymour, Wm. Wynn and ex-Warden C. H. Davidson.

Hon. Mr. Macaulay was introduced by Mr. McArthur who intimated that he was reserving his address to some later date in the expected campaign. He said tha the Conservative party was liberal because it possessed all the worth while doctrines of the Liberal party leaving the dross to the Hepburnites. It was Conservative because it represented the sanest of good Governments and administrations. It was co-operative because it worked in the interest of all the citizens, and worked with them, and it was democratic for the reason that its interests were in the welfare of the ordinary people.

BRITAIN READY TO BACK STAND AMERICA TAKES

Paris Sees Japanese Ultimatum End to "Open Door" in Far East.

TOKIO TO WARN LEAGUE.

Rome Suggests Europe Bury Own Troubles and Unite to Face Nippon.

(By Associated Press.)

The Japanese warning to the world to keep its hands off China was construed in various Occidental capitals as a "Monroe Doctrine for Asia."

Japan issued warning that while she had no objection to other nations giving financial and technical assistance to China, such assistance almost inevitably leads to political meddling and, henceforth. Japan will see to it, by force if necessary, that there is no meddling in China.

The response everywhere was immediate.

The authoritative reaction in London was that Great Britain will follow the lead of the United States in expressing a stand or the matter.

Ambassador Saito informed Washington he would give it an official version of the text of the Japanese declaration and State Department officials remained silent pending its arrival.

It was understood in Geneva that Japan would repeat its warning directly to the League of Nations which will discuss a plan for Chinese assistance next month.

In Paris the opinion was expressed that the Japanese stand might mean an end to the "open-door" in China.

In Rome it was suggested that European nations should present a united front to Japan on the question, burying their own differences in view of the Japanese attitude.

Policy Dazes World

TOKYO, April 30.—The world as represented by foreign diplomats in Tokyo seemed dazed today by Japan's "re-statement of policy" toward China and what diplomats regarded as her audacity in issuing it.

The representatives of other powers, still wondering at the exact meaning of the declaration, labelled it variously a "white-hands-off-China" statement and "Asiatic Monroe Doctrine."

SPANISH TOWN HUNTS TREASURE

Youths Reported to Have Found Room Under Old Castle Full of Niches.

CHESTS OF GOLD, ARMOR.

LA GRANJA, Spain, April 20 (CP via Havas).—The treasure hunt is on in La Granja, quiet, sunny little town north of Madrid, renowned in Spain for its famous castle, built here 400 feet above the sea level, by Philip V.

Just who had the pipe dream, and whether it was really a pipe dream remains to be seen. But police are continuing their investigations of the sudden prosperity shown by several youths. Authorities are in turn investigating the story of the police that in a secret passage-way under the castle was found a chamber filled with chests of ancient Spanish gold, coins of the reign of Charles III., elaborate and richly wrought armor, and all the treasures over which pirates fought and which were the glory of Spain when it was a great maritime power.

Moot points of law are being invoked as well. Whether the treasure—if there be a treasure as claimed yesterday—belongs to the young men who found it, the State, or the administrators of the ancient Royal patrimony is yet to be decided.

The town, in the meantime, has forgotten its customary pre-occupations. The palace, pride of La Granja, is closely guarded, lest over-anxious treasure hunters damage it.

Surprise Visit

KANSAS CITY, April 20.—(CP). Joe Carr, M.K.T. railway station agent at Angola, Kas., has a surprise in store for him.

Mathews S. Sloan, new chairman of the railway board, was examining equipment here and called the Angola station.

This is M. S. Sloan, the new chairman of the board," the receiver told Joe.

"Oh Yeah. So's your grandmother," Joe responded.

"No kidding," Sloan replied.

"All right, come see me some time."

"All right, Joe, I'll stop in to see you," the railroad chief promised.

Sloan arranged to have his special train stop at Angola to-day.

SHOWBOAT DAYS GOES OVER BIG ON FIRST NIGHT

Kinsmen Show Lives Up to All Previous Dramatic Presentations.

REPEATED TO-NIGHT.

Cast Well Chosen, With Several Outstanding Highlights.

(By Jeanette)

"Show Boat Days' is one of the smartest productions of its type seen here in many moons. It is one of those delightful affairs that not only lives up to, but surpasses, the advance notices, so that the Kinsmen Club members can easily carve another deep notch to commemorate the success of this year's dramatic presentation.

"Hay Fever" was an up-to-date drama; Sheridan's "Rivals" was a costume play of the best type, and now comes the third dramatic success credited to this wideawake club: "Show Boat Days," a romantic musical comedy of the Old South that has many a novel angle to recommend it to lovers of the legitimate stage. Gay, colorful, brilliant, swiftly-moving, full of hilarious fun, tuneful music, gorgeous costumes and popular song hits, what more could one ask in the way of entertainment?

George Zarfas of the Canadian Production Company has much to his credt for the expert type of training he has given within a short space of time to a group of willing amateur players. The show, as produced at the Grand Opera House last night, moved to a tempo that never lagged. Snap, zip, verve and finish characterized it from the first to the final curtain, and a pleased audience watched and listened with ever-increasing interest.

The cast was well chosen in every instance, but there were several highlights that must be reckoned with. First, there was George Nicholls, who surpassed even his own clever performances of other years; and his side-kick, Miss Edna Forster. Then there was the glorious thrill of hearing George Colemans superb voice in his solo, "That's Why Darkies Were Born," a dynamically-rendered song that nearly stopped the show and brought applause, loud and long.

Up To U.S. To Protest Japs' Action In China

LONDON, April 20 (AP)—Authoritative sources said to-day that Great Britain would expect the United States to take the responsibility for initiating any real retaliation or protest against Japan's announced intention to participate in China's foreign relations.

This will be the attitude of the British Government, it was said, at least until it was learned whether Japan has any specific grievance against Great Britain which would take an official form.

Any American proposals for United action by other powers to counteract the Japanese policy in the Far East would be given consideration by Great Britain, it was stated, but it was added that she was not inclined to make the first move herself.

STURGEON FALLS CITIZENS URGED TO LEAVE TOWN

No Hope of Work Being Obtained States Mayor in Appeal to Taxpayers.

OVER HALF ON RELIEF.

No Sign of Mill Opening — Claims Assistance Cannot Go On Indefinitely.

STURGEON FALLS, Ont., April 20 (C.P.). — Convinced that there is no immediate prospect of a return of industrial activity to Sturgeon Falls, Mayor J. P. Marchildon has issued a letter to taxpayers in the town suggesting they should seek employment in other centres.

"Relief is an act of generosity and will not be continued indefinitely." His Worship writes in his letter. "Those who will have foreseen such an eventuality will have spared themselves much disappointment, so I recommend that everyone should make unusual efforts to secure employment in other towns and cities or else to stir up some of that courage of our forefathers who depended on nothing else but the fertile soil to produce the necessaries of life."

No Hope of Work.

The Mayor explained the reason for his letter:

"The paper mill is our only industry, and there is no hope in the immediate future of its being reopened," he said. "Shipping of the pulp here to other mills has started and already about one hundred car loads have left town. That does not indicate any speedy resumption of operations here. My letter was a friendly letter to the taxpayers, based on conditions as I know them. I understand I have been criticized in some quarters for issuing it, but I sent it out believing it was in the best interests of our ratepayers."

Mayor Marchildon explained that during the month of March, with a population of 5,000 persons, 2,900 were dependent on relief for their food and rent. The total cost of this relief during the month was $18,800.

MINE OFFICIALS SEEK REDRESS

Hope to Press Protest Against Gold Tax With Rhodes or Bennett.

HAVE MET GORDON.

OTTAWA, April 20. (CP)—Seeking an interview with either Prime Minister R. B. Bennett or Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, in order to press their protest against the new 10 percent gold tax a group of prominent mining men are in Ottawa to-day. Yesterday they had an interview with Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Mines, and to-day they may meet either Mr. Bennett or Mr. Rhodes.

The imposition of the tax, the delegation claims, will have a serious effect in retarding the development of low grade gold properties which recently got underway on the impetus of high gold prices. It is understood they presented a number of alternatives to Mr. Gordon but after the meeting they said the "situation was the same."

In the group are R. J. Jowsey, prominent prospector, W. E. Segaworth, representing the Canadian Prospecting and Development Association, C. C. Bateman, secretary of the Ontario Mining Association, and Fraser Reid, manager of the Howey mine.

Mr. Gordon after meeting the mining men said he was confident the situation would work out satisfactorily.

Dr. Pratt Acquitted on Murder Charge

GIVEN 5 YEARS FOR OPERATIONS DONE ILLEGALLY

Aged Physician Admits His Guilt on Each of 10 Counts Read.

JURY OUT 3 HOURS.

Crowd Cheers As It Returns "Not Guilty' Verdict in Housekeeper's Death.

PERTH, Ont., April 20. — (CP)—Aged Dr. Wilton Pratt, feeble and ailing, today turned his face toward Kingston penitentiary where he will spend the next five years for performing illegal operations on women.

Acquitted yesterday of a chargeof murdering Eva Elizabeth McLean, 60-year-old housekeeper who died of burns suffered in a fire at his home, the 71-year-old Smith's Falls physician pleaded guilty to 10 charges of performing operations.

His acquittal on the charge of slaying Miss McLean brought to an end the first murder trial in Lanark County for the last 25 years. A crowded court room cheered when the jury brought in its verdict after deliberating three hours and 15 minutes.

After a brief adjournment of court ordered by Mr. Justice Patrick Kerwin to permit the doctor to consult with his young counsel Donald Smith, the old man was asked to plead to the other 10 charges

He stood with stooped shoulders while the court clerk read the charges one by one. He answered 'guilty' to each charge.

Five Years Each Charge

After a brief address in which he said the knowledge that Dr. Pratt was willing to perform illegal operations had been widespread, Mr. Justice Kerwin sentenced him to five years on each charge, the sentences to run concurrenly.

He remarked in his address that one individual named in the indictment against the doctor had gone to him three times between 1913 and 1933.

The Crown alleged in the murder charge that the doctor had saturated with some inflammable liquid, the clothes of a bed in which the housekeeper lay and had then set it afire, burning her fatally.

The defence, however, maintained the Crown had failed to show any motive for the slaying of the woman and suggested she might have set the bed afire with a cigarette while she was drunk as it alleged she was on the night of the fire.

EASY PASSAGE FINANCE BILL

Barely Score of Members on Hand When British House Resumes.

LONDON, April 20 (C.P. Cable). —Convincing evidence of the general popularity of Britain's "sunshine Budget" was the general lack of any serious controversy to-day.

There is little interest in the Budget debate in the House of Commons. Last evening, for instance, with Chancellor Neville Chamberlain on guard ready to repel criticism, there were barely a score of members on hand when the House opened.

The Finance Bill looks like having the easiest parliamentary passage in recent times. In restoring unemployment benefits, civil service cuts by half reducing income tax, and cutting the motor license fee, the Budget has benefited most classes.

Partial restoration of the civil service salary cuts has been received with what a famous comic opera character described as "modified rapture." The civil service as a body has made no comment but the teachers' branch, always vociferous, thinks the entire 10 per cent. cut should have been restored immediately, instead of the Government making a five per cent. restoration effective July 1.

The Budget is expected to help the Government in the North Hammersmith by-election campaign now being fought hard. Polling was taking place yesterday in another by-election at Basingstoke, where a leaflet had been promptly circulated by the National Government candidate citing the Budget reliefs to the taxpayer, described as "only the first instalment of the profits of the Empire policy."

HENRY, McCREA OBJECT TO TAX LEVIED ON GOLD

Expect Some Modification — Ontario's Interest Not Being Neglected.

WIRE SENT OTTAWA.

Liberals Declare Both Govt's Should Resign Because of Levy.

TORONTO, April 20 C.P.). — Ontario Government heads to-day awaited the result of the representations to the Dominion administration on the proposed 10 per cent. gold tax while prominent Liberals declared both Governments should resign because of the levy.

Premier George S. Henry and the Hon. Charles MiCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, stated last night representations had been made to the Dominion Government on the question. Earlier Arthur G. Slaght, K. C., prominent Toronto Liberal, described the proposed tax a "fool" step, and declared the Ontario and Dominion Cabinets should resign.

Mr. McCrea stated he expected there would be some modification of the tax and maintained Ontario's interests were not being neglected. The Premier and Mr. McCrea announced they had discussed the tax as soon as it was made known, and decided to place their views immediately before the Federal authorities.

Premier Henry declared Mr McCrea had despatched a telegram containing the Ontario Government's representations on Thursday morning. Their action had been taken long before Mr. Slaght had publicly charged the Provincial administration in neglecting the Province's interests, it was maintained.

Levied on "Fool's Basis."

In his address before the Toronto Men's Liberal Association, Mr. Slaght charged the proposed tax would cause foreign capital to lose faith in the Dominion. He claimed the tax had been imposed on a basic industry on "a fool's basis."

"This tax and its method of imposition is sufficient cause to enable the people of Canada to demand an immediate resignation of the Bennett-Rhodes Cabinet," Mr. Slaght said. "Premier Bennett himself has described the gold mining industry as the backbone of Canadian financial structure during the depression. They then proceed overnight to break the back of this industry."

The increased gold price during the last year resulted in thousands of prospectors and other mining men finding employment and properties, unable to operate before, had re-opened with outside capital pouring into the Dominion, Mr. Slaght continued.

"Eighty per cent. of the entire new tax will come out of the pockets of the people of the Province of Ontario, because 80 per cent. of the gold production of the Dominion of Canada comes from this province," he said.

BIG GOLD STRIKE YIELDS $56 TON MAY CAUSE RUSH

much talk. For several days The Examiner has been striving to run the story of the find to its true foundation, but only yesterday was Mr. McBride's important part in the undertaking learned. The blacksmith, who is highly-regarded throughout this district and is known as a man who is too practical to chase after myths, to-day was prevailed upon to discuss the gold find.

Interesting Story

Details of the story make it all the more interesting. Moses Smoke, aged Alderville Reservation Indian, has a big role in it.

"It came about this way," Mr. McBride related, "Moses has been a friend of mine for years. I have done good turns for him now and then. It had been talked around here that the old Indian sometimes would say that he knew where there was gold.

"One day he told me about the gold he knew about. I became interested. So one day last summer I jumped in the car, taking Moses with me, and I told him we'd go and see this place where the gold was. Well we did."

"Where is the strike located?" the reporter asked.

"Well, now that's a secret," he answered.

"Well, tell us just the approximate spot. What township is it in?"

In Cavendish

"Cavendish Township, but that's all I'm going to say now."

Mr. McBride said that Moses Smoke had known about the gold for many years. "His father-in-law told him about it. He kept the location a secret until he showed me the place.

"I saw the stuff all right, and I dug out several samples. I shipped them to the Toronto gold assayer and he reports that its worth up to $56 a ton. That news we got only recently."

Assured in his own mind that he had found something big, Mr. McBride told some of his friends about it. They agreed to come in with him and help with the work of further prospecting. Eight claims were staked out around the spot.

Trucked in Shack

Bruce Sidey, of Bewdley, in an interview with The Examiner last night, admitted that last Fall he had carried sections of a shack on his father's truck for Mr. McBride into the location of the gold strike. "I took a lot of stuff up there for them," he said. "Everything was set up ship-shape and I understand they are going up there to do more work as soon as the roads are good."

He would not say where he took the supplies, stating that it was a secret.

Aluminum is the most abundant metal in the earth's crust; in fact, the quantity is exceeded only by that of two other elements, oxygen and silicon.

FARMER, WIFE BURN TO DEATH NEAR FLINTON

Hired Man, Neighbor Woman Escape—Blame Sap on Stove Boiling Over.

HOME IS RAZED.

Fred Dion Terribly Injured in Effort to Rescue Mrs. Dion Dies in Belleville Hospital.

BELLEVILLE, April 20. — Mrs. Fred Dion, 35, Flinton, was burned to death in her home situated two miles west of Flinton, early yesterday, when fire of an unknown origin destroyed the frame home, while her husband succumbed to burns, received in attempting to rescue her from the blazing inferno, late yesterday afternoon, at the Belleville General Hospital. The man was terribly burned about the back, face, legs and hands, and his death was not unexpected by Dr. J. J. Robinson, who attended on his admission.

The hired man, Murray Woods, and a neighbor, Mrs. Jane Demore, an aged woman, who were in the house at the time, escaped, but Mrs. Dion was overcome by smoke, and before her husband could carry her to safety she succumbed, he escaping the fire by the narrowest of margins.

It is understood they were boiling down sap at the time of the fire, and that the sap boiled over on the stove, causing the whole downstairs to become ignited at one time, so swiftly did the fire spread. Dr. Mather, coroner of Tweed, attended the scene, and Provincial Constable Hill of Madoc was also at the scene, and the coroner has ordered an inquest, which will be held at Flinton in the near future.

Hired Man Awakens

The blaze was first discovered by Woods, who immediately awoke Dion and shouted to the two women who were sleeping upstairs. Mrs. Demore reached the stairs and was pulled to safety, but repeated shouts to the remaining woman in the house brought no results.

Woods went to the home of Albert Dion for help, and when they returned Fred Dion was running about the yard practically naked, his clothing having been burned from his back. Panicstricken, he had reentered the house in an attempt to rescue his wife and safe a few articles of furniture.

Mrs. Dion was formerly Harriet Perau of Minneapolis, where her family still resides; Dion is a farmer and a well-known local truckman and formerly resided in Tweed.

An inquest will be held. Part of the remains of Mrs. Dion were taken from the debris early to-day.

The Body of Mr. Dion was released in this city late yesterday afternoon and taken to Flinton, where a double funeral will be held for the victims.

MACKENZIE KING FIGHTS AGAINST MARKETING BILL

Claims It Will Destroy Individual Initiative—Measure Makes Slow Progress.

FAVORED BY C.C.F.

Stevens Upholds Proposition —Unusual, But Extraordinary Conditions Necessary.

OTTAWA, April 20 (C.P.).—Described alternatively as socialistic, unconstitutional, a violation of liberties cherished for generations and as a matter of simple necessity the Government's marketing bill continues its slow progress through the House of Commons. It has yet to receive second reading.

Yesterday the House of Commons witnessed the co-operative commonwealth federation and the Conservative party ranged on one side in support of the bill against an embattled opposition led by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader.

Mr. King in a lengthy speech denounced the bill as a negation of parliamentary government as a step which would destroy liberty, ambition and individual initiative and moved an amendment declaring the policy of the Liberal party in the matter of marketing.

The amendment would defeat the bill and it declares the House is ready to proceed with a marketing measure which would not confer unusual and autocratic powers on bodies apart from parliament.

Woodsworth Favorable.

From J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the C.C.F., came the assertion the bill was the introduction of Socialism. He congratulated the Government on the adoption of a part of the C.C.F. platform, although most of his speech was devoted to criticism of terms of the bill. The one satisfactory thing from his point of view was that it committed the Conservative party to control of industry. He thought it should go further and apply to all products instead of being limited to natural products.

Robert Gardiner, leader of the United Farmers of Alberta, and spokesman for the Farmer wing of the C.C.F., endorsed the bill. He was prepared to support experiments on a substantial scale in an effort to work out a system of marketing which would give the producer a fair show.

Different Conditions.

Conditions had changed in recent years, said Hon. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce. In criticizing the bill, Mr. King appeared to have forgotten the world was passing through an economic crisis. The doctrines of government and of trade propounded by the Liberal leader might have fitted in well in some period before the war.

The bill was simply an effort to secure for the producer of natural products a measure of control over his products. The agriculturalists of Canada, almost 50 per cent. of the population, were laboring under a price condition which made it almost impossible for them to carry on.

This was due mainly to two sets of factors, said Mr. Stevens. The nations of the world, impelled by fear or necessity, had erected barriers to trade, quotas, high tariffs and embargoes had disrupted trade. Moreover, the internal economy of Canada as well as of other nations had been disturbed.

Control In Wrong Hands.

A potent factor in this had been the growth of huge corporations for the marketing and processing of farm products. Control had passed from the hands of the producer into the hands of the processor and the Government planned by the bill to right this condition.

It was true the bill was unusual but the people were looking for something out of the ordinary. To Mr. King's references to the history of Parliamentary Government, the magna charta and the bill of rights, Mr. Stevens' answer was "what has that got to do with the price of eggs or butter?"

The measure, argued Mr. Stevens, was no greater violation of the principles of parliamentary govefnment than many regulatory acts now on the statute books.

The relief bill, subject of the last long debate in the Commons, received third reading in the Senate yesterday and will to-day receive the Royal assent.

According to a story from the north a number of farmers are deserting their farms to seek employment on the northern construction work. There is said to be no idle men in sections of the north country and farmers are unable to obtain help for spring work. Wood cutters are at a premium and prices for wood next year are expected to be higher than for the last several years.

The Department of Game and Fisheries have banned the 'jigging' of suckers this season in Victoria County, the grief of the small boy as well as many adults knows no bounds. It is claimed that a lot of game fish are injured every season by this process of fishing. Many claim, however, that suckers destroy the spawn of game fish to such an extent that the odd bass or lunge taken or injured means nothing compared with the destruction of spawn.

According to an announcement issued by the local Welfare Board thirty-eight local married men are willing to work on the northern highways at the present wage of $12 per week. Relief recipients have been notified that they will not receive further help unless they do everything in their power to help themselves The relief has been cut considerably in the past few weeks. Around forty single men have entered their applications for jobs in the road camps.

Jack Gould, of Fenelon Falls, was seriously injured in a motor accident near St. Catharines on Wednesday. He was taken to a hospital in that city and his relatives left for his bedside.

JOHANNESBURG (CP) — The South African Railways have awarded a contract to the North British Locomotive Company of Glasgow, for 50 locomotives at a cost of $1,500,000.

COIN WORTH $300 FOUND IN GARDEN

Gardening Now Has New Appeal for Winnipeg Gardener.

KING GEORGE II. REIGN

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

WINNIPEG, Man., April 20.—Who says gardening doesn't pay?

Last fall, Jack Harrison, an amateur gardener of this city, unearthed a queer copper coin while he was digging soil for his garden. As a result of recent inquiries he has learned that the coin is extremely rare and has a value of from $300 to $500.

The coin, whose face and reverse are reproduced in the accompanying photograph, has, according to numismatists, only two or three counterparts in North America. It is believed by the coin experts to have been one used in trade between the English and the Spaniards and minted in the reign of George II. in England.

Mr. Harrison has had a photograph of the coin sent to the British Museum, from whom he is expecting a lucrative offer.

When the Romans landed in England, they found London already a town of considerable importance.

SHOWBOAT DAYS GOES OVER BIG

even before the last note had died away.

And there were the Show Boat Belles, gay lassies who danced like professionals.

Minature Program

It is difficult to pick out favorites in a production that abounds in good things. The "show within a show effect was a clever episode Jefferson Dillard (with Harold Coleman as this handsome well-dressed owner of the "Show Boat"), announces a partial pre-view of the program which is to be presented at the evening performance in his river theatre, and various numbers are presented that may be termed the outstanding features of the whole production.

In it, Aunt Jinny (Miss Trucie Pearson has this colorful role of the old plantation "Mammy') sings in sweet, clear tone, "Carolina"; Miss Forster and George Nicholls dance a "Bowery" number with abandon; the city's expert tap dancers, Miss Thelma Buller and Miss Isabel Duffus, give one of their smart routines to a rousing encore; Ken McCannan, who, with Jim Ridyard, represent a pair of robust backwoodsmen, sings in splendid voice the lovely favorite, "Without a Song"; the Showboat Belles (a zippy group of pretty girls in blue slacks and tiny berets, white "vest" blouses and red scarves) do a novelty "Rag Doll" dance that has to be repeated, so insistent is the applause; and George Coleman (the Sheriff), in that voice that promises so much for the future of this popular singer, gave his feature number, "That's Why Darkies Are Born," to thunderous applause.

The Show Boat, owned and managed by Jeff Dillard, anchored on a levee in the Old South, forms the reason for the title and the action of the production, which hinges on the love for the owner for the dainty Virginia Lee Stewart, a part notably handled by Miss Florence Glenny, who looked as pretty as a picture in each episode and was a real dream of sparkling beauty in the finale. Her voice, dainty, clearly etched and brilliant, was eminently suited to the role, and had plenty of sweet scope in her main solo number, "Man of Mine," in the duett with Jeff, "Let's Pretend," and the "Dream House' episode with Jeff and chorus. This last was an especially fetching musical number with a little house, built for two, arranged on the stage by the chorus.

Virginia Lee's parents are the talkative Amelia, a role very well taken by Miss Dorothy Irons, and her husband, Colonel Andy Stewart, a part in which Dr. E. M. Crough was exceptionally good. He imparted a quality of sincerity to the action that made it extremely effective and had a gay and boisterous time with a group of lady friends in the song and chorus, "Dont' Do That."

The "Cut-Ups'

The comedy relief was well taken care of. Two black-face gents were "Lightnin (Jack Clayton), singing "The Sun's in My Heart," in emerald green outfit, and his buddy, "Midnight" (Ed Riley), whose antics amused the crowd on every appearance.

As for Effie (Miss Edna Forster), and Sammy (George Nicholls), a pair of energetic comedians who could hardly be surpassed in a show of professional type, well, you will just have to see them to realize how funny they are. They make an irresistible duo. Nothing better could be imagined than their presentation of the "Ten, Twent, Thirt 'skit in the box-office scene. Their act alone is worth the admission price, and there was no makebelieve in the applause which followed every appearance of this versatile pair.

George Nicholls nearly caused a riot also in the Honey Bee Minstrel Revue presented by Kinsmen and others, in the second act. He sang "Pretty Polly Perkins," with a marionette effect to his dance ,that, combined with his expert stepping and acting and his queer outfit, produced a hilarious effect, not alone on the audience, but on the "beauty chorus" of gaily garbed men who sat behind him and who rose to join in the general antic-mad atmosphere.

This was an interesting interlude, with Dick Lush as good as always in the role of snappy interlocutor, and the circle men in gorgeous outfits of mauve and white, gold and cerise satins.

Solos included in the minstrel revue were thoes of Dr. Ralph Honey, "Ain't You Glad"; Ted Chalmers, singing "Good Morning Glory"; Bert Lacey, in "Gather Lip Rouge While You May"; Ed Riley, singing "This Little Pig Went to Market"; Harold Coleman, in "Over Somebody Else's Shoulder," and the high spot of the comedy vocal numbers, George Nicholls' "Pretty Polly Perkins," with its devastating effect on the gravity of circle and audience alike.

The Show Boat Belles did a "Plunk" dance in this interval, which brought them another rousing encore. These girls certainly added to the joy of life during the evening, as did all the ladies of the chorus, who danced in light-footed fashione and were garbed gaily and beautifully. All the choral numbers bore the same mark of expert training and careful attention by the girls to the demands of the performance.

It is seldom that an amateur production has been so beautifully costumed. An apparently endless succession of dresses were on view, both for chorus and principals, and all of them were lovely in the extreme. These dainty chorines wore period frocks, with panniers and gleaming satins, lacy patnelettes and poke bonnets, while another chorus saw them in muslin gowns and hats, and still another brought them out in the briefest of shorts and with gleaming loose bodices of white satin, silver-spangled. The opening and closing ensembles were colorful in the extreme, and the division of the chorus, with one portion simulating Southern planter outfits in butternut hues, with broad-leaved hats, was especially effective.

For the wedding which marks the finale to the show, Miss Glenny wears an exquisite frock of silver metallic lace, gleaming and sparkling in the light, with matching long veil and cap. And her bridegroom appears in the delicate mauve coat, with buff trousers. Even the drummer boys who tap the company in, in one scene, are in soldiers suits of red. Certainly no detail in training, preparation, costuming, lighting and dancing has been overlook in this production.

Even the Honey Bee Minstrel Revue opens with a solo by a very appropriate person, Dr. Honey.

So we think if you see "Show Boat Days" on its third performance tonight (the childrens' matinee had a packed house yesterday afternoon), you will agree that it is an extremely worthwhile successor to the two previous successes (in the dramatic line) of the Kinsmen Club.

Mrs. George Nicholls presided very capably at the piano for the musical direction of the show.

Comedians in blackface for the Minstrel Revue were Dr. Ralph Honey, Ed Riley, Jack Clayton and Paul Johnson, with circle men in Alex Elliott, Ted Chalmers, Vern Selkirk, Ernest Watson, Percy Gray, Bert Lacey, Bob Stanley, Alfred Archambault, Jack Dobbin, Charles Carson, Ellsworth Deyell and Max Clark.

The entire group of Show Boat Belles included the following: Flora McBride, Hazel Barry, Edna Bernier, Hazel Bradley, Marion Whaley, Edith Guiry, Thelma Buller, Jean Nichols, Isabel Duffus, Gladys Cowan, Florence Riley, Helen Dawson, Ann Simpson, Janet Young, Adele Picard, Alberta Wright, Marjory Laing, Olga Huffman, Elaine Judd, Marion Moore, Ruth McFadden, Helen Rogers, Doris Ackford, Myrtle Burns, Olo Gillespie, Dorothy Marshall, Jerry Hogan, Dorothy Whatley, "Bud" McCoy, Faye Dunford, Dona McDonald, Helen Turner, Helen Banks, Norma Dunford, Thelma McMillan, Ruby Jackson, Dorothy Moore, Leona McMillan, Mary Kingsbury, Hazel Scharizma, Dorothy Lowden, Rosaline Clancy, Evelyn Routley and G. Wilson.

UNCOVERING THE IMPOSTORS.

The suspicion that everywhere a large number of "chiselers" have been taking advantage of the unemployment situation to obtain assistance to which they had no moral claim is given striking confirmation by the results of a special investigation conducted in Toronto.

Although the investigators have only been at work for eighteen days, they have already discovered 502 families in Toronto receiving relief to which they were not entitled, and 447 more families receiving a greater amount of assistance than their circumstances warranted.

As a result of these findings the first group have been cut off entirely, while members of the second have had their relief allowances reduced.

The discovery of so many impostors convinces The Examiner that it would be good business for every community of any size to conduct a similar probe to weed out the undeserving.

A thorough investigation, even if it entailed more expense than the present method of checking up on relief operations, would in the light of Toronto's experience pay for itself many times over by removing from the lists families who are not entitled to help and who are fraudulently dipping out of the public treasury.

The burden of relief might be materially lightened if the impostors could be chased away.

WHAT THEY CONDEMNED.

The Toronto Star, studying the result of the South Oxford by-election, has arrived at the conclusion that what it terms Mr. Bennett's usurpation of the rights of parliament is the chief explanation of the record majority given the Liberal candidate.

"The outstanding point made in the South Oxford campaign," says the Star, "is the disposition of Prime Minister Bennett to rule in his personal capacity without the aid of his Cabinet and ignoring the House of Commons, of which, at most, he is but the leader of a majority of the members."

Frankly, The Examiner does not agree with that opinion.

We firmly believe that it was not Mr. Bennett's methods, but a conviction among the majority of the electors that those methods had failed that was the dominating factor in the South Oxford by-election.

If as a result of the Prime Minister's policies the unemployment problem had been solved, prosperity restored to rural Canada and business and industry had been returned to normal levels, we fancy the voters in South Oxford would have registered a very different verdict.

They would not have cared how many rights of parliament Mr. Bennett had usurped so long as the consequences were beneficial to the country generally; their ballots on Monday were really cast in condemnation of what they regarded as the Prime Minister's failure to make good, rather than as a rebuke to him for abrogating the rights of parliament.

If he had brought back general prosperity we are certain that there would have been no quarrel with his methods.

THE TAX ON GOLD.

While the tax of $10 an ounce on gold announced by Hon. E. N. Rhodes has produced a storm of protest from the mining industry, the reaction in other circles is favorable to the new levy.

Mining leaders protest that this unexpected blow will be disastrous to producers of low-grade ore and harmful to the whole gold mining industry, that it will cripple an organization that has been a bulwark to Canada throughout the depression, and that it will check the flow of capital into the industry, killing off the development that might otherwise be anticipated.

Indignation on their part is increased because they had been assured, they assert, that the mining industry would be left alone in the tax plans of the Government.

On the other hand, the gold tax is regarded in other quarters as a reasonable and justifiable levy, those who hold this view pointing out that the Government must have money and that the gold mining industry is in a flourishing position and well able to pay. To support that opinion they argue that with the producers sure of at least $30 an ounce for their gold they are in a better position than they were last year with an average gold price of $28.70, and over 50 per cent. better than they were with gold at its former price.

One of those who can see no ill-effect from the tax is Manitoba's Minister of Mines, Hon. J. S. McDiarmid, who declares that the price of stocks is not so very important. "It's the production that counts," says the Minister, and intimates that sound mining companies will continue to produce regardless of the tax.

THE MARKETING BILL.

It is doubtful whether the majority of farmers have realized the importance and significance of the marketing bill now before Parliament.

The legislation apparently was not an issue in the South Oxford by-election and had no influence in winning support for the Government on that occasion, despite the fact that it is the most ambitious attempt to improve conditions for Canada's basic industry that has been taken by this country.

"Rusticus," the rural contributor to the Stratford Beacon-Herald, whose articles on farm problems are always of interest, deals with this vital question thus:

"A few weeks ago the Hon. Robert Weir, Federal Minister of Agriculture, introduced into the House of Commons a bill that in the opinion of the 'Farmer's Advocate' will enable farmers to hang together—rather than hang separately. The proposed marketing bill is being loudly praised by our agricultural leaders. They certainly expect much good to result from it—and from what we can learn about the measure there is only one obstacle that will prevent the bill from being a real boon to the Canadian producer, and strange as it may seem, that one stumbling block is the farmer.

"Farmers with whom we have discussed the new marketing bill have apparently lost faith in any Government-sponsored scheme to help the man on the land. They point out that the proposed marketing board is going to give the Government another chance to put another army of white-collared men into soft berths, and there no doubt is some truth in this.

"On the other hand, when we consider how valuable a board with powers to direct the mass marketing of our products could be, we are inclined to look forward to the day when its regulatory powers begin to function.

"Does the average farmer realize that if he and every other farmer had dumped about three per cent. of their cream down the sewer last summer the cream producers would have received something like five million dollars more in their cream cheques? In other words, we produced 125 million pounds of butter, with a surplus over home requirements of three million. It was the three pounds in every 125 that set the price for the whole butter production.

"The proposed board could export that small surplus even at a loss, and producers would receive a good deal more for their cream. Bacon hogs are in the same class. Only a very small percentage are exported, but those comparatively few export hogs govern the market. Cattle, apples, fruits, beans and many other farm products are selling at below production costs because of a very small surplus over home requirements.

"We have tried many voluntary co-operative marketing schemes. In some cases the majority of producers were signed up, and then the few on the outside got the greatest benefit because the regular trade was willing to pay higher prices to break up the co-operative. Under the new act, every one is in. The area—it may be several counties, a province, or the Dominion—will be regulated. We are being offered a radical change in the marketing of our produce, so radical a scheme that we cannot as yet appreciate its importance. The proposed marketing board can boost prices as much as the American NRA without those features of controlled production they have under the NRA. The American plan is apparently doing more for the city man than the farmer. The Canadian plan at least starts at the bottom to build up our economic structure. Fortunately the Government realizes that when the farmer is prosperous everyone else will be the same.

"In this connection we might point out that while prices for farm products are considerably higher this spring, the farmer has no more loose money. Every cent he gets hold of must be spent; in some cases he is purchasing actual necessities he should have purchased a year or two ago. It is to be hoped that Parliament loses no time in setting up the marketing board. We are anxious to learn how the thing is going to work."

BRITAIN SEES IT THROUGH.

Reading the story of the British budget the thing that comes to mind is that famous letter which Walter Page wrote to Woodrow Wilson at the beginning of the war: "These people think and talk and fight as well as ever in their history." For it is a wonderful thing, this British budget, wonderful in the face of world storm, more wonderful still in the light of Britain's position less than three years ago.

Here is a nation which, in 1931, all but faced national bankruptcy. Bled white by taxes, crushed by unemployment, her trade and shipping depressed, she was unable to meet her world commitments, was driven off gold. To-day, three years later, she is once more in her old proud position of the first exporting country in the world. With her industries revived, her ships once more on the Seven Seas, her unemployment figures falling, she faces the world with a surplus of $195,000,000, cuts taxation, does better by her employees and her people. There has been nothing like it in post-war history.

* * * *

Britain has achieved all this without ballyhoo, without fuss or tumult, without departing from orthodox finance. While prophets have been dinning it into the world that capitalism was finished and democracy doomed, while economic theorists and money scientists have been preaching their dismal doctrines, Britain, ignoring all nostrums and standing by her old parliamentary traditions, has done more than all the experimenters and dictatorships combined to point the way back to recovery. Her leaders have not worn colored shirts nor used up the alphabet to build up a bureaucracy nor shouted slogans and mottoes. Depending upon the old fibre of their people they fought along the lines of hard work and thrift and reasonable sacrifice, were, as Emerson said of them years ago, just a little staunch-er in a cloudy day.

* * * *

And British recovery goes on. In the four weeks ending March 17th unemployment dropped by 116,-000, this as against a decline of 80,000 in the same period of 1932, and with the employment gain extending to practically all industries. For more than a year now, every week and every month in Britain have seen people going back to work. No longer is there talk of depression; so much so that after cutting taxes, restoring unemployment relief cuts and five per cent. of Civil Service pay reductions, Chancellor Chamberlain budgets for another surplus next year of $146,000,000. In Italy, under the great dictator, Mussolini, they are trying to make up a tremendous deficit by cutting salaries. In France they are striving desperately to balance the budget. In the United States they are spending $10,000,000,000 to retrieve prosperity, increasing their debt to $32,-000,000,000. While these things go on, while practically every nation in the world is in the red, this whether under dictatorships or pseudo-dictatorships, Britain, scorning Fascism on the one hand and Communism on the other, marching on under the parliamentary institutions she has known for hundreds of years, makes a magnificent recovery. It is not merely a great victory for Britain; it is a magnificent score for democracy.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The howls of the mining interests over the new tax on gold threaten to drown out the cheers of the housewives at the reduction in the levy on sugar.

Mr. Rhodes' Budget is a bid for more Empire trade, and in that aspect should command general approval throughout Canada.

Cheaper radio licenses are predicted from Ottawa. The people of this country can stand a lot of that kind of news without weakening.

As the Globe puts it, the Budget is not one to rejoice over, but the conditions disclosed are a lot better than any one expected six months ago. And the trend is still upward.

Just as the darkest hour precedes the dawn, so often in life, when hope is most dismayed, the coming of a happier epoch is at hand. From the day that Spot made his experiment and bore his patient out into the sunshine, surrendering her as it were to the kind offices of nature, Viola began to improve. Very slowly, barely perceptibly, her strength which for so long had seemed to wane rounded the curve and began the difficult ascent. They hardly dared to believe it at first, saying only to each other that she was at least no weaker, but as the golden days slipped by it became apparent that she was indeed gaining ground. The children were allowed one by one to come and see her, and though she spoke but little she enoyed their visits and was not wearied by them. The transparency of her pallor which had so alarmed Tiggie changed gradually to something more nearly approaching the flower-like whiteness which he had observed in earlier days. The purple shadows grew less intense. Her smile became more frequent, and at times her eyes smiled also as though her spirit were slowly emerging from the gloom and rising into the light of day.

They had no intimate talks together in those days, avoiding by mutual consent any topics that might cause her agitation. Such conversation as passed between them might indeed have been overhead by all the world without being construed into anything other than the most casual talk of friends, but Tiggie spent more and more time by her side, and none questioned him for so doing. That his presence gave her pleasure was fully obvious, and Spot, noting the change in her, was the last man in the world to attempt to check anything which might assist towards the improvement.

He was also the last to admit that the change was permanent, but when one day Harvey waylaid him with a strange hunger in his eyes and asked if he might be allowed to congratulate him on the triumph he had achieved he did not repudiate the compliment.

"There is certainly less cause for anxiety," he said, "and I don't think we need fear any sudden relapse now."

"I should like to congratulate her too if it won't upset her," said Harvey. "She knows me, you know."

"I don't see why you shouldn't," said Spot, who regarded the artist an an amiable freak who knew how to gain the favor of children—probably on account of his freakishness. "Don't stay too long, that's all!"

"I'll be discretion itself," declared Harvey, and departed at once with his impulsive gait to pay his respects to the invalid.

She was lying in the corner of the tiny garden in a cranny of the cliff which had come to be regarded as especially her own. Tiggie had been with her for an hour or more and had just gone down to the sea for a bath with the children. Her eyes were open and saw him the mom he paused at the gate, whic as but a yard or two from where she lay.

He stood bareheaded, looking up at her with a certain fireiness, though the gesture with which he sought admittance was full of chivalry.

She raised her hand a little in answer, and he lifted the latch and entered.

"It's all right. I have the doctor's leave," he said as he reached her. "You're better now?"

It was characteristic of him to waste no time in greeting. He did not even take her hand. Conventionality held no appeal for Harvey.

"Yes, thank you. I am better," Viola said, and she did not address him as a stranger though a slight tremor of nervousness assailed her.

"I'm glad of that," said Harvey. "May I sit down?" He took the chair beside her which Tiggie had recently occupied and turned it round deliberately so that he sat with his back to the sea and the sunshine and fully faced her. "It's nice to look at you close," he said. "Peering at you through field glasses at a half mile range isn't nearly so satisfying."

"Oh, did you do that?" said Viola. "I wonder why."

"I wanted to see you," said Harvey. He got up suddenly and adjusted the sunshade which was fixed to the head of her couch. Then he sat down again, surveying her critically. "That's a better effect. They only think of comfort—these people." He spoke with a snort of contempt.

"Doesn't comfort count?" asked Viola, faintly smiling.

He looked at her with a momentary indignation that melted into an answering smile. "Depends what one most wants. But you're just as comfortable with the shade at that angle—and infinitely lovelier."

"Oh, don't!" said Viola with a slight movement of shrinking.

Harvey's brows came together. "I'm sorry,' he said. "But why not? It surely can't matter to you whether you are lovely in my eyes or not."

A faint rare tinge of color rose in her face, and he leaned forward, intently watching her. "It isn't that," she said slowly, after a pause. "I know—quite well—loveliness is only a relative term — the gift of appeal. Certain types"—she spoke rather painfully with her eyes downcast—"appeal only to certain people."

"Well, but that's obvious," said Harvey. "It may not gratify you to know you appeal to me—but I dont see why you should mind. I'm quite a harmless lunatic—at least I think I am."

"Ah!" Her voice was very low. "If I'd only known that—long ago!"

Harvey nodded. "I remember. you were afraid of me—wouldn't believe that the poor crank had his points. Well, I don't blame you, my dear. I was more or less of a wreck in those days. But I didn't mean any harm."

"I know," she said. "I know now."

"How do you know??" he questioned curiously.

"Because of Tiggie." Very simply her answer came. "Because you're Tiggie's friend."

"Oh, my stars!" groaned Harvey. "Some halo—that! I doubt if I can live up to it. But I'll try." His regard was suddenly whimsical. "He's a good lad—Tiggie, though the last person I should have expected you to take up with."

"Do we any of us do—the expected?" murmured Viola. The color had deepened on her face, and Harvey sat watching it with the appreciation of a connoisseur.

"Well, I don't," he said. "And I dare say you don't either. We'll hope not. This world really wouldn't be endurable if everybody toed the line at a given signal. After all, our ancestors only made laws for the fun of breaking 'em, and I don't see why we should take a different view."

"What an extraordinary idea!" said Viola.

Harvey smiled upon her with a kind of amiable mockery. "Not a bit! It's the logical conclusion. I could give you heaps of instances—even in the present day. Cars for one! We won't mention the speed limit—that's too old a joke. But cutouts—the law allows them to be fitted, but not to be used. Baths! The law compels them to be supplied to the doleful poor, and then after 10 days of unabated sunshine makes it a criminal offense if fewer than a dozen people make use of the same water. At least that is what it amounts to. My own idea is that they ought to circulate sea water by means of tunnels throughout the country until it ceases to be an island, and then.."

"Yes? Then ?" said Viola rather breathlessly. This man had an amazing fashion of carrying one along on his own fantastic imagination.

He laughed at her openly. "Well, you can do the rest. When we're joined on to the Sahara even the doleful poor will have to go unwashed. After all, cleanliness is nothing but a form of snobbery—like the rest of civilization. It's completely alien to human nature."

"Oh, really! Are you sure?" said Viola. And then for some reason, caught by the gay mischief of his eyes, she also laughed.

Harvey leaned back in his chair and made a silent gesture of clapping. "I'll wager no one else has done that for you," he said. "Not even the great and solemn Tiggie himself" — he glanced over his shoulder—"who is at present heaving about in the swell like a porpoise. Does he do that for your amusement or his own?"

"His own," said Viola.

Her look followed his to the sunlit sea, and she did not realize that his eyes immediately returned to her face, dwelling upon it with tense concentration.

"Awful old ass—Tiggie!" he suggested. "Look at him, playing the giddy goat with the kids!"

"He can't be a porpoise, an ass, and a goat," objected Viola in her soft voice, still watching the distant scene with a tremulous smile about her lips.

"A mixture of all three," said Harvey, tugging at his beard aggressively. "He won't set the Thames on fire, you know, though I've no doubt he'd help with the rest in putting it out if someone else did."

"Yes, he'd help," she echoed in the tone of one who repeats a thought rather than replies to a spoken remark.

"And he wouldn't grouse to anyone if he burnt his fingers doing it," pursued Harvey. "He's what I should describe as a very good average — with occasional peaks. Nothing great, you know, but—"

"Not great?" breathed Viola. Her eyes suddenly came to his, alive with a resentment that played in their glance like a lambent fire. "You say he is not great?" she said slowly, weighing her words. "Then—you have never met him."

Harvey began to chuckle softly to himself, as though at some secret joke. "Well, tell me your idea of him," he said, "if it won't tire you too much! I'd awfully like to know."

"My idea of him!" The fire died down in her eyes; they sought the shining sea again with an expression that held both pride and pathos.

A Thought

AGREEABLENESS

Come, be agreeable, for you will have little competition, and are pretty sure to succeed.

An agreeable person lights up the room like a lamp.

He is like the shade of a big tree on a hot day.

He is like a drink of something that tinkles in the pitcher when you're really thirsty.

He is like love when you're lonesome, bed when you're tired, a breeze when you're stifling, food when you're empty, and money when you're broke.

Be agreeable! Study to make people like you. Make love to the world!

Life's a mix-up, anyway, that none of us understand.

There are all sorts of inexplicable thorns and tragedies, buffets and chagrins.

And most people are a bit sorry for themselves. Hence, ugly.

But you—you be agreable! Try it, and see what happens.

Wife desertion is increasing in many parts of England.

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

DANCING WAS DENOUNCED

On this date, in 1742 Bishop Pontbriand of Quebec issued a pastoral letter denouncing dancing of all kinds and especially mixed dancing. Therein he was following an example set by all his predecessors from Laval and an example for all his successors. Morals have always been the care of the Roman Catholic church, and some times the bishops threatened all the penalties of the church on those who had the temerity to indulge in any of the social fashions which were condemned as sins. But dancing was not the only sin; theatrical performances, late dinners, luxury in dress, immodest curls, the wearing of trinkets and giggling or flirting in church were all banned for those who would be good Christians.

Dire penalties were proposed, and sometimes enforced. One bishop, as an example of punishment which sometimes followed disobedience, recalled the fate of the unhappy Pretextata, a lady of high lineage well know to St. Jerome. In this age of extraordinary freedom restrictions imposed upon the inhabitants seem narrow, but they were quite necessary in the primitive days of early New France. Yet the denunciations of the bishops against frivolity were no worse than those of the Puritans of New England or of the Methodists in Canada up to a few years ago. The bishops threatened spiritual punishment; the Puritans practised bodily punishment. Less than a century ago people were put in the stocks at Toronto for very minor offences against morals. What a boom there would be in the lumber market if nowadays all offenders against modesty or guilty of lascivious dancing were condemned to the stocks!

The World Situation Becomes More Dangerful as the Fascist Movement Spreads in Europe

(By H. W. L. MAHOOD)

Has Democracy Failed?

Why has Democracy seemed to fail in parts of Europe and in America? The answer is now apparent. The predatory Capitalist class found that it could not continue long to function within a Democratic environment. The ideal of Democracy has so leavened the masses of workers in the industries and in agriculture that capitalism could no longer control legislation. Public sentiment has grown so strong that predatory capitalism must give an accounting of its stewardship. Old methods of reducing the standards of living of the working class to produce profits for the few came to the end of the way. No! Democracy has not failed in Europe. It is capitalism that has failed. It is predatory capital that is in the real danger. The struggle is on between the workers who have been robbed by parasitic wealth and the privileged class. This dominating class finds that it cannot carry on.

Democracy has always been obstacled by predatory wealth. Predatory capitalism is now making its last stand. It has succeeded, to an extent, to divert the mind of the masses from the real issues. Scarecrows have been set up. Innocent people have been made targets. An appeal to nationalism is now under way. Jews are baited. Minorities are suppressed. Foreign dangers call for armaments. All this to divert the mind of the people from the real cause of depression. The poor have been impoverished and the people were awakening. Then came Mussolini, and Hitler, and Dolfuss. The chief task of these is to save predatory capitalism. The capitalists are behind them. The sway of dictatorships cannot be long continued in the face of this increasingly enlightened age.

German Capitalists Outwit European Rivals

GERMANY

This very day as these lines are being written word was received from a recent traveller, in both France and Germany, to the effect that France gives the impression of exhaustion, while Germany seems quite prosperous. Europe—much of Europe—is poverty stricken. Worse off by far than Canada, or the republic to the south of us. But in the midst of the continental European destitution Germany is visibly becoming one of the actually prosperous. Germany was carved to a nicety by the Versailles Treaty. From that treaty gathering she came away empty handed.

For Germany to have pulled herself together, to have come to believe in herself again, is little short of the miraculous. This is the reason France fears her. This is the reason France fights German rearmament. The Germans are thrifty. They are indomitable. They have not been conquered. They are rising from the dust. If they leave behind them paganism, and the imperial impulse, and build for the good of the world, a new and greater Germany will have arisen.

One German method ought to be challenged by the rest of the European nations. Germany has crushed all internal resistance. She has trampled on the workers, and the peasants. Hitler will not countenance opposition. The individual is lost in the mass in Germany. When the individual consents to count for nothing in government the material is sure to become the chief concern. The soul is lost. There is sure to be a rebound from this excessive materialistic consent. Through the Catholic church, and through the Protestant there will come a revival of religion in Germany. And not till then will Germany come to her better self.

A Part Of The World But Little Known

CHINA

It might with truth be said to be the part of the inhabited world the least known. And it is having lots of trouble. Folks who relish the names of Oriental cities and provinces will take pleasure in the addition of a name seldom if ever mentioned in Occidental literature. Sinkiang is Chinese. Turkestan—Chinese Turkestan was the old name.

War is raging in that part of the East. Three factions are fighting it out. In the southern part of the province the Mohammedans are dominant. They have a beautiful but little known city known as Kashgar. The Mohammedans living in this part are intelligent and civilized. Wild Chinese tribes in the north have become Mohammedan. They retain all their pagan barbarities. The Mohammedan religion has done them but little good. They scrupulously observe the forms of worship without manifesting the spirit of Mohammedanism. The third faction is the Buddhist Chinese. The government of the province is Chinese. The war is a feud. More than two thousand have been massacred in one night. Not much of the fighting is done in the open. Feuds are of the night.

Three nations are vitally concerned about the fate of Sinkiang. Great Britain, and Russia, and Japan are the three. Japan would like to conquer the province. Russia is jealous of the friendly relations that have been cultivated by Japan. Japan is friendly with a purpose. Russia has no territorial ambitions touching Sinkiang. Trade relations are her concern. In this Russia has succeeded. Every move made by Japan in the East is suspicioned by the Chinese. The Japanese when it suits their purpose can be so suave. The Chinaman is either for or decidedly against. Sincerity is a characteristic of the Chinese people.

Sinkiang has a territory of 400,-000 square miles. The population is about 2,000,000. The natural resources are mostly beneath the surface. Here endeth the present lesson.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

THAT'S A MARRIAGE

Young fellow, I see you smiling ....I saw you turn and say something to the young thing at your side and I saw both of you turn and look over that middle-aged couple sitting over there at the table.

I'll try to guess what you said and what you thought....You saw those two over there, sitting so quietly together, eating their dinner. The woman is reading a book. The man is looking through his newspaper. They do not talk much. Hardly at all. Sometimes the man reads something from the paper. His wife listens, replies, returns to her book. He goes back to his paper....They have that married look, you say to your little friend. You think it's a dull look, too....You said something to her about how terrible it must be to be married so long that you become like those two and have nothing to say to each other. To live in so faded, so habitual a fashion that they exist practically in silence.

You and she will never be like those other two. You tell her so. She agrees. You will always find life exciting, every instant of it. You'll always have something to say. She'll always have something to reply....You shudder at the thought of your marriage ever fading like that.

Don't be silly....I know those middle-aged people over there.... That's not a dull marriage. It is an exciting one, really. Those two are happily married, and I hope when you are 30 or 25 years older you two will be as happy as ever.... They've come through the years together. They've faced years of pain and suffering and heartbreak and joy and ecstasy and content.... They aren't alike. They are very different from each other, but they have succeeded in adjusting their vital differences to each other, without ignoble surrender but with decent consideration....They were lovers, they are lovers still, but they are also good friends. They have added liking to love and made a rich marriage of it.

Don't you dare to pity them. Envy them....I wish you as great a victory as they have won!

KIWANIS CLUB PLAYS HOST TO Y.M.C.A. BOARD

Opening Gun of Financial Campaign Fired at Weekly Luncheon.

LOSING 2ND GENERATION.

Fred Smith of Toronto Central 'Y' Addresses Club.

The opening gun in the Y.M.C.A. financial campaign which gets under way on Monday next, was fired at the Kiwanis luncheon at Empress Hotel today noon when the Board of Directors of the local Y. M. C. A. were the guests of the Kiwanians.

President A. B. Gates of the Kiwanis Club presided, calling upon Immediate Past President W. A. Richardson of the 'Y' to introduce his associates on the Board. Mr. Richardson referred to the financial campaign which is about to be launched in an effort to raise $7,500 for the furtherance of the work the 'Y' is performing in the building of good citizens.

Besides the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A., there were also present as guests four members of the Lindsay Kiwanis Club including Albert Barton former resident of this city, and also Mose Yokum who presented two delightful piano solos.

Fred Smith, executive secretary of Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. as guest speaker for the occasion was introduced by Ross L. Dobbin, president of the local Y.M.C.A.

After extending greetings from the Toronto Y.M.C.A. Mr. Smith recalled previous visits to this city and referred to the fact that 'Bill' Hastings, president of Central 'Y' was a member of the local 'Y' in his youth.

Quoting from the works of Elbert Hubbard, the speaker said the life of a "grubby, tousled-heady boy is fraught with great possibilities". He dealt with the efforts that are being made by the Y.M.C.A., the Kiwanis Club and kindred organizations in developing the possibilities that exist in the youth of the country, and dwelt upon the importance of such work. Boyhood, he said, was a time of life when the deepest impressions for good or evil might be made on that life.

Speaking of his lengthy experience as a worker among boys and young men, Mr. Smith related that at the time he was a printer on the Toronto Telegram in October 1903, he formed a gymnasium class for newsboys, and later developed a Bible class among the same group of boys.

Referrng to the many trials and problems of youth, Mr. Smith believed that the unemployment question presented one of the biggest problems today.

He knew of young men of twenty-five or more who had never had a job, and in the hearts of many of those young men, he said, was growing a feeling that they were not wanted.

Losing 2nd Generation.

"We lost one generation of youth in the Great War," the speaker warned, "and if we are not mindful we are faced with the possibility of losing another generation of youth through unemployment."

While he believed that conditions were steadily improving all over the Dominion, Mr. Smith thought there would always be a large percentage of the population who could not find employment. It was of vital importance, he urged, that the enforced leisure of these yong men should be spent in healthful and constructive recreation, and he claimed thta was the big work that the "Y" organization was engaged in, among other activities.

The program of the "Y" organization he said streessed work, citizenship, family and sex. philosophy and religion. As an old pthysical direteor, the speaker believed a healthy body to be a thing of paramount importance, and he urged the parctice of daily exercises as a means of keeping fit to tackle the problems of everyday existence.

Mr. Smith was tendered the thanks of the club, very ably expressed by the president.

"Electric Woman" Is Brought To Rome

ROME, April 20.—(A.P.)—Guglielmo Marconi, as president of the National Research Institute, had Trieste's "electric woman" brought to Rome to-day.

Marconi wanted to give specialists here an opportunity to examine this strange woman, from whose breast emanates a mysterious blue light.

Arriving in Rome this morning after the 500 mile train trip, the now-famous subject was met by Professor De Sanctis, director of the Nervous Ailments Clinic of Rome University.

The woman was taken immediately to the clinic. She will be tested by the use of special apparatus, probably in the presence of the famed inventor of wireless.

Marconi's interest was aroused when he read copious columns in the newspaper teling how a light strong enough to dimly illuminate a room emerges from the breast of Signorina Monaro, several times at night.

Girl is Vaccinated While Milking Cow

ORWELL, Ont., April 19 (CP) Miss Velma Gard, daughter of a farmer here, is recovering today from an unsual accidental vaccination that caused her severe pain and a lengthy illness.

Miss Gard was accidentally vaccinated while she was milking a cow afflicted with cow pocks. A small cut on the girl's finger was infected by contact with the animal and resulted in her face, arms and legs becoming covered with pocks. She was rendered helpless and had to go to bed.

GOLD TRADING RETURNS TODAY NORMAL TREND

Early Recessions Erased in Afternoon Rally in Big Gold Shares.

TRADE SLOW AT TIMES.

TORONTO, April 20 (C.P.).—Narrow adjustments, mainly upward, marked operations in the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. The urgent selling that prevailed on Thursday following announcement of a tax on gold sales, was missing and trading was sluggish at times. A mild rally developed in the afternoon in the big gold shares, and early recessions were erased and in some cases gains were substituted. Advances predominated over gains at the close.

Buying of the shares of the gold producers improved in the afternoon and the whole group closed strong. Lake Shore, McIntyre, Bralorne and Pioneer were up 50 to 75 cents and Teck and Hargraves 5 to 10 cents each. Dome closed 25 up at 27.25 and Hollinger unchanged.

DRUNKEN BRAWL ENDS IN KILLING

Coroner and Provincial Constable Bring Body Out to Sudbury.

TASK VERY ARDUOUS.

SUDBURY, Ont., April 20 (C.P.). —Coroner Dr. G. A. Henry, Provincial Constable E. W. Keen and three other men left Sudbury to-day for White Water Lake, near Azilda, to bring out the body of Otto Hietarinne, alleged to have been killed by Kusti Nisula in a drunken brawl in a fishing shack Wednesday.

Provincial Constables E. J. Cleland and W. McNabb are already at the scene of the alleged murder, and Sergeant A. R. Knight and Inspector A. H. Palmer will leave later to-day to assist in removing the remains.

The task is an arduous one, since the body must be carried 10 miles through very rough rock and swamp country. There are no trails to the fishing shack and the spring thaw makes walking very difficult.

Hickey Is Awarded Contract At Auburn

A local contractor, H. T. Hickey, has received the contract for the erection of the addition to the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds Company's plant at Auburn, G. T. Sanderson, plant manager, informed The Examiner to-day.

Work on the construction job will start almost immediately, and it is estimated that will take about ten weeks to build the addition, which will be 75 feet wide by 100 feet long, containing a storey and a basement.

It is set forth in the contract, Mr. Sanderson stated, that local workmen are to be employed on the job and as far as possible locally produced materials are to be used.

"We expect that the addition will permit us to increase our production and at the same time add to the number of employees we require," Mr. Sanderson said. "The addition will give us needed space and will permit us to make some needed changes in the arrangement of our machinery."

While the addition is primarily for the weaving department it will be used for the warping and winding of yarn and will give extra room for wool storage. Repairs to the present building will also be made, particularly in extensive reflooring.

TOBACCO GROWING NEXT UPON STEVENS' LINE-UP

OTTAWA, April 20. (CP)—Its investigation of the livestock business ended for the time being the Stevens price spreads and mass buying committee will turn to other matters next week, possibly the tobacco-growing industry.

Recent sittings have been entirely devoted to livestock and witness after witness from farm bodies, provincial governments, stockyards and commission houses has told of the low price of livestock and suggested ways of improving conditions.

Close scrutiny of the quality of the Canadian animal products exported to the British market was urged yesterday by W. A. Wilson, animal grade commissioner in England, whose job is to assist in the sale of Canadian products there. A small quantity of inferior Canadian bacon had found its way to the British market, he said, and was affecting the sale of the Canadian product generally.

GATEWAYS OF GRACE AND GLORY SUBJECT OF DR. ROLLS' ADDRESS

Large Congregation Present in St. Paul's Church to Hear Preacher.

MISSION CLOSES TO-NIGHT.

Attendance standards were maintained last evening at St. Paul's Church, when Rev. C. J. Rolls, D.D., spoke on the subject: "Gateways of Grace and Glory." The address was based on the third chapter of Nehemiah, and the various gates mentioned provided the basis for a very interesting, instructive and challenging discourse, which held the large congregation in rapt attention.

Before referring to the first gate, Dr. Rolls emphasized the fact that the word "repair" is mentioned thirty times in the chapter, and stated that the work of repairing was very necessary to-day. The sheepgate mentioned first, signified the gateway of salvation, because through it all the lambs meant for sacrifice were led. On these were placed the sins of the people. This gate needs to be rebuilt to-day, he said, for the word "saved" is very unpopular. Yet Jesus said: I am the Door; by Me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved. The emphasis should be on the word "shall," not in any future sense, but presently, now.

Gateway of Service

Coming to the fishgate, the speaker stated that through it was brought all the fish for the service of the city; hence it was the gateway of service. Jesus said: Follow Me, and I will make you to be fishers of men. So we are saved to serve, and one way of service is prayer. "Prayer is either a force or a farce," stated Dr. Rolls; like the blows of the sledge-hammer on the rock, importunate prayer always gets result. We shall be judged, he said, by the quality and quantity of our service; if we conserve our own life for self, for pleasure, we shall surely lose it.

Next came the old gate, which tells of surrender. The need to yield the self to God, to yield all, was emphasized; even our tongues needed to be surrendered, for they were unruly members. Such did not mean bondage but liberty. Some think of you surrender, then you enter a bondage in which you lose all your enjoyments; but really you find life filled with more avenues of enjoyment. When the spirit of God stirs a congregation to surrender no task is too menial for anyone to do.

Gateway of Submission

The valley gate tells of submission, and submission is not the same as surrender. The soldiers in the late war surrendered, but they did not always submit. When Peter surrendered, he did not submit, because he wanted his own way; hence his weakness and denial of his Master. Too many of us in the church are like that; and no wonder the churches have difficulties. Later, Peter said: Submit yourselves to God as they which are alive from the dead; he knew what he was taking about.

In turn he dealt with the other gates; the dung gate whence all refuse from the city cast out, and teaching us to get rid of anything unclean in our lives; the gate of the fountain, located by the pool of Siloam, speaking to us of the water of life offered freely to all, and bringing joy; the water gate, telling of the word of God read daily there, and appealing to us in these days of scepticism to wait and watch there; the horse gate, the place of equipment, for we need to be thoroughly prepared for the warfare in which we are engaged. In speaking of the east gate, the speaker said that it had been closed since the 11th century, and that the Kaiser in the Great War had the ambition to be the first to enter through the east gate. It spoke of judgment, for the elders met there to deal out justice. A time is coming when we shall all have to face the issue of judgment. In conclusion, the speaker pointed out that the chapter finished at the sheepgate, as it had begun; that Christ was the Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End.

Rev. Mr. Millyard offered prayer, and Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe gave the announcements, while Messrs. Lillow and Gordon from George Street Church sang a duet. Words of appreciation were given at the close by Messrs. A. F. Hagerman, of George Street, and W. T. Sylvester of Murray Street, while Rev. Dr. Barr spoke for St. Paul's. The Co-operative Spiritual Mission will close to-night, when Dr. Rolls will speak on the Rebuilding of Palestine.

with the Canadian Radio Commission, said Mr. Charlesworth, but Donald Withercombe of the N.B.C. wrote to the commission declaring there was every desire and wish for close co-operation between the two bodies.

Mr. Charlesworth said charges a "roorback had been sent out describing Ashcroft as an impostor was absolutely false." Nothing had been sent out by the Commission regarding Ashcroft at any time, the Commision chairman said.

Mr. Ashcroft had circulated a plan in which it was suggested a new "hookup" of Canadian broadcasting be established with himself at the head of it, said Mr. Charlesworth.

The plan had been rejected by numerous organizations and then Ashcroft started the Dominion Broadcasters' Association made up of private stations. This organization, the Commission chairman said, was formed for the purpose of assailing the Commission.

Toronto Livestock Review

TORONTO, April 20. (CP). — Lambs and hogs featured trading on the Toronto livestock market during the past week, registering gains of 25 cents and 35 cents respectively. Calf trading was active and closed with prices unchanged from the previous week's level.

Cattle trading after an active opening closed dull and at lower prices with 500 head unsold at the close. Receipts of all classes of livestock were lighter in volume compared with that of last week.

Cattle receipts at western markets for the year to date are much heavier han for the same period of 1933. Most of the surplus western beef has been finding its way to the eastern trade, thus replacing native beef and weakening local trade.

The cattle market after an active opening with prices firm to 10c higher on killing classes, but turned very dull on Tuesday and prices dropped 10c to 15c on steers and heifers. Weighty steers sold on Monday at $4.50 to $6.25 according to quality but with nothing better than $6 recorded for the balance of the week. Good and choice butchers brought $5.25 to $5.50 with a top lot at $5.70. Common butchers sold as low as $4

Cows held firm all week at $2 to $4.25 according to quality. Good butcher bulls sold steady at $3.25 to $3.50 with bolognas $2.75 to $3.

Choice fed calves sold at $6.50 to $7.25 with a liberal supply of plain kinds selling from $5 to $6.

Store cattle trade was dull, with some unsold at the close. Light stockers ranged from $3.50 to $4.50 according to quality. Milkers and springers continued dull at around $40 for tops.

Veal calf receipts of 2,100 head were 700 fewer than for last week. The market was active under the lighter supply with prices firm on all grades. Vealers of common to medium quality sold at from $4 to $6, with good and choice vealers at $6.50 to $7. A few choice kosher calves made tops of $7.50.

Hog receipts of 4,400 head were 1,200 down from last weeks' figures. The market advanced 35c a cwt., and held the gain up to the close. Bacons closed at $7.50 f.o.b., $7.85 off trucks, and at $8.35 weighed off cars. Firmness in the British bacon trade was also a strengthening factor.

Sheep and lambs receipts of 1,850 head were 500 less compared with last week. Western lambs sold 25c higher at $8.50 for better grades. A few lots of thin native-fed lambs sold as low as $6.50. Spring lambs of common to medium quality sold from $5 to $8 each, with a few choice making $9 to $10 each. Sheep regained part of last week's loss, selling at $3.50 to $4 cwt for best light ewes with culls at $1 to $2.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch:—

	Cattle.	Calves.	Hogs.	Sheep-Lambs.

Weddings

McCARTHY—AYOTTE

The first wedding to be solemnized in the new church of the Immaculate Conception, took place on Tuesday morning, April 17th, when Marguerite Ayotte, the youngest daughter of John P. Ayotte and the late Hannah Ayotte of this city, became the bride of Joseph McCarthy, the youngest son of Edward J. McCarthy and Elizabeth McCarthy of Douro.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dean O'Sullivan. The bride, who was very becomingly dressed in an Alice Blue net dress with grey accessories to match and carried a beautiful bouquet of Ophelia roses, entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Leona Hummel. The bride was attended by Miss Maimie Ayotte, who wore a rose crepe dress, with white hat and accessories to match, and carried a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. William McCarthy, brother of the bridegroom acted as best man.

After the ceremony about one hundred guests assembled at the bride's home, when a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The Rev. Dean O'Sullivan, and Rev. Father Begley were seated at the head table, and made a few pleasing remarks. The Rev. Dean O'Sullivan stated it was a wonderful privilege to be the first to be married in the new church. The tables were beautifully decorated with the rooms trimmed with pink and white streamers, leading down to the bride's cake where pink candles were arranged in silver holders, surrounded by a beautiful bouquet of roses.

The bride and bridegroom received many beautiful gifts, as well as the best wishes of their guests in the evening. Both old and young danced to the lively music of Geo. Furphy and his band.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will live at 527 Armour Road, Peterborough.

THREE MURDERERS DIE

CHICAGO, April 20 (AP)—Three convicted slayers paid for their crimes with their lives at dawn to-day.

Within 26 minutes the three, who followed each other in the electric chair at the Cook County Jail, were dead.

They were John Scheck, 21-year-old slayer of Policeman John G. Sevig, who last July 24 shot his way out of a crowded court room; George Dale, 29, who on August shot and killed Gustave Hoeh, an 81-year-old haberdasher, and Joseph Francis, 35, negro, who slew Joseph Hartel, a milk wagon driver on September 18, when the latter tried to run away from him.

BRITAIN READY TO BACK STAND

appeared bewildered by the world's hostile reception of Tokyo's declaration which, in part, holds Japan is solely responsible for maintaining the peace of East Asia.

Despite their admitted failure to grasp the exact import, there is almost unanimous concurrence among the diplomats on two points:

First, that Tokyo's statements constitute the most startling and most ambitious declarations of policy the Orient has witnessed since Japan's 21 demands to China in 1915; and Second, that how far Japanese doctrines menace world peace will depend entirely on how Tokyo interprets and applies them.

Adviser To Be Ousted?

On the latter point, authorities do not believe Japan intends to attempt to expel Maj. Gen. Hans Von Seeckt, German chief military adviser to the Chinese Nationalist government.

Nor, in the same connection, do well-informed persons believe Nipponese attempts may be expected to expel foreign aviators now in China or to hold up shipping carrying aeroplanes to China.

Rather, it is believeed Japan desires to post a warning for the world to read against interference in Japan's determination to dominate China's destiny, when in the 'restatement' she says she objects to other nations supplying China with military aeroplanes and instructors.

RED PATCH CLUB HOLDS DINNER

Over One Hundred Comrades of the First Division Gather in Armouries.

LENGTHY TOAST LIST.

Over one hundred old comrades of the 1st Canadian Expeditionary Division and their guests gathered in the recreation room at the Armouries last evening on the occasion of the annual dinner of the Red Patch Club.

Frederick C. Gant, president of the organization, whose membership embraces all ex-servicemen of the 1st Division, ably presided as toastmaster. The guests included representatives of the various militia units of the local garrison, and also His Worship the Mayor.

A toast to "The 1st Canadian Division" was ably voiced by Lieut.-Colonel W. Gordon Hall, V.D., and was responded to by Lieut.-Colonel L. T. McLaughlin, D.S.O., of Bowmanville, the beloved officer commanding of the 2nd Battalion.

Lieut.-Colonel G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., officer commanding Peterborough Rangers, proposed the toast, "The Empire," while Captain J. F. Strickland, K.C., M.P.P., tendered the response.

"Fallen Comrades" was the toast eloquently expressed by Robert Haddow, president of the local branch of the Canadian Legion. Following the sounding of the "Last Post," the toast was reverently honored by a period of silence—a silence that was only broken by the challenging call of "Reveille," sounded by a detachment of buglers.

Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Ackerman proposed "The Active Militia," while Lieut.-Colonel Claire H. Stuart, O.C. 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons, responded, on behalf of the militia garrison.

"Our City" was the toast proposed by the president of the Red Patch Club, to which Mayor Roland Denne replied.

During the course of his remarks in responding to the toast to "The 1st Division," Colonel McLaughlin made appropriate reference to the passing of General Sir Arthur Currie, former commander of the Canadian Corps, and expressed the hope that in the near future a national memorial would be erected to the memory of a great soldier leader.

While General Sir Archibald McDonnell, former commander of the 1st Division, was unable to be present at the gathering, a menu autographed with the signatures of everyone present at the function was secured and is to be forwarded to him as a souvenir of the occasion, and to remind him that the men who served under him still remember him with affectionate regard.

Robert Henry, Jack Smith and B. Simmons rendered several well-appreciated vocal solos during the course of the evening, while Jack Marshall accompanied them at the piano. Instrumental numbers were also presented by Frank Clark and Jeff O'Brien.

KOMONEN TRAINED FOR GRIND ON SNOWSHOES DURING WINTER

Sudbury Finn's Victory is Ninth a Canadian Resident Has Gained in the 38 Years of B. A. A. Marathon Competition.

(By Bill King, A.P. Sports Writer)

BOSTON, April 20 (AP)—The Finns are supposed to know all the secrets about long distance running, but Dave Komonen, 35-year-old mine carpenter, had to immigrate to Canada to learn how to win the famous Boston A.A. marathon.

This wiry runner, who has been residing in Toronto and Sudbury, Ont., for five years, which, for him, has been too short a time to master the English language, believes that snow-shoeing gave him the stamina needed to lead yesterday's crack field of 193 over the 26-miles, 385 yards of hills and lane that stretch from a Hopkinton Farm to the B.A.A.S. clubhouse in the back Bay.

"I trained for this race on snowshoes," he said through an interpreter, "running 15 and 20 miles a day. When you take them off and run on bare ground, your feet feel like feathers. Foot running is much easier than snowshoeing.

"Last year, when I finished second to Leslie Pawson, I said I would win the next race, and I did. I am going down again next year and break Pawsons record."

Komonen's victory was the ninth a Canadian resident has gained in the 38 years B.A.A. marathon competition. He accomplished this feat in easy fashion although he had prepared himself for a hard race.

This B.A.A. victory, which North American marathoners prize highly, rounded out Komonen's marathon career. He has been a long distance runner for 16 years but it was only three years ago that he attempted his first 26 miles, 385 yards race, here in Boston. He finished seventh in the 1931 race, a performance that encouraged him to return to Finland the following year to try out for the Olympic run. His services were rejected but, undaunted, he continued competing over the full Olympic distance and last year set up one of the greatest records ever registered by a marathoner.

FAMOUS LOST INTERVIEW GIVEN BY KAISER IN 1908

Italy had opposed the Fatherland in agreeing to recognize the propriety of French interests in Morocco, had left her somewhat of an Ishmael among nations.

So, the German Foreign Office evidently believed that the Kaiser had spoken too freely.

The Hale interview was to appear in the Century Magazine, December, 1908. The German Foreign Office gave it a thorough editorial scouring, removing most of the dynamite.

The original Interview

In the Atlantic Monthly article, the original interview, before expurgation, is used. W. H. Hale found it after his father's death in 1924.

The Kaiser's first remarks concerned Theodore Roosevelt.

"What a man he is!" the emperor told Hale. "Mr. Roosevelt is an inspiring example of the force of personality."

William II then developed a thesis.

"It isn't a genius the world needs, nor brilliancy, nor profound learning, half so much as personality. The big things in the world are always done by just a man—one man—one strong personality."

The conversation then turned to war.

"In a world of practical facts," the Kaiser said "we have to fight, even for righteousness' sake. The Bible is full of fights—jolly good fights some of them were. It is a mistaken idea that Christianity has no countenance for war."

With the assertion that the world's greatest warriors had been Christians, the Kaiser turned to the Japanese.

"The trouble with them," he said, "is that they don't want any religion. They constitutionally are incapable of religion, they are utterly without sentiment—practical, cold, unsympathetic."

The Asiatic situation was the Emperor's chief theme.

"Everybody knows what must come to pass between Asia and the west, the yellow race and the white," he said. "We are unworthy of our fathers if we are negligent of the sacred duty of preserving the civilization which they have achived for us and the religion which God has given us."

Japs Over-estimated

He thought the Japanese had been over-estimated as fighters; they were too small in stature.

"We know this much about him (the Japanese)" the Kaiser declared "He hates the white man worse than the white man hates the devil. The Japanese are devils, that's a simple fact. They are devils!"

The Kaiser said a new treaty among white nations was necessary to preserve China's intergity, and Great Britain should not be a party to it.

"England is a traitor to the white man's cause", he asserted. "If that alliance of theirs with Japan is persisted in, I don't see how the British Empire can be saved from dismemberment.

"When self-interest comes in at the door, sentimental patriotism flies out of the window."

(The Anglo-Japanese alliance was terminated some years ago).

Australia and New Zealand had invited the American fleet to visit their shores as a warning to the home land that they had in the United States "a friend who understands the white man's duty better than the Mother country seems to understand it," continued the Emperor.

And, he added, President Roosevelt had sent the fleet with that understanding.

Big Brother to China.

The most logical combination of nations to act as "big brother" to China the Kaiser said, was that of the United States and Germany. He had discussed this matter with Roosevelt, he said, and Roosevelt had agreed.

"Some fine day the world will wake up and find a quiet little agreement between Germany and the United States declaring that we guarantee Chinese soverignty over Chinese territory," declared the Emperor. "O-ho I wonder what my friends across the channel will say to that."

Here, Hale reports, the Kaiser guuffawed and executed a dance step on the deck.

Next, the Kaiser spoke heatedly of Anglo-German relations.

"What is England's grievance against Germany?" he asked—and answered. This antipathy," he said, was grounded in the British diplomatic policy of opposition to the dominant continental power.

Germany was that power, he declared — passing the British in things naval and military, cultural and economic.

William II concluded with a eulogy on the white race. His shoulders squared, his eyes flashed, writes Hale.

"The future belongs to the white race—never fear," the Emperor exclaimed. "It belongs to the Anglo-Teuton, the man who came from Northern Eufope—where you to whom America belongs came from—the home of the German."

"It belongs to the fair-skinned man, and it belongs to Christianity and to Protestantism. We are the only people who can save it.

"There is no power in any other civilization or any other religion that can save humanity; and the future—belongs—to—us!"

A Last Request

SEATTLE, April 20 (C.P.).—A request for the following engraving on his tombstone was made in the will of Leighton Howard-Smith:

Leigh on Howard-Smith, Born in New York City September 25, 1858.

Died—
Well born.
Lived simply.
Died without fear
If because I happened to pass this way some have Behaved a little better,
Talked a little cleaner,
Laughed a little more,
Then, my friends, I have made good.

Anniversary of Ypres, April 22, 1915

"Their name liveth for evermore."

In scripture and in our own histours of their country being forgotiours of their country eing forgotten after their generation, Who of them ever thought of the men who fell at Trafalgar and Waterloo save the leaders? Why should the names of the men who fell in what they called with justice the great war live for evermore when other great saviours of their country had long been forgotten? The answer they would give that these were not ordinary fighting men, and there was something about them that taught the world a lesson. First, their desire was for each man to do his bit at his country's call. There never was a time when men went forth to a cruel war with such a consciousness of the great probability of death. These men have brought such a revelation of fellowship as the world had never seen. What it was and what it meant and how it gripped their hearts was witnessed to-day by such organizations as the British Empire Service League, Army and Navy Veterans, and other similar organizations which sprang out of the same spirit. They all meant our hearts yearned for the spirit of fellowship the consciousness of comradeship, that the great experience should not be lost. Above all, they had a conception of loyalty to the national purpose and the national ideal. Because of the selfsacrifice, fellowship and loyalty of the men of the Great War we were bold to say their name liveth for evermore, but were we sure? Time sped on and many who honored and mourned the fallen were themselves passed on, when the next generation came along it would entirely depend whether our people kept alive the value of those shining qualities which the stress of war led us to appreciate.

The priceless value of a loyal heart to those things we learned to appreciate in the war days, were things that were necessary in days of peace, they were not just honors and war medals to be worn on our parades to be handed down as heirlooms.

They were qualities which ought to shine in every citizen of Peterborough and in every native of our country. The Peace of the World depended upon those very qualities being dominant in all the nations of the earth. They were the jewels in a nation's character which determined its worth. The present generation were the people had to bridge between 1918 and say 1940. They were the means which the light will be carried along to the next generation. The most loyal thing they could do to the dead was to be men and women who thought nothing of themselves compared with what they could do for the community. It was the business of this generation, which had learnt the horror and meaning of war to see that the generation now growing up should know something of its meaning so that war might in future be avoided, we had to rule out war. And to this high purpose dedicate ourselves so that those we mourn should not have died in vain.

If we are to save ourselves and those who come after us from a renewal in an even more frightful form of all that we suffered in the Great War, we must in our every action, in our every day conversation, even in our very thoughts, seek peace and ensure it. Until then could we dare to say we had kept faith.

J. Abraham,
Branch 52.

SAVE OUR SHEEP, NOT THE BLACK BEAR

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Bear killing seems the cheapest and most perverted sense of sport for the bear does not haves a chance. This is a statement taken out of The Peterborough Examiner editorial section, on March 22nd, and originally in the Belleville Intelligencer. That sounds to me as if the editor of this article never shot many bears. For I have heard old hunters say, that they are one of the hardest of animals to kill. The reasons given are: The bear is low to the ground and therefore hard to shoot. They can disappear easily in the bush. The bear has long fur and upon being shot the bullet hole is clogged with fur to stop the blood.

Save the black bear and let the farmer's sheep be killed. It's alright to save the bear in districts where sheep are not being raised. The editor states "Do not level your gun at the bear." In other words let him kill. That reminds me of the Biblical saying "When a man slaps you on one side of the face turn the other side." So to please the editorial writer we should let the black bear have the other half of the flock. Nice sentiment for a city man who doesn't own a flock of sheep, but who wants people to say "He is kind to dumb animals."

Editor of the editorial on black bears, if you don't think the black bear is doing any harm to man or any other part of creation as you stated. Come to Belmont Township and I can supply you with the names of four men who lost eleven sheep last fall. Why not say "Save Our Sheep."

A Sheep Herder.

FRANCE MOVING

the Interior; Pierre Flandin, Minister of Public Works, and Adrien Marquet, Minister of Labor, have agreed on financing a plan of public works development through the investment of social insurance guarantee funds. The conditions of financing will be determined by a joint committee which is to report to the cabinet as early as possible. The first step will be an attack on unemployment in Paris and Northern France.

In the political field a parliamentary commission is working out a scheme for constitutional reform. Its problem is to strike a more even balance of authority as between parliament and the executive. In France the President may dissolve the Chamber of Deputies after a preliminary approving vote of the Senate. It is a right however which has been exercised only once since the foundation of the third republic, and in actual practice is regarded as non-existent. The Deputy, consequently, is in for four years and enjoys exceptional power. He zealously overturns governments without fear of losing his own seat.

The plan favored by Premier Gaston Doumergue is to strengthen the power of the government by establishing the right of dissolution of the chamber, as in the United Kingdom. The chamber would then think twice before overturning a cabinet.

Wake up your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

You are "feeling punk" simply because your liver isn't pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Digestion and elimination are both hampered, and your entire system is being poisoned.

What you need is a liver stimulant. Something that goes farther than salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum or roughage which only move the bowels—ignoring the real cause of trouble, your liver.

HEPBURN POLICY IS ONE OF FIRING

Conservative Government in this province constituted one of its greatest achievements, Mr. McArthur said, and in that respect he mentioned the provision of compensation for workmen. Mothers' Allowance, Old Age Pensions, and the relief given to the unemployed, two-thirds of the cost of which was borne by the government.

Knows Northumberland Roads

In acknowledging his introduction to the audience by Mr. McArthur, Hon. Mr. Macaulay paid the member for Northumberland the compliment of being noted for his diligence in attendance at the sessions of the Legislature and a deep student of public affairs.

"I hope that Mr. McArthur will be the choice of your convention next week, and I know he'll be elected in the coming conventions."

The Minister recalled that as a freshman at college he had peralled the roads of Northumberland for nearly two months selling stereopticon pictures to help in defraying the cost of his education.

"I am happy to come back to this county as Minister of Highways to inspect the roads I travelled over on a bicycle in those days. From that experience I think that I could qualify as an expert on Northumberland highways, and if the Conservative government never did anything else than the improvement which we are sharing to-day it was well worth while."

Hon. Mr. Macaulay said that the world was passing through a period which has been witnessing a great revolution in all forms of transportation. The radio, automobiles, airplanes and great changes in steamships and railways had caused the world virtually to shrink to one-quarter of its size in less than one-quarter of a century.

$14,000,000 For Highways

"We are all tied up with new strings and cords that make us one economic family, and is truer today than ever before that no man liveth to himself alone. To meet this new situation it has been necessary for us to improve highways in all directions. Since 1914 we have spent $14,000,000 on arterial highways, with almost an equal amount expended on county and township roads. Our winters cause practically no diminution of trade and commerce, of business and social life that have been expanded by our new highways system. The province is spending half a million dollars a year keeping the King's Highway open each winter, and some of our counties are doing their share to keep the roads free for traffic. The time will come when all the main roads will be swept clear of snow so that the advantages they provide will be available in winter as in summer."

The frame work of the highways system of Ontario had been laid by Premier Henry, Mr. Macaulay continued, and if their extension had been necessarily delayed in some sections, including Campbellford, it would not be long until this town was the hub of the district with good roads radiating in all directions.

Says Motor Taxes Low

"We have tried to keep our taxes on traffic down to as low a basis as possible. Our gasoline tax of six cents a gallon is as low as that of any other province, and is lower than five of them. Mr. Hepburn has been saying that what this province needs is a dose of Liberalism. Well, they got a Liberal government in Nova Scotia and the first thing they did we to increase the gasoline tax from six to eight cents. So, if you want a dose of castor oil like that, you know how to get it.

The Ontario automobile license costs $7 and the driver's license $1, but in Quebec where they have a Liberal government the car license is $18 and the driver's license $5. You will find that Ontario has the lowest rate of taxation for motor traffic in the Dominion, for we have 60 per cent of all paved highways in Canada. We are giving the most value to the ratepayer for what we receive from him, and we are taking less from him for the service the province renders."

Grants to Counties

Mr. Macaulay pointed out that the Provincial Government paid 80 per cent of the cost of the King's Highway, 50 per cent on all county roads and 40 per cent on township roads, "far more than we receive from the gasoline tax and motor license fees."

Stating that the world had passed through a period of the greatest decline in trade within the last 150 years, the total trade of the world being 35 per cent of what it was thirty-five years ago, Mr. Macaulay said that "this was not something which can be blamed on the Bennett government, for we are facing a world wide situation."

Demand for manufactured products had fallen off generally, and in the cities there was less consumption of primary products than would have ensued if business could have been maintained on an even keel. The Government had endeavored to do its share in relieving this situation, and the two Departments of Highways and Northern Development were called upon and gladly stepped into the breach. The Government's general plan was to help in taking up the slack of unemployment caused by the decline in trade and commerce, and to provide work where useful public projects and services could be carried on.

"For four years we have been trying to bridge the gap between the last great boom and the normalcy of business which we are looking forward to."

$120,000,000 For Relief Work

In this effort the Government had appropriated $120,000,000, providing 37,000,000 man-days, the equivalent of 200 days' work a year for 45,000 men for the last four years.

"That is one thing you can tell Mr. Hepburn we have done when he comes into the riding next week."

Replying to an interruption by some man in the audience to the effect that the Government had paid only $10 a month to the road workers, Mr. Macaulay said that Mr. Hepburn and Peter Heenan had referred to the road jobs as "slave camps." The fact was that the improvement in economic conditions this year had encouraged the Government to increase the wages paid to the road builders to 25 cents an hour this season.

"Now the Liberals say we are bribing the people of Ontario by increasing the wages. When the wage was lower we were operating slave camps, acording to Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Heenan, now they are saying we are guilty of bribery. It seems hard to please them all.

The duty of statesmen to-day is to put into operation the policy of a plan that will help improve the condition of the masses. According to Liberals you would imagine that they were the only friends of the masses. Look at the conditions in Ontario in 1905 when Sir James Whitney discovered that the only way to get the great Hydro project started was by cancelling the leases of water power rights which the Ross government had given to its millionaire friends. The Niagara water power was one of them the Whitney government had to take back. Who was the friend of the masses then?"

Mr. Macaulay added that only recently the Beauharnois power had been given away by a Liberal government for a $750,000 Christmas present to the party's campaign funds.

Hepburn Policies

"What has Mr. Hepburn brought forward to improve conditions in this province? Two things. He is going to fire every Tory civil servant. Governments may dictate policies but the work of carrying them out is done by the government's employees. Only silly asses would say that you can make wholesale dismissals of civil servants, those employees who with their ability, knowledge and skill spend their lives in the service of their country. Such an idea would be turning the hands of the clock back fifty years."

Mr. Macaulay remarked that when he became Provincial Secretary there was a confidential employee in that office who had been appointed by Hon. J. R. Stratton in 1899. Successive Conservative administrations had come into power but that man who had been appointed by a Liberal Minister was not touched.

Mr. Hepburn's other policy was political assassination by innuendo and slander, Mr. Macaulay continued. This policy had now reached the stage in which "they travel in troops." In the Liberal leader's recent northern trip he was accompanied by Mr. Heenan "who, referring to me, said they are the greatest bunch of political thugs ever occupying the treasury benches in the province of Ontario. That's the type of political assassination Mr. Hepburn has turned his hand to since he has been leader of the Liberals."

Mr. Hepburn had asked during the session what was the cost of the agricultural buildings at Orillia, where 2,300 inmates of the Government's hospital for mental patients were being cared for.

"As Minister of Public Works I showed that the cost was $36,000. At Dryden in Northern Ontario he gave this as an illustration of graft and corruption in Ontario, said the buildings should have cost $6,000 and asked where the other $30,000 went. We received twelve bids on this contract which went to the lowest tenderer and he got every dollar that was coming to him, and not one dollar more. The buildings includes dairy barns, silos and so on big enough to look after the immense government institution caring for 2,200 inmates."

"Fired Pilot Sinclair."

Briefly referring to the elections, about to be announced, Mr. Macaulay said that a year ago the Liberals fired the old pilot W. E. N. Sinclair. Mr. Hepburn was invited to take a seat in the House "but he preferred a seat under the barn." Then Mr. Hepburn had Dr. McQuibban appointed as party leader in the House in the place of Mr. Sinclair. They had a year to think over the beer policy which had been mooted. Mr. Hepburn gave instructions to his followers in the Legislature to sit tight and say nothing. Dr. McQuibban refused, and was fired.

"Now they have more leaders than Coxey's famous army. In fact they seem to have nothing but leaders. If the Liberals can't agree on a simple policy of liquor control, and become divided three ways, how can they agree on the important economic and social problems that will have to be solved in the next four years."

Some of the Liberals ducked behind the fence and peeked through the fence on the liquor question, and of those who remained in the House some voted one way, and some the other.

With the exception of the four years of the Drury administration, Ontario had for many years elected a Conservative government to deal with its great problems such as the Hydro enterprise with its extension into Eastern Ontario and Northern Ontario and the eventual development on the St. Lawrence. On its accomplishments in education and social reform, and its general record the people had every reason to renew the endorsement they had given to the Henry and Ferguson governments and their predecessors.

Social Services

The Government's care of the aged, the feeble, the mental patients the orphans and the blind, without plunging the province into bankruptcy were only part of the great social progress which entitled the Conservative party to ask for a renewal of the mandate to carry on these policies in the years ahead.

Hon. Mr. Macaulay said that the last four years had increased the problem of education, instead of lessening it. More teachers had to be provided, because there were more children at school. More people required old age pensions than would ordinarily have needed financial assistance. And in the meantime the Government had to take care of the mines, the forests, fisheries and game reserves in addition to combatting the extraordinary problem of unemployment.

"The question before the people was whether this Government had honorably and ably discharged these responsibilities? I know they have worked night and day, and devoted some of the best years of their lives to this great task. For that reason we look forward with confidence to a renewal of the people's mandate, and the re-election of a Conservative government."

W. B. HORKINS, K.C.

In an address to his fellow citizens which upheld the policies of the Henry government, W. B. Horkins, K.C., of Toronto, enlarged at length on accusations that were often brought against the party in power, pointing out that when an administration was doing its best it ought not to be annoyed with vexatious cases such as these, but when made, they should be thoroughy investigated. This had been the case quite recently with prominent magistrate, who had proved himself inefficient and incompetant and although many charges had been hurled against the Attorney General, he had been completely vindicated. The whole thing had been simply a vicious charge made by the board of strategy of the Liberal Association, and it was a serious things, he said, to make serious charges which eventually fall flat. The charges were made, not by the people, but by office seekers, he declared.

"Why dodge the liquor question?" was the question asked by the speaker, who pointed out that many years ago Campbellford had voted for local option and this system had been established as the greatest good for the greatest number of people. The local member had no say in the matter, it was entirely a matter for the voters to decide for with a three fifth majority they could change the present system if they so wished.

The Liquir Control Board, Mr. Horkins said, was not in the hands of the government, but was a separate body, and the system of permits had the value of keeping a check on those who would abuse the privilege of drink. Mr. Hepburn, he declared, would abolish the permit system, for he was looking for votes, and as for the statement that he was going to wipe out local option, "he has no right, the speaker said, for you voters are the judges of what is best in your municipality."

The speaker also predicted a Conservative victory at the forthcoming election, for the reason that he said it was a dangerous thing to change horses crossing the river, and that is what the province is doing now, with the years of depression and hardship behind it. He felt he said that many of Hepburn's proposed treatments were experimental, and it would be extremely unwise to experiment just now. Even right thinking Liberals were not going to trust things to Hepburn, the speaker stated.

And giving the local member, Fred McArthur, a boost, Mr. Horkins said that he was a man who had served the riding well and was always onto his political job. He was a sincere man who was honest enough to be bold, and bold enough to be honest, and one who speaks fearlessly on the floor of the house. "The government is going back again, don't send a boy to the mill, or you will be lost in the wood" the speaker urged.

Campbellford

(By Examner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20.— The tenders for the road contract for the building of the ten miles of highway between Campbellford and Havelock will be opened this week, F. J. McArthur, M.P.P. for Northumberland, told a Campbellford Conservative rally last evening, speaking for the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Provincial Minister of Highways, who had to leave immediately after his address in the Regent Theatre. The work on the road, Mr. McArthur stated, would be proceeded with without the least possible delay. This work had not been held back for election purposes he stated, but because of climatic conditions. It would be completed to complete the road artery system of the province, and because it was necessary to complete the roads in this district, and as many men as possible would be employed on the contruction, irrespectiveof whether they were Grit or Tory, as long as they were good, honest workers.

In England are only 89,780 persons who earn $10,000 a year or more.

Fifty thousand houses are to be built in London this year.

MARVIN REDDEN IS LAID TO REST

Funeral of Campbellford Accident Victim Largely Attended—Chums Bear Casket.

MANY FLOWERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Victim of a car accident in Campbellford on Monday, little Marvin Roy Redden was laid to rest yesterday afternoon in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, following a service at the family residence, George street, which was conducted by the Rev. R. C. Tait and the Rev. H. P. L. Seymour.

Attending the funeral were a very large number of sympathetic friends and neighbors, the floral tributes being many. The little casket was born to the graveside by six of the departed child's older chums—Robert Linton, Gerald Frederick, D. Southern, Robert Morrison, Charles Jeffs and J. Anderson. Lining the sidewalk to the hearse was the Sunday School class of St. John's United Church of which little Marvin was a member who with Ross Richardson, Bobby Tait, Glen Smith, Kenneth Pryke and Andy Brintnell, acted as flower bearers, and were in the care of their teacher, Mrs. A. E. Wragg. Marvin's classmates from the Public School were also present with their teacher, Miss Helen MacDonald in charge

The little lad was aged six years and nine months, being born in Detroit, but coming to Campbellford as an infant with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Redden.

Obituary

MRS. J. F. FINCH

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20. — Passing away suddenly at noon on Tuesday, the late Mrs. J. F. Finch was laid to rest in Zion Cemetery, Petherick's Corners, Seymour township, Thursday afternoon after a funeral service had been conducted in the Zion United Church. She was laid to rest in the family plot. Highly esteemed in the community she will be missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Surviving are her husband, three sons, Roslin, Melville and Lindsay; and three daughters, Mrs. Sheppard (Marguerite), who resides near Peterborough, and Reta and Vera, at home.

WILLIAM A. BYERS

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, April 20.— A large number of citizens representative of Cavan and Millbrook were in attendance at the funeral of William A. Byers on Thursday, the service being at the home of his cousin, Miss E. J. Grandy, Anne street, at 2.30 p.m., with the rector of the parish of Cavan, Rev. William Simpson, B.A., officiating.

Deceased, who was born in Toronto but had resided in Millbrook for many years past, died in Nichols' hospital, Peterborough, on Tuesday afternoon following serious injuries sustained in an accident which occurred at his own home, Bank St. late the previous evening.

Mr. Byers had never married, and was the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mervan Byers, Toronto; following his parents' death he lived for some time with his uncle and aunt, the late Mr. and Mrs. George Wallace, on their farm homestead, Cavan township, and after his aunt's decease he and Mr. Wallace came to Millbrook to make their home. Of late years Mr. Byers had lived alone, and after his accident it was with great difficulty and suffering he managed to reach the home of a neighbor, Mr. H. G. Skitch, who summoned Dr. J. W. Wright to give medical attention. Removal at once to the Peterborough hospital, and an operation, failed to offset the serious injuries received.

The pall-bearers included W. H. Coomse, D. R. Fowler, A. A. Needler, D. Sheppard, John and Harold Cathcart; some beautiful floral tributes were laid in loving memory on the casket, and interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery, Millbrook.

ROBERT WILLIAM DOBBERMAN

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORWOOD, April 20. — Robert William Dobberman, husband of Gladys Jean Nicol and well known young man of this vicinity passed away in Toronto General Hospital, Sunday after seven weeks illness.

He served seventeen years with the H.E.P.C. and constructed the work for the village of Norwood when they installed the Hydro system here fourteen years ago.

LAKEFIELD BOY WINS HONORS

Gordon W. Porter, M.A., Wins Waddell Memorial Travelling Scholarship at Queen's.

HAD SPLENDID RECORD

LAKEFIELD, April 20. (Examiner Correspondence). Gordon Walsh Porter, M.A., is the winner of the Hugh Gordon Waddell Memorial Travelling Scholarship at Queen's University for 1934 and is being congratulated by his many friends in Lakefield. The fact that Mr. Porter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Porter, are old friends of the late Mr. Hugh Waddell, adds even a greater interest.

This scholarship is given in the last year in Theology in Queen's and was presented by the late R. M. Waddell in memory of his father.

Lakefield has good reason to be proud of Gordon Porter's acchievements in his academic course. He won the county prize at the entrance examination, had a splendid record in his high school work, always standing at the top, was a distinguished figure in the Peterborough Collegiate which he attended for his honor matriculation course and at Queen's distinguished himself in his arts course, receiving his B.A. and also his M.A. and in his first year in Theology winning the Sarah McClellan Waddell scholarship and now in his last year even a greater honour and reward.

The loyalty of Gordon Welsh Porter to his home town was illustrated several years ago when Rev. Dr. Cochrane, superintendent of Home Missions in the United Church, visited Lakefield and recalled meeting a young divinity student in Northern Manitoba and asked him where he hailed from and he replied: "From Lakefield, the finest town in Canada." That young student was Gordon Porter who to-day is receiving the hearty and sincere congratulations and good wishes of the whole community including former class mates, teachers and friends.

The friends of Mr. H. Todd of Belfast, Ireland and a friend of Mr. G. W. Porter who has visited Lakefield on many occasions, will be interested in the announcement of his receiving the Toush Scholarship at Queen's Convocation.

CANBERRA, Australia, April 19. —(C.P. Cable, Via Reuters).—The Australian government has accepted the tender of an Australian company formed jointly by Imperial Airways and the Queensland-Northern Air Services for a proposed air mail service between Singapore and Port Darwin.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN.

TORONTO, April 20. — Ontario grains, f.o.b. shipping point:

Wheat, carlots, 77c to 79c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 20. — Prices generally held a steady tone on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market yesterday. The butter market was generally quoted at 25c pound for freshly arriving Quebec or Ontario butter graded No. 1, while the finest graded No. 1 New Zealand or Canadian butter sold up to 25½ cents a pound. A total of 685 boxes was offered for sale during the day.

The egg market was steady to firm. Graded shipments in carlots or less brought 19½c to 20c a dozen for A-large, 18½c to 19½c for A-medium, 17½c for B grade, and 16c to 16½c for C. Arrivals amounted to 2,688 cases.

Current make Ontario cheese brought 11c to 11¼c a pound, while summer cheese was 11½c to 12½c for colored and white. Receipts totalled 44 boxes.

On the potato market, Quebecs in 80-pound bags sold for 95c to $100, and New Brunswick Mountains in similar quantities for $1.00 to $1.05, Prince Edward Island Mountains in 90-pound bags were $1.20 to $1.30.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Wild downward plunges of 5c a bushel for wheat yesterday followed Washington official suggestions that United States wheat would go to a world basis.

Feverish general selling developed in a market devoid of any aggressive demand, with traders' attention largely monopolized by a statement from Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace saying domestic and world prices of wheat would work closer together during the present year. The 5-cent break which ensued swept the wheat market down the extreme limit that existing regulations permit in any 24-hour period.

Wheat closed flurried, 2¾c to 3c under Wednesday's finish; corn unchanged to ¾c higher; oats, ⅛c off to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to 15c down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 20. — Plunging Chicago prices dragged wheat quotations down for net losses if 1 to ¾ cent on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, though at the close values showed a tendency to steady up, and were ½ to ⅝ cent above bottom level.

Persistent weakness of the Southern market had a very disturbing effect on sentiment. May future closed at 64¼ cents, July at 65¼ cents, and October at 66⅞ cents

Liverpool reflected the change of sentiment at Chicago with a downturn of 1d to 1¼d. Cash grains trading was restricted, and coarse grains suffered under liquidation to close with substantial losses.

ICE ON LAKE GOES OUT

The ice on Rice Lake went out yesterday. When The Examiner visited Bewdley last evening little waves were lapping along the sandy shore, and reminders of the busy centre the community will soon become as tourists stream in for the fishing were present on every hand.

A mile or so out on the lake the white sheen of ice could be dimly seen. It was reported that the ice from the lake was rushing down the Trent River, and causing some little difficulty at dams.

USE OF PASTEURIZED MILK HAS ELIMINATED BONE TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. A. W. McPherson Addresses Local Council of Women.

CRIPPLING OF CHILDREN.

"Since pasteurized milk was introduced into Toronto, they have practically eliminated tuberculous bone disease. In Peterborough, we don't have pasteurized milk and we should have it. If the ladies want something to do, why don't they insist on having pasteurized milk?

"Some years ago, by order of the Ontario Government, they compelled the pasteurization of whey in the cheese factories to save the hogs from tubercular taint. Why do they put hogs ahead of children?"

Dr. A. W. McPherson addressed the members of the Local Council of Women at their regular meeting yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., speaking briefly and much to the point on various elements which cause the crippling of children. As quoted above, he expressed himself on the subject of pasteurized milk.

Dr. McPherson considered first the question of infantile paralysis, the causative factors in which, he said, are not known.

"But it seems to be a germ which has for its most effectual combatant the human serum and this is used whenever available. An early diagnosis is important, as the serum is of little use after paralysis has occurred."

Another important thing to remember is the preventing of deformities which arise from the destruction of motor cells in the spinal cord. The crippled limb must be held in a natural position until recovery takes place. The use of splints is indicated.

Saying that it is possible to practically eradicate tuberculosis, the speaker referred to the two types of this illness, one springing from an organism traceable to a bovine strain, the second springing from a human source. The bovine taint is responsible for most tubercular bone conditions. The pasteurization of milk was recommended as a major influence in the war against the disease.

"We have practically eradicated diphtheria and smallpox. Why not tuberculosis? Because there is no one working at it. And why is no one working? Are you ladies doing anything about it?"

Richetic Disorders

Referring to rickets in children, Dr. McPherson declared this means that they will have poor bone, poor muscle and poor ligaments, and thus will be afflicted with bowed legs, arms and back, as well as such deformities as pigeon breasts, flat chests and crooked spines. Rickets means a generally reduced strength and resistance to disease and these children are subject to infection of all types and to nervous ailments. Even in infants of richetic tendencies, a general excitability of the nervous system is manifested and convulsions often occur.

Pre-natal care of the mother is paramount as a preventory measure, with plenty of good food, fresh air, water and sunshine, to build up health and resisting powers, and the same elements contribute to the health of the child after birth, with cod liver oil and fresh fruit and vegetable juices.

Of accidents, a contributory cause to the crippling of children, the speaker adjured caution in allowing play on the streets and care when returning from school.

In reference to several congenital conditions, manipulation of club feet was recommended. Other conditions of this type are extra toes, hare lips and cleft palates, which impair usefulness.

In the group of avoidable deformities, strong emphasis was placed on constant care in preventing curvature of the spine, which the speaker said was often the result of laziness and a slouching habit which could be corrected by constant attention. Other avoidable deformities were flat chest, flat feet, crooked shoulders which might be eliminated entirely by attendance at the systematic physical exercises taught in the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. classes, as well as plenty of outdoor exercise of a type suitable to the subject. Walking was recommended for those who are unable to indulge in the more strenuous physical exercises.

"See that your children get plenty of fresh air, sunshine and good food. Send them early to bed and get them up early in the morning," concluded the doctor.

Girl Guides

The second brief talk of the afternoon was on Girl Guides, given by Mrs. J. H. Bell of Frederick avenue, who is the Dominion Commissioner for Post Girl Guide work and takes a constant and earnest interest in the movement.

Mrs. Bell emphasized strongly the fact that the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement is not militaristic, but essentially one of peace. The first thought is often held because of its foundation by Lord Baden Powell.

A concise outline of the work was given, with a glimpse into the idealistic element. The movement among Girls is divided into three sections, the Brownies, embracing girls up to eleven years of age, with the motto, "Lend a Hand," which is usually implemented by assistance to the mothers in the homes; the Girl Guides, with members from eleven to sixteen years of age, and the motto, "Be Prepared," (to help anyone needing assistance), and the Rangers, with members from sixteen years on, and the motto, "Render Service," which takes a different meaning in different communities. Some Rangers help with Baby Clinics, others with Old People's Homes and others with town beautification.

The Girl Guides' creed embraces such virtuous elements as honor, loyalty, usefulness, friendship to humans and animals alike, courtesy, obedience, cheerfulness, thriftiness and purity.

"They have an ideal standard of living," said Mrs. Bell.

They have a Court of Honor, in which the members consider breaches of discipline, and they have also a Thinking Day, the joint birthday on February 22nd of Lord and Lady Baden Powell, when Guides in thirty-six countries of the world form a living chain of thoughts concerned with friendship and peace.

Thanks to both speakers was expressed by the president, Mrs. B. W. Harvey.

The business routine of the afternoon included the reading of the minutes by Mrs. J. Cridland, of the correspondence by Mrs. B. Law, and the giving of the financial report by Mrs. H. Tremain.

The ladies agreed to support a movement to frame an international law whereby the national status of married women may be crystallized.

It was decided to hold a tea on Thursday, May 17th, in lieu of the regular monthly meeting, with Mrs. F. H. Dearborn and Mrs. G. A. Nelson as joint convenors.

NEW AND BECOMING COIFFURES STARTED BY HOLLYWOOD BEAUTIES, AVERS GLADYS

Glenda Farrell

By GLADYS GLAD

Contrary to the general belief, I personally do not think that the Paris stylists have half so much to do with current hair styles as do the luminaries of Hollywood. Not so long ago, for instance, there was an epidemic of the "Jo" bangs popularized by lovely Katharine Hepburn. Then followed the "Alice-in-Wonderland" hair style introduced by charming Charlotte Henry. And now, it seems, the talented Anna Sten has started a new hair vogue with her lovely "Nana" coiffure.

The new "Nana" coiffure really is a most flattering one, and isn't half so difficult to achieve as some of the more intricate hair styles sported by many of our cinema stars. In this coiffure, a center part is worn, and the waves on each side are fashioned to give an illusion of height. This eliminates any impression of width that the center part might give.

Before the "Nana" coiffure is arranged, however, the hair generally requires thinning and tapering. This, of course, should be done only by an expert beautician. No woman should ever attempt to thin her own tresses, for it she does, she may totally ruin the graceful contours of her head. Hair should be thinned by effilation and not by the cutting out of huge strands of hair. Each strand of hair should be thinned gradually along its entire length, so that it will yield prettily to arrangement.

The bangs really are the most important part of the "Nana" coiffure. These bangs are very fine, and should allow the skin of the forehead to peep through. They should be cut two-thirds way over the forehead, and have a very loose, slight wave. The bangs should be waved under and in toward the right hand side. A litte waving lotion and a comb are sufficient for giving these bangs the necessary slight, soft wave.

If you intend adopting this coiffure, you must also give some thought to your eyebrows. Heavy, brushy eyebrows are utterly impossible with bangs, and tend to give a woman's face a hard, masculine appearance. Keep your eyebrows always neatly plucked and well-groomed, and you'll find that they'll help to enhance the charm of your "Nana" coiffure.

PERFECT BIDDING

It is rare indeed to find as perfect bidding as occurred with this hand. Neither side was vulnerable. South dealt and passed. How did the bidding go?

	♠ A K Q 7 6 5 2 ♥ A K Q 6 4 2 ♦ None ♣ None
♠ None ♥ 3 ♦ A K Q J ♣ 10 7 3 2	N. W. E. S.	♠ J 10 9 8 ♥ 3 ♦ 10 8 ♣ 9 6 4
	♠ 4 ♥ J 9 7 5 ♦ 8 6 ♣ 10 8 7 5 3

Bidding went: West, six diamonds; North, seven diamonds; East, passed, of course.

Dr. Bond Stowe, one of the famous old whist players of the Knickerbocker Whist club, New York, sat South. He said that for a moment he sat stunned by his partner's strange bid. He never had heard its like. His impulse was to brain his partner. Then gradually the doctor began to cool off and think.

South could not bid eight clubs. The laws prohibit such a bid. He could not bid seven no-trumps on a low diamond doubleton and he could not let the bid pass. Evidently North had asked his partner to choose between the two major suits. Having decided that it all meant, Dr. Stowe bid seven-hearts, to thunderous applause from the gallery. He had no difficulty in fulfilling his contract.

An informatory double would have forced South to bid seven-clubs, and North knew it. Had North made the natural bid of six-spades, he would have held the bid and gone down a trick. West would not have increased his opening bid. He had told his whole story by his opening bid.

The next hand was bid beautifully, by two experts at feature showing.

	♠ 4 ♥ A Q J 10 5 ♦ Q 10 9 3 ♣ 8 6 3
♠ K J 10 6 ♥ 2 ♦ 9 8 4 2 ♣ A 8 ♣ A K	N. W. E. S.	♠ A Q 8 7 ♥ 5 3 ♦ None ♣ Q J 10 9 5 2
	♠ 9 ♥ K 7 6 3 ♦ K J 7 6 4 2 ♣ 7 4

Bidding went: West, one-spade; North, two-hearts; East, three-hearts, saying, "I hold no losers in hearts and I expect a slam at spades." West, four-clubs to show his lowest ace; East, four-hearts, to demand more details; West, five-diamonds, to show his second ace; East, five-hearts, asking added details; West, six-clubs, to show the king; East, seven-spades, knowing at last that no trick could be lost.

to see the sunrise. I cannot tell you how I felt; in one sense I felt the Presence of God and also felt myself a sinner in the presence of purity, the scent of new mown hay in the fields, the silence, the pearly mistiness as the sun was rising on an avenue of trees—how beautiful it all was. My companion, an elderly lady perched herself on top of a gate and sang "Morn amid the Mountains". She asked me also to sing but I could not—speech and song seemed out of place just then. I wanted to be quiet. I came across some lovely lines the other day which I think I must quote, entitled

"Out In The Fields"

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the tree;
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees,
The foolish fears of what might pass,
I cast them all away,
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new mown hay,
Among the hushing of the corn,
Where droway poppies nod,
Where ill thought die and good are born.

Out in the fields with God.

I fear I have written enough, Anne, and I have not written at all along the lines I intended to. I got off the track and followed the rising sun—but must now return to the work-a-day world. Best wishes to yourself and all the neighbors.

Yours sincerely,
Water Lily.

OUR MAIL

Anne Wilcox,
Examiner.

Dear Anne.—All has been quiet on the Western Front since Easter or in plain language there has been no letters coming in, and so I am venturing once more to write a few lines.

I am sure we are all sorry to have a return of winter weather again, but we are absolutely sure of one thing—and that is that Spring always follows Winter and so we keep up our courage. It was only a few mornings ago that the robins were waking us up at around four a.m. and we were considering in our minds the advisability of going to bed when they did so that we might be ready to be wakened that early, but now they are silent; perhaps they are giving us time to weigh that over. Yes, how wonderful it would be to feel like getting up that early—once or twice in my life I have done so—one in the Springtime to gather wild flowers and once in June very early

FOWLS TO FOULS

TOPEKA, Kas., April 20 (CP) — There's one man who is preparing to take part of his time away from fowls and devote it to fouls.

He is Dale Gear. The operator of a large poultry farm, Gear is rushing his baby chicks along so that he may preside over the Western Baseball League when the season opens early next month.

RHEUMATISM GOT HIM

80-Year-Old Pianist is Relieved by Kruschen.

Although old age has not yet kept this man from his occupation as a pianist, rheumatism did threaten to do so recently.

"Two years ago," he writes, "I was suddenly taken with rheumatism, all down my left arm. I tried many things—all to no purpose. I then commenced taking a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning, and soon felt benefit. My arm, which was painful and nearly useless, to my astonishment is now, after a few weeks' treatment, quite better. I am more than pleased, as I am a pianist and playing made matters worse. I am just entering my 80th year, and am in good health."—G. L. A.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

Constructive is a word which should have an uppermost place in the mind. Unless thoughts are constructive they avail little. By keeping this simple word constructive within ready access to the thoughts, whatever they may be, helps to give them a right direction. There is an up-building power lying within the word. This permeates the thoughts. It works subconsciously, unconsciously and consciously to formulate something progressive. These are not pleasant to contemplate. All humanity desires to move forward into better things.

* * * * * * *

One fascinating feature of constructive thinking is that it so involves the mind in ways of solution that worry takes wings and flies away. There is no place in the thoughts for both worry, which retards progress, and constructive thoughts which are, of themselves, up-building. You cannot tear down, at the same time you are building. Each is a process in itself. If you want to be raised to a higher plane of the mind, if you wish to get along well in the world, if you hope to be a conqueror, try constructive thinking. It will not fail you.

* * * * * * *

With all the power that lies in constructive thinking with all its ability to smooth troubled waters, to bring the heart into clearer vision and a happier atmosphere, the questions may well arise just what is it, and how can one get into its marvelous grip? There is no difficulty in finding out. Constructive thinking is simply setting one's mind to work to find out the best way to better conditions whatever they may be. The minute one attempts to do this he is skirting the fringes of the powerful force. As soon as he begins to get glimpses of solutions he begins to realize some of the power. It is at work within him. He gets a more joyous attitude. His ship is not sinking as it appeared to be. It is already on its journey toward a right port.

* * * * * * *

Every person has his own problems. Looked upon in the right way they add interest to life. This interest is so intensified by seeking proper solutions, to the riddles that worry, fretfulness, discontent become side issues. The heart is set on finding betterment. By summoning constructive thought to your aid, ways and means will be found.

BROWN AWARDED $1,500 DAMAGES

Jury Fings Kingston Magistrate Was Driving at Too Great a Speed.

RANKIN CLAIM DISMISSED.

The action of Fred K. Brown, a farmer west of Port Hope, who suffered damages by Police Magistrate David L. Rankin running him down on February 6th, 1933, was disposed of before the Honorable Mr. Justice McEvoy yesterday afternoon, when the jury brought in a verdict for Mr. Brown for $1,500.00 damages.

The action brought against Thomas G. Brown, the owner of the truck which was parked on the side of the road, which Mr. Rankin stated obscured his view, was dismissed.

The jury in answer to the questions submitted by the trial judge found that the negligence of Mr. Rankin consisted in driving at a too high rate of speed, in view of the slippery condition of the highway and also in not blowing his horn upon approaching the truck where Mr. Brown was standing.

The judge entered judgment in favor of the plaintiff, Fred K. Brown for $1,500.00 and costs, and dismissed the claim of Mr. Rankin against Thomas G. Brown as a third party with costs.

The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff, Fred K. Brown; J. M. Hickey appeared for David L. Rankin, and J. W. Thompson, of Agar and Thompson, appeared for Thomas G. Brown.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

A reader asks me if I will discuss the subject of pyelitis; its cause, its effects, treatment, and any information concerning the disease.

Pyelitis is an infection of the pelvis of the kidney. The kidney substance itself consists of an intricate mass of tubules, which secretes urine, and this drops into a vestibule which opens into the ureters, open tubes which carry the urine to the bladder. Sometimes due to obstruction, as in prostatic disease, germs enter and work their way upstream, like salmon in the spring, until they reach the pelvis of the kidney and cause pyelitis. Sometimes extreme constipation causes pyelitis because the lymphatic drainage of the large intestine enters directly into the pelvis of the kidney and will create infection.

The symptoms are mild. There is often a little fever and lassitude, usually not very much pain, and often the disease gets well without treatment.

The treatment which is productive of the best results is to give an antiseptic preparation, which excreted in the urine will kill off the germs which cause the infection at the very source. There are many substances of this kind, one being hexymethylamine. The best ones are dyes, such as acroflavine. Elaborate, expensive treatment usually is a mistake.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

M. C.: "I get get frequent attacks of sties in the eyes. Is there any way to prevent them?

Answer: It is frequently said that sties come from astigmatism or other forms of eye weakness, which can be corrected by glasses. The reason for this probably is that the patient's eyes become tired, and they are frequently rubbed with the fingers so that infection gets into the hair follicles. Naturally, prevention in a case of this kind would mean securing properly fitted glasses. It is also suggested that as a way of prevention the eyelids be touched lightly with a camel's hair brush which has been dipped ina solution of 10 per cent alcohol.

M.R.: "What causes my upper lip to swell? Without warning, except a hot feeling, it swells until it is much enlarged, extending way over my lower lip."

Answer: The condition is called "angioneurotic edema" and is probably due to sensitization to some substance, such as food or cosmetic preparation; perhaps to the emanations from an animal—that is, a cat, a dog or a horse, or perhaps to emanations from flowers.

Home and School Association News

HOME AND SCHOOL COUNCIL.

The regular April meeting of the Home and School Council was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. with the president, Mrs. E. Wand, presiding. The meeting opened by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison, after which the secretary's report was given by Mrs. R. Parnell, and the treasurer's report by Mrs. T. Hendry.

The roll call showed representatives present from Queen Alexandra, Central, King George, King Edward, Queen Mary, Prince of Wales, Confederation and May's Schools.

The question of having a half-day's convention in the autumn was discussed and Mrs. Morris reported that Mrs. Reese of the Federation had consented to come and give an address.

A nominating committee, consisting of Mrs. Morris (convenor), Mrs Hughes and Mrs. Graham, was appointed for the annual meeting in May and nominating papers were sent to each Home and School Association. Short reports from the convenors of the Review publication, Better Films and Visual Education, Religious Education, League of Nations, Handicraft and Libraries were given, and Mrs. Wand read notes from the convention on the different phases of the work.

Mrs. C. M. Scott gave a very interesting and instructive address on phychology, and Mrs. Wand, on behalf of the Council, extended a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker.

It was suggested that the study group meet in May and Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Graham were appointed to arrange a program of suitable topics for study.

Mrs. Telford read the address given at the Federation of Mrs. McLaughlin of Oshawa, who is president of the Home and School Federation. Mrs. N. Todd gave Dr. McMillan's address on Music given at the annual convention in Toronto and Mrs. Brisco read Mrs. Hosmer's paper.

Mrs. E. Wand gave a fine general report of the convention, stressing some of the highlights.

On motion of Mrs. Hughes, the meeting adjourned.

Giants and Cubs Unbeaten in National League

RED SOX TAKE TWIN DECISION FROM SENATORS

Boston Sluggers Pound Three Washington Pitchers for 13 Hits and 7-3 Win.

TIGERS LOSE GAME.

New York and Chicago Sweep Three-game Series in the National League.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., A.P. Sports Writer)

The Boston Red Sox, picking Patriots' Day a strictly Bostonian holiday, as their starting point, already have begun the process of paying dividends upon Owner Tom Yawkey's big investment in them.

After dropping two tough decisions to Washington's Senators in the season's first pair of games, the Sox made it all up yesterday by trimming the 1933 league champions in both halves of the holiday doubleheader, 5 to 4 and 7 to 3. Julius Solters, the big right fielder from Baltimore, won the morning contest with a home run in the ninth.

The afternoon contest saw 34,000 fans turn out, the largest crowd since the rebuilding process began, to see the Red Hose pound three young pitchers, Ray Prim, Mark Filley and Ed Linke, for 13 hits, including a four-baser by Bill Cissell.

Heavy Hitting

The terrific clouting continued right down the American League line with the single exception of the Cleveland-St. Louis duel, and the Indians won that when Joe Vosmik clouted a 400-foot line-homer with one on in the eighth.

Chicago's White Sox added the Detroit Tigers to the list of clubs which have lost one game by pounding out a 9 to 8 victory, scoring their last two runs in the ninth. Neither Schoolboy Rowe nor Phil Gallivan could survive the first four innings, which saw 13 runs scored.

The New York Yankees outswatted the Athletics in a home-run duel, 10 to 4, as four baggers by Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri proved more effective than a pair by Bob Johnson.

Giants Unbeaten

The world champion Giants played the theme song of the National League for the day when they turned four hits off fidgety Phil Collins in a 2 to 0 victory over the Phillies. One of the blows was a first inning homer by Manager Bill Terry, while an error led to the second tally.

Brooklyn and Boston provided one of the early-season oddities in a 1-1, seven inning tie. A thick fog, which rolled in to obscure the outfield, forced the umpires to call the game.

Pat Malone's five-hit hurling plus some timely hitting against Paul Derringer gave the Cubs their third straight triumph over Cincinnati by a 4 to 1 count. The Pittsburgh Pirates refused to follow the rest of the league and piled up 19 assorted hits to trim the Cardinals 14 to 4. They scored six times in the fifth to break up the ball game, knocking Bill Hallahan and Flint Rhem around.

Golf Facts, Not Theories!
KEEPING YOUR CHIN BACK
NOT SO HARD, SAYS ALEX

By ALEX. J. MORRISON
Golf's Foremost Technician

"You're always harping about keeping the chin back," writes a reader. "I want to tell you that I think it's the most unnatural thing you could ask a person to do."

I'll admit that I mention the chin in my writing pretty often but, from the evidence found on any golf course, there still remains a great need for more advice on this subject.

Thanks to the opportunities that have been given me during the past year to repeately publish and illustrate this idea, it is not an uncommon sight to-day to see golfers making practice swings with an obvious effort to keep their chins back.

As far as the practice swings go this is fine, but, when it comes to actual play, I dont' think that there are more than a dozen players in this country who have mastered the art of properly pointing the chin.

"It's absolutely unnatural, I tell you," insists my correspondent.

Well, as long as he has any such notion, he'll not be able to perform this most important part of the swing. Instead of being "absolutely" unnatural it is an "absolutely" natural thing to do, for it is the only means of keeping your head in a natural position in relation to the rest of your body.

The accompanying illustrations show a player keeping his chin back throughout his swing and you will notice that his head is at all times in a perfectly natural position in relation to his spinal column.

Study these illustrations and try to convince yourself that the main object of pointing the chin is to keep your head in a perfectly natural position.

SELKIRK'S HIT GIVES BEARMEN WIN OVER HERD

Newark Triumphs 6-5 in Ten-inning Struggle With Buffalo Club.

OTHER GAMES CALLED.

NEWARK, N.J., April 20 (AP)—George Selkirk, hard-hitting Newark outfielder, drove a home run into the right field bleachers in the tenth inning yesterday to give Newark Bears a 6-5 victory over Buffalo in the only International League game that was not halted by rain.

Selkirk's potent drive, his second homer of the day, saved the game for Newark after the visiting Bisons, threatening to duplicate their ninth-inning rally of Wednesday when they tallied nine times to overcome a lead and win, had tied the score in the ninth with a three-run splurge.

Tamulis, young left-hander, was released on option by the New York Yankees yesterday, and reached Ruppert Stadium just in time to halt the Buffalo rally and get credit for the triumph.

GAME POSTPONED

ALBANY, N.Y., April 20. — Rain prevented Toronto and Albany clashing in the second game of the International League series here yesterday afternoon. About 200 spectators had gathered at Hawkins Stadium despite threatening skies, and the team had completed batting practice when the rain came. The downpour continued until game time, but it was not until nearly 4 o'clock that the Albany club manager decided on the postponement.

The Leafs were more disappointed than the Senators, as Manager Boone and his players are confident that they can sweep the series. The Leafs and Senators have met five times this spring, four games being played during the training exhibition series. Toronto has only lost one of them.

RAINVILLE WINS WITHOUT TROUBLE

Canadian Net Star Advances in Mason and Dixie Tournament.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 20. — Wilmer Allison, No. 2 ranking star from Austin, Texas, withdrew from singles play in the Mason and Dixon tennis tournament yesterday, and apparently left a clear path to the final round for Frank Shields and Lester Stoefen. To-day Marcel Rainville meets the towering Shields.

A wrenched back, suffered in the North and South tournament at Pinehurst last week, led Allison to default his third round match to Charles Lockhart of Pittsburg. The injury was not regarded as serious.

Meanwhile Shields and Stoefen, generally regarded as likely nominees for Davis Cup singles duty progressed smoothly to the semi-finals. Shields beat J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N.J., 6-1, 11-9. Stoefen, playing well within himself, disposed of William C. Wright of Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-2.

While Shields faces Rainville, Stoefen will meet th winner of a delayed quarter-final match between Bryan M. Grant of Atlanta and Berkeley Bell of New York.

Rainville eliminated Lockhart yesterday without much trouble, 6-0 7-5 ,and Grant held a big advantage over Bell when rain forced postponement of the remainder of their match. The little Atlantan had won the first set 6-1, and was leading 3-2 in the second when time was called.

Tommy Miller Will Pilot C.G.E. Outfit

Tommy Miller will pilot the C.G.E. entry in the Men's City Softball League, it was decided last eve when softball players held a meeting in the gatehouse at the plant, and organized for the coming season. he Shop softball loop will also operate and the closing date for entries from the various departments was set at May 2nd. . . . . ..

Dee Sproule was elected president, Ev. Thomas vice president, while Ed Tracy will act as secretary. The executive committee consists of Bill Bennett, Tommy Miller and Las Calladine.

The Electrics have a wealth of material from which to select a team, some of which is the best in the city, and the managers hope to call a practise next week when every player in the plant will be given a try-out, and if the employees turn out, the Electrics will be the team to beat for the city laurels.

Norwood Team Wins High-Scoring Game

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, April 20.—The first interschool softball game of the season between Norwood and Havelock was played at the local park grounds yesterday (Thursday 19) the visitors carrying off honors by a score of 18 to 15 in a fast game that beelonged to either team until the sixth innings, when the visitors pulleed away, scoring five counters, giving them a lead of two over the home town boys. Havelock failed to score in the sixth innings, and made only one tally in the seventh, the visitors batting another two in to bring the tally up to 18 runs, a lead of three over the local youngsters.

The most spectacular playing was by Gray Kemp, who slugged in three home run hits out of a total of four counters. These were the only home runs of the entire game. Stewart Miller accounted for four tallies for the same team, Brunton and Hill two each and Voyer, Fraser and Hunter one apiece.

A most exciting diversion occurred when some youngsters perched on the fence between the park and Mr. Wiliam Mathison's farm property noticed that a fire which had been smouldering in the grass near the fence had crept underneath and for a time menaced the stable and barn belonging to Mr. Mathison. The fire was extinguished before any damage was done.

KOMONEN WINS BOSTON DERBY BY 4 MINUTES

Alex Burnside and Percy Wyer of Toronto Finish Fourth and Fifth Respectively.

FAVORITES RUN OUT.

BOSTON, April 20. (CP). — It seemed to-day the marathon fraternity of North America might just as well pack shoes and shorts in moth balls and leave distance runing solely to Dave Komonen.

The ease with which the mine-carpenter of Sudbury, Ont., bested 192 of the longest-winded and strongest limbed gentrf of Canada and the United States in the historic Boston marathon yesterday, was enough in itself to discourage all of Komonen's contemporaries.

It wasn't any flash in the pan either for dauntless Dave, in addition to being holder of the Canadian and United States marathon championships, had trimmed the best of them during the past 12 months in the Albany and Port Chester-to-New York marathons and other grinds.

Komonen was as fresh as the proverbial daisy as he strode over the finish line yesterday in a final, brilliant burst of speed. The second man, young Johnny Kelley, of Medford, was almost four minutes in his wake.

Despite the big pack which started with Dave yesterday noon, he saw but two backs those of Kelly and Bill Steiner, crack New Yorker, in the two hours, 32 minutes, 53 4/5 seconds he was on the up-hill and down-dale road. Steiner set the pace for 15 miles, then fell back when the Ontarion staged his bid. The New Yorker was third in 2.40:29 1/5, four minutes all but 11 seconds behind Kelley.

Alex Burnside of Toronto, finished fourth, another four minutes to the rear. In seventh place was Percy Wyer, the Toronto veteran. The Monarch Athletic Club of Toronto landed enough men among the early finishers to take the third team prize.

Last years' winner, when Komonen finished second, and the record-holder for the event, Leslie Pawson of Rhode Island, was forced out of yesterday's grind when stomach pains seized him at the 17th mile. Along with him went Jimmy Henigan, 1931 victor and Whitey Michelson of New York.

SOCCER PLAYERS OUT ON SATURDAY

Canada Packers Have Called a Practice for Saturday Afternoon.

The Canada Packers held an organising meting last night, in Duffus Rooms and formulated plans whereby they would hold a practise game on Saturday afternoon on King Edward Park at 2.30. After the brief work-out, the members and prospective members will convene a meeting to get whole-hearted support of the players of last year and intending associates.

It was unanimously agreed to hold a dance, at an early date, so as to get the necessary finance for the coming season.

Arrangements have been made so that one set of goal posts will be in position for the pre-trial of the players.

Making Comeback

Undaunted by the serious injuries she received in an aeroplane smash three years ago, Betty Robinson, pretty Chicago athlete, and formerly of Winnipeg, returned to the wars last week in the U.S. national indoor track and field meet in Brooklyn. While she did not win any titles, she nevertheless gave a good accounting of herself in the few races she entered and has decided that she will be able to get back into serious competition.

Scottish Cup Final Carded On Saturday

GLASGOW, April 20. — Glasgow Rangers and St. Mirren meet in the final for the Scottish Football Association Cup on Saturday, and unless a surprising upset occurs the Rangers may find themselves in possession of the historic trophy, as wel as having a stranglehold on the league championship.

Cup soccer and league soccer are traditionally two different things; even so St. Mirren's record is nothing to inspire doubt in the hearts of the Ranger supporters. Their best performance in the competition was to knock out Motherwell in the semi-final, while in the league they have won only eight games out of 35. All the odds will be on the Rangers to win the Cup for the eighth time. St. Mirren have taken it once, eight years ago.

RUSS KITCHEN AGAIN ELECTED TO HEAD LEAGUE

C.G.E., Keene, Westclox, Maple Leafs, Omemee, Sixth Line, Definite Entries.

DIVISION OF GATES.

Local League to Try for Intermediate "B" Rating Under Ontario Association.

The Peterborough Girls' Softball League will affiliate this summer with the Ontario Women's Softball Association, it was decided at the annual meeting of the league held in Duffus' last night. This was the most important development of a lively session at which seventeen girls and eleven men were present. Pete McGillen occupied the chair. The return of Russ Kitchen as president was another interesting matter.

Following a reading of the minutes, the treasurer's report was read and a balance shown of $52.10. A motion was passed that a bill of $5.50 be paid to cover an accident to the president's car on a league business trip last season. The election of officers followed with these results: Hon. president, Robert Cotton; honorary vice-presidents, J. J. Duffus, Percy Bond and Dr. Wright; president, Russ Kitchen; vice-president, Pete McGillen; secretary, Mrs. J. Mann; treasurer, Gladys Mortimer; executive, managers of the teams.

Six Sure Entries.

Entries were next called for and the following responded: C.G.E., Keene, Westclox, Maple Leafs, Omemee and Sixth . Closing date for entries to be in was set at May 2nd, and further entries should be sent to the secretary, Mrs. J. Mann at 336 Euclid Avenue. Teams entered last year are exempt from paying an entrance fee for this year, but other teams may be obliged to pay $5.00, the question being left to the executive.

It was decided to advertise for umpires, their fee to be set by the executive. It was also decided to advertise for a caretaker who will receive ten per cent of the money taken in at games. Some discussion followed regarding the division of the gates at games, and it was finally agreed to continue the rule of last year, that the gates be split three ways, after the umpires and caretaker had been paid, one-third going to the league, and a third each to the competing teams.

Certificates will be issued, fifteen to a team, and must be returned signed to the secretary at a date to be decided by the executive. Players must participate in three games to be eligible to take part in the playoffs.

Try For "B" Rating.

The question of affiliating with the Ontario Association came up next and caused considerable argument pro and con, a motion finally carrying by a large majority that the local league should affiliate this year with the Ontario Women's Softball Association, and try to secure and intermediate 'B' rating.

There was some discussion regarding a benefit fund for injured players, but this was left over. The chairman stated that with other local sports experiencing difficulties getting organized, it appeared possible that the girls' softball games would be the main sporting atraction here this summer. They decided to open the league on May 21st, and set the next meeting, an executive one, for May 2nd. Various other matters were discussed, but left over for the present. The session then adjourned.

DISCOURAGED

MOOSONEE, Ont., April 19.—(C.P.)—Apparently despondent over losing his home and everything he owned in a fire yesterday, Harry E. Heggart was taken into custody today after he was discovered to have slashed his neck with a razor. The wound apparently was not serious and Heggart, who said after the fire 'we were lucky to get out alive,' walked with Corp. E. S. Covell, Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer to the station. He was taken to Cochrane by the officer.

Why The Y.M.C.A. Is Not Self-Supporting

The question is often asked: Why is the Y.M.C.A. not self supporting? In order to make it such, membership fees would have to be placed at such a figure that it would result in an exclusive club beyond the reach of those for whom it was designed to serve and who need it most. The fees of the Association membership are graded so that the boys may join at a modest cost, the young man beginning to earn pays a higher rate and the business man pays all of the cost of his membership. The fees in Peterborough are comparable to membership fees in other cities of similar size which have been found to be reasonable and within reach of the average young man or boy. The "Y" membership is not composed of well to do men's sons but is made up of the boys and young men from average families.

Peterborough Association ranks first in Canada in number of members in proportion to population according to statistics supplied by the Canadian National Council showing that the young men and boys of the city appreciate and take advantage of the splendid building, one of the finest in Canada.

The actual revenue from fees last year was $5,392 the highest on record in any year in Peterborough and is over $1,000 more than the peak year before the new addition was built.

When Charles Willard, 83, a noted shot, was buried at Falehurst, England, his gun was bound to the coffin and taken into the church.

NEBRASKAN IS ALL READY FOR ENGLISH VISIT

Practised All Winter on Omaha Courses in Preparation for St. Andrew's Gales.

EXPECTS TO WIN TITLE.

Refuses to Take Part in British Open—Former Conqueror of Bobby Jones.

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP). — Brimming with confidence and with a game that's both longer and stronger than when he won the United States open championship last year, Johnny Goodman, 24-year-old Nebraskan, yesterday pronounced himself "all oiled-up" for his first invasion of foreign links.

Johnny sails Saturday with eight other members of the American Walker Cup team to engage a British side in the eighth of a series of international golf competitions. When Johnny executes his first stroke in the team matches it will be the fulfillment of a cherished ambition.

Goodman has taken ample precautions against failure in his debut as an internationalist. Well-meaning friends cautioned him about the fierce gales that sweep the famous St. Andrew's links in Scotland.

"The wind can't blow any harder than it does in Omaha in the winter," Johnny said. "So I practiced all winter long and didn't do so badly. Occasionally teeing up in the fairways, I played 23 rounds and I was 62 strokes under par."

He plans to take advantage of the free ride-in-style across the ocean, and play in the British amateur championship. His characteristic boldness, that he displayed so markedly in his surprising defeat of Bobby Jones in the 1929 national amateur, reared itself into his discussion of the British championship.

Expects to Win Title.

"Don't be surprised if I come home with the title," he said.

"I'm all oiled-up for this trip and if I get an even share of the breaks, I'll probably win the championship," he said he definitely would not play in the British open.

Upsetting Bobby Jones or winning the open crown didn't give Goodman his greatest thrill. It came five years ago in the final round of the Nebraska State championship. He was playing Rodney Bliss, runner-up last year in the intercollegiate and western amateur championships, for the Nebraska State title. They were all square at the end of the regulation 36 holes. Johnny hooked his drive into a cluster of tall trees, leaving a difficult 190-yard shot to the green. He could neither play between the trees nor over them. So he chose a No. 2 iron, hooked it widely over the fairway and the ball landed eight feet from the cup. He canned the putt for a winning birdie and his third consecutive championship.

Besides a bagful of tried and faithful clubs, Johnny is taking with him to Scotland and England his famous war whoop—"Whamdittie." It doesn't mean anything, but he says it after every shot.

"If it's a bad shot I say 'Whamdittie' so the next one will be good,' he said.

ANNUAL MEETING

Present Organization in Its Tenth Year—Plans Discussed for 1934 Season.

A general meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club was held on Wednesday, April 18 at the Chamber of Commerce with Lt. Col. C. H. Ackerman, the newly-elected president in the chair. Among those present were: Messrs. F. Dyer, R. N. Stuart,, G. Langhorne, D. Mitchell, J. Lawrence, A. Hamilton Salisbury, W. Biggs, J. Gore, F. Imming and C. H. Ireson. The president expressed his pleasure at being put in a position to foster and stimulate such a fine game as cricket and said he would give active, personal service in promoting the interests of the game and of the Peterborough Croket Club.

After general discussion the meeting appointed a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. F. Dyer, R. N. Stuart and G. Langhorne to consider the club's position with regard to finance, the County championship, the development of younger players generally, and to report to a general meeting of the Club to be held shortly.

The following are the club officers for 1934: President, Col. C. H. Ackerman; vice president, G. Lawrence; hon. president, Dr. Hammond; Hon. vice president, H. A. Morrow; captain, F. Dyer; vice captain, R. Mawhood; secretary, G. Langhorne, 223 Hurley street or Clarady, P.O.; treasure, R. N. Stuart.

In Its Tenth Season

The Cricket Club as at present constituted is in its tenth season, but it is a revival of an old and at one time very flourishing organization. There is a definite record of Peterborough Cricket as far back as 1861, at that time there were clubs in nearly every city and town in Ontario. In the 1880's the local club was so flourishing it was able to engage a professional, but later the interest in the game wanted eventually the club, in common with many others in the Dominion, ceased to function.

In 1924 the club was revived here and has been quite successful, last years it was in the semi-finals of the County Championship and won a large majority of its club matches. They are looking forward to even greater success this season.

The crying need here and throughout the Dominion is for new young players; a scheme has been put forward by the Hon. R. C. Matthews for interesting Canadian schoolboys in the game by providing suitable grounds, equipment and instruction. It is hoped something in that line will be arranged here. To quote from an article and the Mail and Empire, Jan. 2, 1934:

"This goes to the root of the whole matter, and there is no reason to doubt that if the scheme is taken up seriously, the boys will become interested . . . and if they do become interested there is no doubt as to the result. Their natural aptitude for outdoor sport will in time make them worthy competitors with their compatriots in the other parts of the Empire. This will take time and patience but if and when the interest of the boys is fully aroused there can be little uncertainty as to the ultimate result".

If any young men or boys feel interested they could get in touch with any member of the executive and they would be very heartily welcomed.

FIND ONE LAD'S BODY.

FORT ERIE, Ont., April 19 (C.P.).— Rivermen to-day are searching the waters of the Niagara River for Nelson Maurer, aged 7, second little son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Maurer, of Buffalo, drowned six weeks ago when he and his brother, Donald, aged 9, fell off the shore ice at Erie Beach.

Recovery of the body of the latter yesterday led rivermen to believe the other would be found in the head-water of Niagara almost simultaneously If not found here it might drift to Niagara Falls.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By C. J. P.

Much was said,and what is more important, much was done at the reorganization meeting of the Girls' Softball League last night in Duffus'. We ware glad to see Russ Kitchen elected president, he being the first loop prexy and a mighty good one, too. Pete McGilen, who headed the circuit last season, stated he would not have the time for this responsible position this year and withdrew. But he stood for the vice-presidency and got in. Someone asked if Russ would be playing baseball—he wasn't present himself—this year, as that might keep him out of softball. But the answer was, "No, Russ said he wouldn't play baseball this year." He'll be missed there, if that's true.

• • • • • •

They decided to open the season May 21st, and likely about eight teams will be in. Those entered last night were: Keene, Sixth Line, Omemee, Westclox, C.G.E. and Maple Leafs. A couple more would round the circuit out okay. The most important matter dealt with was the affiliation of the league with the Ontario Women's Softball Union. This caused some argument, but most of the seventeen women and eleven men voted to affiliate, and that's settled. Just how it will work out may be something else again. We thought it was pushed through too rapidly altogether as it's a mighty knotty problem.

• • • • • •

Undoubtedly such an affiliation has its advantages, but there are two sides to every question. For one thing, the local and district teams in this league must now go by the Association rules, one of which calls for no one but women coaches on the base-lines. Then, the league must pay an affiliation fee, and perhaps dig down and aid the winning team in the playdowns. We don't know if any of the Lakeshore teams are affiliated, or where the local winner may have to travel. It may be a real long hop, and those cost plenty of shekels, as well as forcing the players to get off work. But the biggest objection we see is the fact that a winner must be declared here by whatever date the Association sets.

• • • • • •

If that date happens to be about August 7th, then the loop playoffs here must commence the last of July or the first of August. No more of these long summer schedules here with the playoffs in September—that's out! No more of that independent feeling, finishing up whenever they please. They've got to have a winner declared sometime in August, whatever date is set, so they can commence the Ontario playdowns which take considerable time before the final playoffs for the Provincial title are reached. All right, only one team can win the championship here, and what are those other seven teams going to do the last half of August and the first part of September? That wasn't considered very carefully last night.

• • • • • •

One suggesting was that maybe the teams could continue and playoff for a cup or something—but a league race loses all interest when the champion has been declared. After that, the games are just the same as exhibition games to the fans. We may be wrong, and find huge crowds sticking right to the end, but it appears to us now that the gates will suffer after a champion has been declared, and even some of the teams may no longer wish to play. As for holding up the declaration of a winner for the Ontario Association, well that may or may not work. We don't think it would work, but even if it did, how long can you hold them up? A week at the most. No, you're more or less sacrificing a league the last several weeks of the summer—it seems to us—for the sake of the winning team.

• • • • • •

Our comments in this case may draw considerable criticism and we'll welcome it. We're always for organized sports when the thing seems to be best for the players. We doubt if such is the case with the local gals' league. They had a good loop, drawing big crowds, could run as late in the summer as they liked with a grand five-game playoff series at the finish, and could play exhibition games with any team in Ontario if they wished to test their strength—so why change Well, they did and we hope it proves okay. But we still think the decision was a bit abrupt. The president wasn't even at the meeting, and a couple of more teams which may enter weren't represented. True enough they should have been, but they weren't and they may not like this affiliation. However, the loop will affiliate and seek an intermediate 'B' rating. So that's that. The executive will meet and clean up other business and take further entries on May 2nd.

• • • • • •

The C.O.B.L. meets in Cobourg tomorrow with Oshawa and the O.B.A.A.—and maybe Ulster League—present in a final attempt to clear up the muddled senior baseball situation in Eastern Ontario. If Oshawa again refused to return as a full-time playing member of the loop, it was thought that the question of an interlocking schedule between the Central and the Ulster circuits might be reopened, but according to Belleville's meeting last night, we understand the Belleville club will insist upon Oshawa returning or else keep 'em out of ball. This may prove too drastic and the session is liable to again end in a deadlock. If such is the case, what will the C.O.B.L. do—throw up its hands in disgust and disband for the season? It seems to us that club delegates should go to that meeting with open minds, prepared to listen to any proposition for the sake of the league, and not imbued with only one idea. Well, we don't know what the outcome will be, and can only hope for the best.

The following dispatch this a.m. comes from Lindsay: "A boxing and wrestling tournament, one of the best to be held here in years, will take place in the Armouries on Saturday night, April 28th, under auspices of the sergeants of the Victoria and Haliburton Regiment. Some capable Toronto boys will mix it up with Peterborough and Lindsay fighters. Art Wileman, Lindsay, will meet Ben Labelle of Toronto at 140 pounds. In boxing, Len Minicola, Peterborough, will meet Bob Scott, of Toronto; Eric Stewart, Lindsay, will meet Jack Rainbow, Toronto, 135 pounds. Other Toronto boxers who will take part are Bob Norton, Jack O'Shea, Roy Rainbow and Ben Lyons." The latter, we imagine, is not the Ben Lyons who married Bebe Daniels.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Georgina Piswell,
Keene, Ont.

Your writing illustrates generous qualities, and I am very much afraid that if you do not learn how to curb this instinct, you will find that it has a habit of leading you into difficulties. I do not mean to imply that you must become 'stingy' but I do wish to impress you with the fact that generosity is like any other characteristic, it must be controlled. It is possible to even offer too much love where it is not appreciated. I am only giving you this as an example, because I can see that youe are quite young, and will listen to reason. The smaller letter formations in your signature, depict a changeable nature. This, however, will improve and become more setled as you become older. Your 't' bar describes determination of a dynamic type, and so you should be encouraged to try very hard to improve your knowledge, and make the most of yourself. Learn how to choose your clothing, and how to wear it, for I am sure that you have a loving personality, and if offset by the correct poise and character in style, should assist you greatly in the future development of your hopes and ambitions.

Reta Piswell,
Keene, Ont.

The writing on your sample indicates that you are a person with a vivid personality. You seem to make your personality felt. You are most expressive, and desire to impress a certain definite qualification which you possess upon people. You should work where you can have the time to express your artistic temperament in a designing field. That is the second and more noteworthy side of your indomitable personality. Your health should be very good judging from the formations of your writing, but it may be necessary for you to endeavour to create an atmosphere of peace about you, in order to retain this characteristic. Refrain from becoming victimized by outbursts of anger. You are of course very young yet, and will develop gradually into what you wish to be, provided, of course, that you guard your spasmodic temperament. You may send me your birthdate, month and year for further assistance if you wish, but of course this is not necessary or essential in the delineating of handwriting.

Eunice Duncan,
Warsaw, Ont.

Your writing shows keen mental ability and forethought. Your capitals describe excellent imagination and an artistic tendency. Your taste is discriminating and quite individual. You appear to be a very quick thinker, and so I might suggest work as in banking where rapid figuring would interest you, of course, there are many other lines of occupation in which this talent of yours could be put to excellent use. Your disposition is rather inclined to be reserved and secretive. You seem to desire to keep things to yourself, as though you do not trust people. That characteristic will serve well in a business which requires secrecy. You seem to be quite choice in your friendship, and do not as a rule make sincere or confidential friends outside of those with whom you have to come in contact in the business world. You do not apply yourself to detail as thoroughly as you might, but that can be overcome later when you are more mature. Your birthsign is Pisces, the Fishes. You are ruled by Neptune, and may find that May and June are your best months with Saturday the most fortunate day.

Alice Brown,
Norwood, Ont.

This handwriting tells that you are honest and unfeigned—somewhat self conscious and nervous. You are the possessor of two outstanding characteristics, kindness and understanding. You are one who thirsts for knowledge. Extensive research offers wonderful opportunities for you. Your mind is so keen, exacting and thorough. It will be necessary for you to keep busy in order to develop your power of concentration and will power to a greater degree. You are determined to be successful and you will be when you have made all of your talents work for your betterment. I mentioned above that you were the possessor of two characteristics, but that does not mean to say that you are at present aware of either of these attributes. I venture to suggest that if you try very hard to realize the power for good that is inherent in your nature, you will find that it is quite natural to expect some good to come from this knowledge. Your birthsign is Leo the Lion. You are ruled by the Sun. January and October are your most fortunate months, and I think you will find that Sunday is your best day.

Elisabeth Jones,
Norwood, Ont.

This writing is expressive of an intelligent personality. You seem to be quite well able to adjust yourself to almost any condition. You are very sensible and do not grieve over things that you cannot have. Your mental powers are well developed, but you are prone to crowd too many ideas into your head at once, though there is a noteworthy tendency predominate in your writing, which tells me that you can undertake more than one proposition at a time, and yet make a fair success of both. You are distinctive and diplomatic. You appear to attire yourself in robes according to your individual taste. You do not as a rule let yourself deviate from the path of dignity. You should be fond of music and flowers, but not enough to give up your time to the cultivation of either. Your general character is very good but you must be on guard not to promise to do too much for others. Your sympathetic nature is an invitation to parasites. Your birthsign is Taurus, the Bull, ruled by Venus. May and July are your best months. Friday your best day and your number is 10.

New Excise Changes Aid Mr. Average Man

OTTAWA, April 20 (C.P.).—Mr. "Average Man's" interest in the budget is chiefly in the excise tax changes. But the holder of gold stocks considers what effect the 10 per cent. tax on gold will have on market quotations. The sugar duty is reduced from two to one cent per pound and on grape sugar and glucose it drops to one-half cent. Other changes include a decrease of the tax on cigarette tubes from four to three cents per hundred, a lowering from $1.50 to 75 cents per gallon in the rate on sparkling wines, and a change in the stamp tax on postal notes from $1.00 or less from three to one cent.

The three per cent. duty on malt and the 12½ cent gallonage tax on beer will be decreased slightly by incorporating the two into a single excise duty of 7½ cents per pound on malt, carrying a hint of cheaper brew for the beer drinker.

BOY RISKS HIS LIFE TO SAVE BROTHER

GENERAL GRIESBACH CRITICIZES CANADAS FAILURE TO CONTRIBUTE FAIR SHARE TO NAVAL DEFENCES

Annual Dinner of Officers of Rangers is Most Colorful Affair.

MILITIA IS PRAISED.

Officers Make Presentation to Former Commander, Lt.-Col. M. H. Park.

With little or no criticism to offer, which he remarked, "you might consider a good sign" Colonel W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., District Officer Commanding last evening expressed his entire satisfaction with the progress and efficiency of the Peterborough Rangers, and paid high tribute to the work of Lieut.-Colonel G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., as O.C. of the unit.

Colonel Anderson's words of commendation were addressed to the officers of the unit who were gathered at the Armouries for their annual dinner, with Captain Fred Hart, presiding as president of the Officer's Mess. The function, one of the most colorful in the calendar of the unit, was largely attended, not only by officers of the Rangers, but by the officers representative of sister units of the local garrison and from the district, as well as other guests.

Highlights of the program were the address of Major-General the Hon. William Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., K.C., former commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade (C.E.F.), who urged the importance of the work of the militia, and criticised Canada's failure to contribute her fair share to the naval defences of the Empire; and the presentation made by the Ranger's Officers' Mess of a handsome piece of silver plate to Lieut.-Colonel M.H. Park, V.D., predecessor to the present officer commanding of the unit.

After the toast to "The King" had been duly honored, the Mess President extended a welcome to Major-General Griesbach and other guests and read messages of regret at inability to attend the function from Lieut.-Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., A. E. Peck, K.C.,

FRANCE HUNTS MORE SUPPORT

Foreign Minister Hopes to Strengthen Alliances With Poland, Little Entente.

HEADS FOR WARSAW.

(By Stuart Moroney—A.P. Staff Writer).

PARIS, April 21 (A.P.).—France sped Foreign Minister Louis Barthou on a hunt for support to-day in the French fight against the rearming of Germany.

The Minister, with all disarmament negotiations at a standstill, set out with the aim of strengthening France's alliances with Poland and the Little Entente.

His first destination was Warsaw. After trying to patch up differences with Poland, he plans to continue to Praha. From there he may go on to Belgrade.

Franco-Polish relations entered a new phase when the Poles took the unexpected step of signing a 10-year friendship treaty with the Nazis.

Officially, the French say they are happy over the newly found feeling between Germany and Poland. They say it lifts the Polish corridor war threats from the sphere of reality at least for 10 years.

There are many in France, however, who fear the Poles are being duped, that the treaty merely enables Germany to gain time for an ultimate thrust at Poland. In such an event, under the Franco-Polish treaty, France would be compelled to aid Poland.

Sister of Desperado's Pal Hamilton Claims Party Left There Wednesday.

HAD GIRL COMPANION.

Left One of 2 Cars Behind—Men Heavily Armed, Dillinger Limping Badly.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Apr. 21 (A.P.).—Mrs. Isaac Steve and her son are held in the county jail here on charges that they had harbored John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, and his henchman, John Hamilton. Mrs. Steve's brother, at her home here last Tuesday night.

Dillinger, Hamilton and a woman left the city Wednesday morning, officers said.

Mrs. Steve and her son were placed under arrest by five Department of Justice agents, who said that Dillinger, Hamilton and their woman companion came here Tuesday in two automobiles. One of these cars was left behind and was seized by Federal officers. The other car, officers said, contained rifles, machine-guns and ammunition.

The seized car bore one Tennessee license plate.

Dillinger Limping.

Charles Campbell, Mrs. Steve's son, told officers, they said, that Dillinger walked with a decided limp and that Hamilton, injured in one shoulder, had difficulty using one arm. Both, the officers quoted Campbell as saying, were heavily armed with rifles and machine-guns, and had steel vests.

The Department of Justice agents arrived here by aeroplane yesterday and conferred with Sheriff Willard Welsh. Shortly afterward, accompanied by three deputies, they raided the Steve premises and found the abandoned motor car in a barn.

2 YOUNG GIRLS ARE ASSAULTED

Attacks Rouse Chicago School Officials Against Juvenile Delinquency.

THREE CASES IN 2 WEEKS.

CHICAGO, April 21.— (A.P.)— Two new attacks on small girls alarmed school authorities to-day and spurred them into redoubled action against juvenile delinquency in Chicago.

The victims of the attacks, both reported last night from the same north side neighborhood, were Viola Betty Penderson, four, and Peggy Jane Hanson, five.

Viola was lured to a garage where she was beaten and stabbed with a heavy steel file. Kenneth Palmetter, nine, arrested shortly afterward, confessed to the attack, police said. He was taken to the Juvenile Home.

Peggy Jane was criminally assaulted. Her assailant was unidentified red-haired boy about 15, escaped.

Aroused by the two latest attacks and the death last week of Dorette Zeitlow, 2½ years old, who was lured to an abandoned ice house by George Rogalski, 13, school officials called psychiatrists to help in the drive to stamp out juvenile crime.

A psychiatric survey probably will be one of the first steps.

Trotzky's Furniture Threatened For Debt

BARBIZON, France, April 21 (AP)—Leon Trotzky got another ultimatum to-day—this time from a collector.

A nervous clipping agency, fearing that Trotzky will comply with the Governments' expulsion order without paying a bill, sent the sheriff to the Russian exiles' village.

The sheriff, who threatened to seize Trotky's furniture unless the obligation is discharged within three days, didn't see the debtor but a member of the household promised payment would be made.

The police went through Trotzky's baggage last night and notified him he must leave France as soon as possible. The exile, rejected by other nations, apparently was reconciled to returning to Prinkipo Island as soon as he obtains the necessary Turkish visa.

ROME REJOICES UPON BIRTHDAY

Throng Misses Duce's Address as Annoyed He Breaks "Mikes" in Moving Them.

CITY 2,687 YEARS OLD.

ROME, April 21—(AP)—The 2687th birthday of Rome was celebrated today. Premier Benito Mussolini inaugurated many public works and accepted on behalf of the city a monument to Simon Bolivar erected outside the national stadium by Venezuela, Peru, Ecuador, Chile, Colombia and Panama.

Para Perez, Venezuelan minister, offered the monument to Rome in the name of the six Bolivarian republics, recalling the ties uniting Italy and South America and the oath taken by Bolivar at Monte Sacro to liberate South America from Spanish rule.

Mussolini had a disagreeable experience in talking to thousands of Fascists at Venezia Square this morning. Several hundred of them sang while he was talking.

It was because most of the throng could not hear him.

The vigorous duce, annoyed at having to stand behind microphones in the speakers' stand, lifted the battery of 'mikes' bodily and deposited it so heavily to one side that the delicate mechanisms were broken.

In consequence, the loud speaker system was cut off.

SOVIET CHECKS HER DEFENSES

President Urges Women, Children Be Trained to Carry On While Men Fighting.

MAINTAIN VIGILANCE.

MOSCOW, April 21 (A.P.).—Under the lash of President Michael Kalinin, Soviet leaders pushed forward to-day a vast program for defence against war.

Returning from a country-wide tour, the President struck at the vulnerable spots in Russia's defensive armor. He urged particularly in a call published in the newspaper La Pravda the training of women and children "and others not fit for military service" to carry on should their men be called to fight.

"Some think," President Kalinin said, "that since war has not yet been proclaimed against the Soviet Union it will not be done at all. Those so thinking have lost their vigilance."

Lending impetus to the drive to emphasize the need for preparedness, hundreds of slogans are being prepared for use in May Day celebrations.

"Imperialists are preparing new wars against the U.S.S.R." one reads, and there are others such as: "JaJpanese Imperialists are organizing anti-Soviet provocations in the Far East," workers, peasants, Red soldiers, strengthen the defences of our country. Long live the Far Eastern Red Army."

Kaiser Keeps Silent Upon 1908 Interview

BERLIN, April 21 (C.P.). — The former Kaiser Wilhelm declined today to comment on the unexpurgated manuscript of an interview he gave in 1908 to William Bayhard Hale, American newspaperman, and published in the May issue of the Atlantic Monthly

Baron Ulrich von Sell, Wilhelm's adjutant, communicated with his master at his home in Doorn, Holland, and issued the following statement:

"I regret to say that His Majesty is unable to offer any expression of opinion concerning the Hale interview. His Majesty has given his word of honor to the Dutch Government that he will refrain from all political activities.

"The Far Eastern question is a highly political one and one which involves the most delicate consideration.

"Besides, Holand, with her Far Eastern colonial possessions, is directly affected by events in the Orient. His Majesty is determined not to give even a semblance of meddling in political questions

Pants Caught Fire

Stephen bravely entered the smoke and flame filled kitchen of the home to rescue Joseph, whose hair was singed by the flames. As he went in Stephen's pants caught fire and they were blazing as he came out of the house with his brother in his arms.

Fire prevention officer John McGrattan administered first aid to Stephen and Dr. M. N. Faris was summoned. The lad was removed to the hospital.

When firemen reached the home in response to telephone calls they were alarmed by what sounded like a baby crying in the kitchen. They found the spot from where the sound was coming to discover a cat caught in a cellar-way and near asphyxiation from smoke. The fire had started when the boys put paper on the stove, it flaring up and falling to the carpet to which it set fire. The interior of the kitchen was destroyed.

LYNCH VICTIM'S WIDOW ASKING HEAVY DAMAGES

Governor Rolph of California, Sheriff, San Jose News, Radio Station, Police Named.

$1,050,000 DAMAGES.

Charges First Official With Violating Oath of Office, Aiding.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 21. — Governor James Rolph, Jr., of California, who declared the lynching at San Jose last November of two kidnap-slayer suspects "the best lesson California ever has given the country," was sued yesterday for $1,050,000 by the widow of one of the victims.

Mrs. Evelyn Holmes, widow of John M. Holmes, alleged in her complaint the Governor aided and abetted in inciting the public mind by statements that he would offer no protection to Holmes and Harold Thomas Thurmond, held as suspects in the kidnap-slaying of Brooke L. Hart, young San Jose merchant.

The suit also named as defendants Sheriff William J. Emig of Santa Clara County, from which jail the men were dragged by a mob and hanged to trees; the San Jose News and radio station KQW of San Jose, and its operators, Fred J. Hart, C. V. Dahl and Eva P. Hart, and 100 John Does, 10 identified as San Francisco policemen.

Mrs. Holmes filed the suit in her own name and that of her two children, David, 6 and Joyce, 5.

Not Commenting.

Apprised of the suit, Governor Rolph said, "I haven't seen any of the papers yet, so I can't comment."

The Governor, who declined to call out National Guardsmen when a mob gathered, and allegedly proclaimed his intention of pardoning "any one who is arrested for lynching those two guys," was accused in the suit of "violating his oath of office, and aiding, abetting and encouraging the mob."

Sheriff Emig, who was slightly injured when a section of the crowd stormed the jail and seized Holmes and Thurmond, was blamed in Mrs. Holmes's action for allegedly disarming his deputies and turning Holmes over to the mob.

The suit declares no warrant had ever been issued for the arrest of Holmes, and that he was merely held pending investigation. The San Francisco police are blamed by the complaint for returning Holmes and Thurmond to Santa Clara County after they had been brought to the county jail here "for safe keeping."

Henry To Shoulder Blame, Beer Changes

TORONTO, April 21 (C.P.)—As far as the Conservative party and my leadership are concerned I'm going to assume responsibility of the proposed changes in the liquor control policy that shall be submitted to the people so they can judge of us and know what they can expect from us if we are continued in office, Premier George S. Henry told members of the Conservative Businessmen's Club at a luncheon here yesterday.

"And I'm quite satisfied now as we are going into another campaign there will be a further endorsation of the present administration that has the courage to carry on and to modify the law as we fell the people of the province are asking for," the Premier continued. "I have no doubt their verdict will be that the administration shall carry on with the proposed freer distribution under enforcement and control."

HENRY REGIME FIRMLY BEHIND POLICY ON BEER

Extension in Sale Necessary Says Price at Windsor Rally.

MAIN ELECTION ISSUE.

Sees Proposal Aid in Reducing Growing Number Home Brew Permits.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 21. (CP) The Ontario Government will stand firmly behind its beer and wine policy at the forthcoming Ontario General elections. The extension in the sale of wine and beer was necessary, declared Attorney General W. H. Price here last night, and beer-by-the-glass will be the main issue in the elections.

Earlier in the day at Toronto, Premier George S. Henry left no doubt that his government was prepared to go to the people with its liquor policy as an issue.

A great problem had resulted in Ontario through the increasing number of home brew permits being obtained by residents of the province Col. Price told the Young Canada Conservative Club. He said liquor and beer consumption had dropped since the Liquor Control Act came into effect and the government decided to bring in its amendment extending the sale of beer and wine.

He referred to the situation in Quebec where beer was available in hotels and restaurants. In Quebec, he said, less than 9,000 home brew permits were reported but in Ontario to the total was 172,0000.

Col. Price criticized the Liberals' position on the beer and wine question, charging that they had been "floundering about" for 30 years. He claimed Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, had tried to dictate his followers' votes and actions in the legislature from a hotel arm chair.

20 Different Ideas.

"There are 20 members of the Opposition in the Legislature and they hav. 20 different ideas about the beer and wine issue," he said. "We are ready to place the record of our party on this great issue before the people at the coming elections."

He compared Great Britain's rise from the depression with the United States Government's steps toward recovery. United States, he said, had spent $12,000,000,000 in one year on recovery and was still in the grip of the depression.

Great Britain had climbed out of the economic crisis with a surplus through co-operation of all parties. There had been great sacrifice and increased taxation.

Canada, Col. Price said, would have to expend $1.000,000,000 annually if she had spent at the same rate as United States in overcoming her depression troubles.

FALL WHEAT AND CLOVER CROPS SUFFER HEAVILY IN THE COUNTY

Many Fields Are Now Too Far Gone to Make Reasonable Recovery.

POOR 1933 GROWTH

According to Agricultural Representative A. D. Runions, farmers from all parts of Peterborough County are much concerned over the condition of fall wheat and clovers.

While it is impossible to definitely estimate the loss caused by Winter and early spring killing, it is safe to say that even wth the most favorable weather conditions, many fields of fall wheat are now too far gone to make any kind of reasonable recovery and as a result will have to be broken up and sowed to some spring crop.

The situation as far as clover crops are concerned is also still doubtful, but there are also many fields that will only produce a very small crop of hay and the owners will in all possibility break them up and sow either a cereal or some other emergency hay crop.

Poor Growth in 1933

In the majority of cases the clover fallure can be traced to the 1933 crop not securing a sufficient amount of growth and development, especially root development, to withstand the vigors of the extremely severe winter. The past

Irish Market Is Glutted With Veal

Wholesale Slaughter of Calves Followed Government's Bounty.

CORK, Irish Free State, April 21 (C.P. Cable via Reuters) — When the Free State Government announced a bounty of $2.50 on calf skins, with a view to reducing the number of cattle in the Free State, cattle owners needed no second invitation.

Wholesale slaughter of calves is going on throughout the Free State and in the rush to get the bounty primitive methods of slaughter are being employed in many cases, leading to some revolting scenes.

The killings exceed 25,000 calves a week and the export of thousands of skins has depressed the English market. The government estimated that 200,000 calves should be slaughtered but this number is likely to be exceeded.

The market is glutted with veal and huge quantities are daily being distributed to the poor, while in many parts of Southern Ireland hundreds of carcasses are being dumped in old quarries and any other place that may be handy.

Reduction of livestock is part of the government's campaign to increse wheat production especially since the British set up tariff barriers as a result of Irish default of the land annuities.

TABLES TURNED ON EX-LYNCHER

Killer Prays Inside Prison as Mob Howls Outside for His Life.

RECALLS DEED IN '15.

SHREVEPORT, La. April 21 (AP) —Fred Lockhart, 38, who said he helped lynch Leo Frank in George in 1915, turned to the Bible for counsel to-day as cries of an infuriated mob sought to wrest him from jail here Tuesday still resounded in his ears.

"Judge not, that ye be not judged," the butterfly trinket salesman, who admitted attacking and killing 16-year-old Mae Giffin last week, read from the first verse of the seventh chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

Four companies of Guardsmen patrolled the parish courthouse grounds as Lockhart, in the rooftop jail, told the story of how he was a member of the mob which battered in the doors of the Georgia State Prison at Milledgeville to reach Frank.

Just three day ago an angry crowd of 3,000 persons stormed the jail and fought unsuccessfully with officers in their attempts to get the butterfly salesman and lynch him.

"I now know how Frank felt when he was taken from the Georgia prison and hanged," Lockhart said.

The slaying of Mary Fagan by Frank 19 years ago created a sensation.

A mob broke into the prison, Lockhart said, took Frank, drove 110 miles in an automobile to Marietta, Ga., and hanged him near Mary Fagan's grave. Lockhart said he drove the car.

Dr. Inkster, or Rev. "Jack" Inkster, as he was lovingly known to the members of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Marmora, was the minister of that church when it was erected. Deloro string quartette is furnishing musical selections and the now well-known Toronto pastor is assured greetings from a large gathering from the district as he revists scenes of his former labors.

Great Britain is replacing its present stamp issue with those of a more vivid color.

"Dorothy — do stop whining! Awfully sorry, Edith — she's usually so well-behaved. But she's been cross all week."

"Don't scold her, Helen. She wasn't hungry. When my children act this way I've often found they need a laxative. Try Castoria tonight."

"See my happy little girl today, Edith! And she ate the finest lunch you ever saw! Thanks for suggesting Castoria — it's wonderful!"

"Thousands of mothers think so too, Helen. You see, Castoria is made especially for children. You'll find it splendid for stubborn cases of sour stomach. Often laxatives made for grown-ups are so strong that they are actually upsetting—but Castoria is mild and SAFE. It tastes good, too."

NEW PLYMOUTH SIX BUILT BY CHRYSLER

Compare Plymouth Prices and Plymouth Features with other Lowest Priced Cars

DOES it surprise you to know that the New Plymouth Six is priced with the lowest?

The Plymouth Six has an all-steel body, reinforced with steel. The safest, strongest type of body. No wood to rot, nothing to rattle. Safe as a steel Pullman.

The Plymouth Six is the only car in its price field that has independent front wheel springing. These long, soft coil springs eliminate "back-seat bounce" and let the front wheels "step" over obstructions in the road. It is the same type of springing as is used in some of the world's highest priced cars.

No other car in its price field has Floating Power engine mountings. They are patented by Chrysler. Floating Power smothers engine vibrations — the passengers never feel the engine. You can ride long distances in a Plymouth Six without fatigue.

You cannot get hydraulic brakes in any other car at Plymouth's price. Plymouth hydraulic brakes are the safest, smoothest, simplest brakes. Nothing to oil —nothing to rattle. They will never give you "three-wheel braking" because they are always equalized . . . they cannot be otherwise.

Insist on getting these four vital features. Independent Front Wheel Springing and Floating Power give you greater comfort. Hydraulic brakes and all-steel body give you the safety you and your family must have.

Your Chrysler-Plymouth dealer invites you to have a ride in the New Plymouth Six. Accept his invitation and see for yourself that Plymouth is the best engineered car in the lowest price field. It's built by Chrysler!

INSIST ON THESE FOUR VITAL FEATURES

FLOATING POWER. Water in glass stays smooth and quiet with engine racing. You ride relaxed!

INDIVIDUAL SPRINGING. And this feature is on all models—even the lowest-priced.

SAFETY-STEEL BODY. Reinforced with more steel, with every joint welded permanently together.

HYDRAULIC BRAKES. Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes are the safest, most efficient brakes known.

Sabbath Message For The Shut-Ins

Written for The Examiner by the Ministers of the City.

PRAYER AND MEDITATION
(By Rev. A. H. Going, B.A.)

The Sabbath School superintendent, who was in the habit of praying with his eyes open in order to forestall the activities of unruly boys, may have literally obeyed the command of our Lord to "Watch and pray," but he also gave a practical illustration of one of the great requirements of prayer. There is no place in the religious life where a clear vision and an open mind is more needed.

Prayer without meditation is very apt to be rambling and incoherent. There has been many a prayer offered up and if it had been answered immediately the author would have been the most surprised man in the world. Yet we are supposed to pray for the things we need, or think we need, and to give thanks and praise for those which we have received. These should be carefully considered before we commit ourselves before God, even in private.

We certainly cannot exercise faith where we are either indifferent or half-hearted.

There are needs, however of the human soul that it would be difficult, if not altogether impossible, to express in human language. For these God has made ample provision. Paul says: "Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities; for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.' Our Heavenly Father has a deep and personal interest in human welfare and knows the needs of each individual.

Language may be necessary for us to inform each other of our requirements; but with God the language of the soul needs not to be expressed in words:

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire,
That trembles in the breast."

Prayer and meditation shape human character. No man can ponder in his heart great and good thoughts without being influenced toward a higher and nobler life; and the value of a character thus formed is beyond computation. God looked down upon His servant of old, and said: "Hast thou considered my servant, Job, a perfect and an upright man, one that feared God and escheweth evil." Can you measure what it means to have the approbation of God upon your character and conduct? Can you set a value upon the firm assurance of Paul, when he said, "I know that if this earthly house of my tabernacle were dissolved I have a building of God, an house not made with hands eternal in the heavens?" And yet this same assurance may be yours. No gift of divine grace was ever vouchsafed to any man that is not within the province of every other man. If we are willing to pay the price of loyalty and devotion to God that Paul paid, we, too, can stand where he stood, and say, "I know."

Cathedral Musings

CONTINUING the thought of our last week's musings, it will be seen that the true mystic who lives by a faith that is based upon personal knowledge and experience is very far from being a credulous simpleton, or an idle dreamer. On the contrary he is an intensely practical person, dedicated to and possessed by the love of truth. He is always seeking the "why" and "how" of things, always thirsting to get at the core and heart of the subject whether it be religion, science or philosophy.

Our western religions have suffered an incalculable loss in that to-day mystics and mysticism have little or no place in either their doctrine or practices. Neither has our ultra-materialistic civilization any room for the "friends of God." It was otherwise in Apostolic times and right down through the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. No one reading the New Testament but can plainly see that to be "in the spirit" was a common experience, a condition used to further and deepen the knowledge of God. Nor has Divine illumination been confined to the Christian era and religion. The "mysteries" of Greece, the experiences of the great Greek philosophers, the occult schools of Egypt and of the Orient, all tell a different story that we cannot gainsay. The laws of the spirit are eternal and immutable, the same to-day as two thousand years ago, and not confined to any one period or to any one kind; he who doeth the "works" shall know all the "doctrine"; and to-day it is just as possible for a man to walk in the Light and to do his daily work to the glory of God, whether he be factory hand, street sweeper or banker, as it was for the tentmaker named Saul.—Frater IX., Rosicrucian Order, San Jose, Calif.

Foreign Affairs

India, a Most Difficult Field for the Church and for the Statesman, is Slowly Yielding to Christianity.
(H. W. L. MAHOOD)

INDIA.

THE task of Christianity in the Western World has been complicated and made more difficult by the rise of purely materialistic political organizations. Communism in its ideals is materialistic. In the same class, you will not mistake much, to place Fascism and Nazism and Socialism. These organizations are intensely concerned about the things of life. The heart of the Capitalist is set upon profit and the control of the sources of wealth. Likewise the mind of the others mentioned.

H. W. L. MaHood

In India the field of Christian endeavor is different. Religions of many centuries of existence are not easily displaced. Hinduism is from of old. Partly right and much wrong, it has not met the deeper hunger of humanity's soul. Approach an ancient and false religion with a religion new and radically different and fanaticism is aroused. To such a field there is but one successful method of approach.

The man must be the religion he has come to voice. His message must carry its own authority. Wherein lies the authority of the messenger? No preaching is real preaching unless it is preaching with authority. The note of authority is the very essence of preaching. And there can be no note of authority in preaching except there be in the soul of the preacher a great and overwhelming conviction of certainty. And there can be no absolute sense of certainty aside or apart from the preacher's own personal experience of God.

An inner consciousness of God is necessary not only to the vitality but to the existence of religious assurance. And the depth of vitality, and of assurance, and of authority in a preacher will depend upon the degree and richness of his own experience, within his own soul, of Christ in God.

The work of Bishop Thoburn, and of Miss Isabell Thoburn, and of Stanley Jones has heightened human values in India. The insistence of Mahatma Ghandi that the untouchables be given a place in Hindu society was the direct result of the labors of men like Thoburn and Jones. Christianity levels folks upward. Christianity is a startling challenge. The challenge is inward. Where lies the motive of life and the quality of desires there is the meeting place of man with God. What God does for a man at this crisis meeting becomes his authority, and will remain so as long as the presence of God is cultivated. Such a convert to Christianity has something positive to communicate. It is livid, and dynamic, and moving.

All this we have written to speak of Stanley Jones. To meet him is to make a discovery. His religion is authoritative. The authority is within. He does not have to quote scripture. Religion is experience. It is not proof, nor argument. He is conscious of the constant indwelling of God. Therein lies his secret of power. To be with him is spiritually refreshing. So many talk about God. They have read about Him. They have heard about Him. Messages from such are empty. Not so when Jones speaks. Out of the fulness of his own inner life, and enriched by the conscious presence of God comes the message that meets the needs of the Hindu.

To bring Stanley Jones nearer to my Canadian and American readers, briefly, the story of how a New York actress listened to him, after reading his book, entitled "The Indian Road," and became a Christian. Anne Bird Paysoh, the convert, has written, "I Follow the Road." The book commemorates her conversion. Stanley Jones wrote the introduction. He begins it by saying: The revelation of a soul as it works its way through the mazes and complexities of modern life to spiritual victory and certainty is the most fascinating thing on this planet of ours. To watch a human soul as, amid many a hesitation, it alternates between hope and despair and then, through some inward intuition, like a homing pigeon, catches its direction and wings its way, with a strange, new gladness within its heart, to a life of harmony and peace and usefulness, is indeed something which we watch with breathless interest. And no wonder. For that very thing is what most of us want—we want to find certainty amid a world of uncertainties; we want living values amid a generally devaluated world—we want God.

There is nothing so characteristic of our age as the sense of futility, that has taken hold of many minds. We have had our way and now we find we don't want our way. We have practised self-expression and have come to the conclusion that we don't like the self which we are trying to express. For many life turns gray and meaningless.

To watch someone begin to work his way through all this and come out to a large place of freedom and victory, is to be held by life's greatest drama. In the pages of this book we are privileged to get an intimate peep into the soul of a really brilliant modern woman as she works her way out. This is how the story began, and how this book came to be written. During my visit to America in 1928 I was invited by the author to have dinner. (More.)

YOUR PROBLEMS

Religious and Social Questions Answered By DR. WYLIE CLARK

Could you describe in short form a few of the principal beliefs of the Buddhist and Mohammedan religions. Have they any chance of entering heaven?—R.W.B.

Buddhism consists of four sublime varities. The first asserts that pain exists; the second, that the cause of pain is desire or attachment; the third that pain can be ended by extinction; the fourth, shows the way which leads to extinction. This way consists in eight things: right views, right feelings, right words, right behavior, right obedience, right memory and right meditation. If there is failure in any of these then extinction is not attained and the soul has to continue its existence, passing from one state to another in an eternal quest.

Dr. Wylie Clark

Mohammedanism is stated in the declaration, "There is no God but God; and Mohammed is God's Apostle." Like the Christian's idea of God—God is creator and providence; but He has no son—Jesus is only a prophet to the Mohammedans.

There are guardian angels for each believer and at the end of life there is the resurrection and a final judgment.

Prayer is the key of paradise. I have attended some of their prayer meetings and they put Christians in the background. The giving of alms is urged. The drinking of intoxicating liquors is forbidden.

Will they get to heaven? We have to leave that to God who created all of us.

Is there in the New Testament a verse, "If ye know not your Father ye are bastards?" Has it any reference to Deuteronomy 23:2?—S.

There is a verse, Hebrews 12:8. "But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons." If you read the two chapters you will easily see that they refer to two different ideas.

If Christ is God why did He refer to God as His Father?—X.X.X.

Christ is God in that He is the Son of God. You are evidently bothered with the idea of one God and three persons in the God-head—the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

It is something like three men forming themselves into a company—they are three persons, yet one firm. Each has his own work, but as a firm they are three in one.

Would you please tell me the reason Easter never comes on the same day every year as Christmas does?—WM. C.

Easter is decided by the moon. It is the first Sunday after the paschal full moon—that is the full moon which happens upon or next after March 21, and if the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday after.

There is a general feeling that it would be an improvement to have it come on the same date each year.

As explained in my letter, what should I do about my children going to church and school?—L.A.D.

I would let them go with their father, and if possible go yourself.

As to the school, send them where you can agree that they will have the best chance for an education—anyway, avoid friction in the home.

With regard to births and deaths to say that each succeeding birth is another born to conquer death. What is meant here by conquering death? —C.H.

If there were no births and men continued to die, in a short time death would conquer the whole human race. If there were less births than deaths, then in the end death would conquer. If there were an equal number of each, then the battle would be even.

If there are more births than deaths, then death is being defeated. In the last six years I baptized 402 babies and buried 200 people—that is, in one congregation life was winning two to one.

Our All for the Kingdom — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Matthew 19:1-30
By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

The Pharisees sought to get the better of Jesus by inquiring his position on the question of divorce. He replied by upholding the sacredness of marriage, sanctioning divorce only on the grounds of adultery, saying, "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

It was in this connection that Jesus called little children unto him, saying, "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven". And he laid his hands on them and blessed them. Jesus was never too busy to make others happy.

A rich young ruler came to Jesus inquiring how to have eternal life. To Jesus' inquiry about God's commands of love to our fellowmen the young man expressed no consciousness of failure to meet his obligations to society. To make him socially minded Jesus said, "If thou wouldst be perfect, go sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." The young man went away sorrowful for he loved his money too much to use it in serving God and making others happy.

CRIME DECREASING.

The annual report of prisons and reformatories in Ontario for the last fiscal year reveals the fact that lawlessness in this province is steadily declining.

It might have been thought that the economic conditions of recent years would have resulted in a reverse of this condition, but the official figures show a remarkable decrease in the number of persons sentenced to prison in Ontario.

In 1914 the total committals for various offences numbered 14,801.

There was a sharp decline during the war years and for several years after, the lowest record being in 1917 when only 7,867 were sent to prison, but in 1923 an upward climb began, the total rising from 8,036 in that year to 21,421 in 1930.

Since then, however, the trend has been distinctly the other way. The total had fallen to 18,127 in 1932, the next year it dropped to 15,804 and last year committals totalled only 14,538, less than they were in 1914, although the population of the province had increased by three-quarters of a million people in the interim.

This improvement in crime conditions, despite unusual economic circumstances, is a development upon which Ontario is to be congratulated; the small total of jail committals is eloquent evidence that the vast majority of Ontario's citizens are law-abiding and trustworthy.

NOT A DEAD LOSS.

While no person feels like cheering the fact that the last fiscal year has added $136,200,000 to the national debt of the country, the situation in that regard is not as bad as it would seem at first glance.

Some of the sting is taken out because practically that whole amount is owed to ourselves and does not represent outside borrowing.

The situation as revealed by Hon. Mr. Rhodes' statement is, during the past year Canada has built up such a substantial trade balance—amounting to $152,000,000 in exports of goods and $90,000,000 in non-monetary gold—that it has not been necessary for the Government to do much borrowing abroad. On the contrary Canada has undoubtedly established large foreign credits that will reduce her capital obligations.

The debt increase has not been added to our outside obligations, but has for the most part been borrowed here at home from the savings of our own people, and, as the Globe remarks, "the interest on it will be paid to Canadian citizens and will for the most part be spent or re-invested from time to time in Canada to the general advantage of domestic trade and industry."

It is well to remember that fact, and to realize that the deficit announced is not all dead loss, because most of the money involved comes back to Canadians and will continue to play its part in the development of this country.

CONSULTING THE PUBLIC.

The series of institutional advertisements that has been inaugurated by General Motors Products of Canada—each bearing the slogan, "An Eye to the Future; An Ear to the Ground"—is an unique and effective way of explaining to the public the company's new philosophy by means of which they have practically made Canadian consumers a part of its great organization.

General Motors has certainly displayed originality in this novel idea of consulting hundreds of thousands of Canadians as to what they prefer in motor car construction, and then putting into use the most practicable of the ideas thus advanced.

The old plan of manufacturers was for executives to endeavor to decide off their own bat just what the public wanted or should have, and then to turn out the product accordingly.

That was more or less a hit-or-miss policy, and it certainly did not take the consumer into partnership as General Motors has done in their new method of asking the public to make known its ideas as to automobile construction.

The average man likes to feel that some consideration is being given to his needs and desires, a condition that has materially contributed to the success of this plan of consulting many thousands of car-owners and prospective purchasers.

It is not surprising to find that other industries see great possibilities in the idea, and that the example set by this automobile company may be followed in other lines.

A SIGNIFICANT ANNIVERSARY.

In arranging its annual church parade for the Sunday nearest to the anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres, the Canadian Legion is following a worthy precedent set by the first organization of veterans and maintained ever since.

It is fitting indeed that this anniversary should be commemorated each year, for while the Canadian army fought many great battles, the Second Battle of Ypres was its first major experience in modern warfare, and there the Maple Leaf soldiers displayed courage and determination that amazed the world.

No untried troops ever faced a more formidable test than did the Canadians when thrown in to fill a break in the line, and suffering the horror of the first use of poison gas, they stubbornly resisted the advance of the German hordes with such conspicuous success that the channel ports were saved.

Of them Sir John French said in his official despatch that electrified their Canadian people, "Their gallantry and determination undoubtedly saved the situation," while more complete reports both from British and German sources pay tribute to the magnificent defence against great odds that was maintained by Canada's citizen army.

The Canadian Legion does well to remember that anniversary, and to see to it that the people of this country do not forget one of the most gallant episodes in the history of the Canadian corps.

CONCERNING INFLATION.

It is a difficult business for the man on the street to get the correct angle with regard to inflation. Many people speak lightly and voluminously concerning this monetary formula, but it is suspected that they are not noted for complete knowledge on the subject. Apparently the western farmers believe that inflation is the only plan that will bring the price for their wheat and livestock up to a standard that can be translated into profits. They are quite insistent that the Government should do something about it.

On the other hand we have the evidence of Mr. Jackson Dodds, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who discussed inflation at some length before the parliamentary committee on banking and commerce lately. Mr. Dodds paints an unpleasant picture of what would occur in Canada if we were to dilute the currency. He says that once this process has been started no one knows how to stop it. Australia has been pointed out by the farmers as an example of a country that is forcing prosperity by means of inflation. Mr. Dodds retorts that Australia is on the way all right, but she cannot put on the brakes and does not know where she is going to land.

Economists who present various theories in regard to inflation appear to take certain phases of the process and show where they would be beneficial. The weak part about this is that none of them seem to take the whole general scheme and follow it out to a conclusion. They all seem to be in disagreement, and in view of this circumstance it would appear that the safe course to pursue is to either avoid inflation entirely or to adopt the mildest kind known, with a definite decision at the beginning as to when and where it is to be stopped. The Dominion Government, under the direction of Mr. Bennett, has studiously avoided any wide-open measure of inflation. It has consulted various authorities on monetary matters and their advice seems to be to the effect that it is a dangerous procedure to seek stabilization by manipulation of a monetary system. The bankers all suggest that inflation is to the financial fabric what copious drinks of liquor are to the individual who is not feeling well. He may experience a fine exhilaration for the time being, but is bound to encounter the headache when the stimulation has worn off.

In case of so much doubt it would appear to be the wise thing for Canada, in her efforts to restore prosperity, to stick to the methods that have proven the least hazardous.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

FOR PEACE.

Commenting on the walkout of a large number of university students in the United States, who expressed the belief by their action that the best way to prevent war was refusal to bear arms, the New York Sun has something to say. Oxford students, it will be remembered, by a very large majority also refused ever to fight for King and country. Thus there is the strike against war, about as adequate as it would be, if people went on strike against poverty disease, or some other universal ill.

The New York paper reminds the students:

They forget that while it takes two to make a peace agreement, either party to the contract may break it. As students they should be aware that again and again a nation has been drawn into war not because it courted strife but because its adversary believed it to be too weak to defend itself. Would Belgium's students of 1914 be glorified now if they had "struck" against war while their nation's troops were holding the line against the German invader? Would the Kaiser's Government have persisted in its provocative policies between 1914 and 1917 if it had thought the United States could effectively hit back?

In the end, pacifism boils down to whether or not a specific issue is worth fighting for. Thus, a leading member of one of the largest pacifist societies resigned recently along with a group of sympathizers because the organization supported non-violence in any circumstance. The protestants contended that pacifism should not be extended to "class wars," thus leaving themselves free, in the event of a socialistic or communistic revolution to man a machine gun without violating their oath to a hypothetical peace.

If this nation ever gets into a situation where peace can be preserved only with dishonor, its college students will do what college students always have done under such circumstances. They will join the colors.

The British people are under no illusions in regard to their self-preservation, and the national front presents what might well be considered a paradox. It is this. No British Government would last overnight which subscribed to the idea that the withdrawal of all defence would make the United Kingdom immune from attack. It is realized that if Britain did not have the strength and will to defend herself, the realm would be annihilated. And yet, if any British Government invited war to-morrow, there would unquestionably be a general strike of all labor. The Government surely knows the temper of the people, but it also knows the duty toward defensive strength if the British people are to live free.—St. Catharines Standard.

CHAPTER 44

Tiggie at that moment was in deeper water, having left the children behind for his final swim before coming in. He was lying on his back in a great patch of sunlight, kicking up showers of spray, somewhat like a gigantic infant in its bath.

"Look at him!" ejaculated Harvey. "Could anyone picture anything more sublimely comic? He really ought to do tank turns at the Hippodrome. The human hippopotamus, what? He's mistaken his vocation."

Yet while he spoke, his gaze was not on the object of these slighting allusions, but riveted upon the delicately flushed face of the invalid on the couch. And she was smiling oddly, spiritually, as though moved to exaltation by what she saw.

"My idea of him!" she said again, as though his words of careless disparagement had failed to reach her. "He is the—greatest man I have ever known. There is something about him—I don't know what—that I've never seen—in anyone else. I think it is—Divine." She stopped, breathing quickly, as though words were hard to find.

"Yes—yes?" said Harvey. He was leaning forward in his chair gazing at her with that queer hunger in his eyes which Spot had noted a little earlier. The mockery had wholly gone. He seemed to be dominated by some influence that drove him—and possessed him—like a drug. "What makes you think that, I wonder? Is he really different? Or is it only you who see him with different eyes?"

Viola answered him slowly, as if mesmerized. She was watching the distant figure with parted lips. "I don't know," she said again. "It may be—that no one else—has had the chance to see him—as I do. It may be given—to me only—to see the utter goodness—of his soul."

"That means you love him," said Harvey, and there was about the quietly uttered remark something of the nature of a lighted taper deliberately held to the edge of an inflammable material. He watched for the result as a boy might watch for the rapid flare of a beacon.

And he did not watch in vain. A great wave of color went suddenly over Viola, transforming her, in a fashion revivifying her. All the weariness and pain and disillusions of the past fell from her like an impeding cloak swiftly cast aside. She raised herself with a curious gesture, gazing upward as though she saw a vision. And the painter started forward in his chair with a half choked exclamation as though he saw one also.

Slowly her look came downward, seeming to narrow again to the confines of earthly limits. It sought once more the gleaming waters of the bay through which Tiggie was now solidly wending his way ashore. She sank back exhausted, panting, but the smile still played about her quivering lips. She whispered a few words which to any but Harvey would have seemed meaningless.

"Isn't it strange," she said, "how—we can go through life—without seeing the glory?"

ê ê ê

It was strange that the renewed acquaintance with its semi-antagonistic element should ripen into anything approaching friendship; yet so it was, though two days elapsed before Harvey approached the invalid again. During those two days he was practically invisible to the world at large, even Tiggie barely catching sight of him in the bar-parlor at night on his own way to bed.

Tiggie thought that he was drinking heavily and prepared to remonstrate with him in the morning. But when the morning came, Harvey's place was empty and the remonstrance went unuttered.

The golden weather was beginning to change. The southerly breeze was veering to the west, and Joe Penny said that it would blow before the week was over. He added that there was a patchy time ahead which might last out the moon, he shouldn't wonder. He hadn't quite liked the look of her the night before last when she was new.

To this lore Tiggie listened with politeness though with no great conviction; for the sun still shone with unabated brilliance though the sky was flecked here and there with shreds of fleecy cloud.

But on the morning of the second day there was more evidence of the coming change, and when Spot installed Viola in her corner he gave Helen strict injunctions to keep a sharp lookout on the weather. He himself was accompanying the nurse over the moor to the junction whence she was taking a train for London, since skilled nursing was no longer needed by the invalid who was beginning slowly but resolutely to do a little for herself.

Tiggie read the local paper by her side as usual, and they talked together in their customary desultory fashion about anything in general and nothing in particular, idling the time away together in the contentment of complete accord. Viola remarked, not for the first time, that she was very lazy, but then, as Tiggie never failed to point out, Spot had prescribed laziness, so it became a virtue. Though they never acknowledged it to each other, they were both dwelling on those peaceful summer days with the relief which only the storm-driven can ever know. To have nothing to do, nothing to battle against, was to each of them as if they had found a temporary resting place in the outer courts of paradise. They did not speak of their mutual sense of bliss. Perhaps they felt that it was too new or too transient for expression. Neither did they speak of the future. There was time enough for that. "Get well first!" had always been Tiggie's watchword, and not for worlds would he have raised any discussion that might impede that gradual progress. He realized that the peace of her surroundings went far towards the healing of both mind and body. To read her quiet welcome in her eyes each morning was the greatest joy that life held for him, and with every renewal of their intercourse he became more fully assured of the improvement that was taking place.

The fact that Spot actually proposed to be absent for a whole day spoke for itself. He had taken Jack and a fishing rod with him, and their departure combined with Harvey's continued absence made the place seem unusually quiet. The two little ones played peaceably on the beach with their nurse, and Joyce was helping her mother inside the cottage.

She appeared in the middle of the morning with a tumbler of milk for Viola and stood softly talking for a little, while the invalid drank it.

"Mummy won't let us bathe today," she said presently. "She thinks there's going to be a storm."

"Shouldn't wonder if she's right," said Tiggie.

"Hadn't you better get yours over before it comes?" suggested Viola.

"I don't know. Think so?" He looked at his watch and stretched himself. "Do I want washing today, Joyce?"

"I expect you do," said Joyce seriously. "It's very warm."

He laughed. "Practical anyway. Run and tell your mother that if she'll let you come too I'll look after you and bring you safely back!"

Joyce's eyes shone. To have Uncle Tiggie all to herself in the water was a treat not to be forgone.

"I'll go and ask her," she said, taking the empty tumbler.

"How nice of you!" said Viola as she skipped away. "She is such a little mother to the rest that I often think she has less fun than any of them."

"She's a dear little soul," said Tiggie. "It isn't at all nice of me. I enjoy it."

She smiled at him. "Yes, but that's where your niceness comes in. You always enjoy doing kindnesses."

"Oh, I say!" protested Tiggie, covering himself up with the newspaper.

"Or if you don't, you have a wonderful way of pretending you do," she persisted in her gentle way. "I'm sorry to be embarrassing, but—you see—it's true."

"Whose spectacles are you looking through?" demanded Tiggie, emerging, somewhat red in the face.

"No spectacles at all," she answered quietly. "I'm only looking—with eyes that see."

Tiggie shook his head at her. "I'm not sure your eyes are to be trusted. You haven't seen me in my selfish moments yet. You'll know me better some day."

Her eyes still smiled at him through there was something veiled in their look. "I wonder," she said, "if I shall."

Joyce here broke in on them, calling from a window. "It's all right, Uncle Tiggie, mummy says I may. So I'm undressing now."

"Right!" said Tiggie. "I'll go and do the same. Meet you on the beach!"

He got up with the words, but paused a moment by the side of the couch. A strange awkwardness possessed him, as if he were in the presence of some unknown influence with which he was by no means fitted to cope.

"I hope you won't run away with the idea that I'm anything out of the ordinary," he said in a low voice. "Don't—please don't!"

He did not look at her as he uttered this appeal, which was so earnest that when her soft laugh answered it he was surprised and even slightly aggrieved. But the next moment her hand feeling for his banished everything but a sudden wild rush of devotion that rendered him speechless. He clasped the slender fingers with a gigantic effort to appear normal.

Her voice reached him on a sigh that caught and banished her laugh. "Dear dear Tiggie," she said, "don't forget that no one else can ever see you as I do! There! You must go. Joyce will be waiting."

She slipped her hand away, and he knew that for some reason she did not want him to linger. He blundered from her side in silence, and tramped down to the inn for his bathing kit, cursing himself for not knowing how to persuade her to revise her point of view.

NEWS OF OUR OWN VILLAGE

Ed. Rhodes brung down his budget at Ottawa, down No. 7 Highway from here, Wed. p.m., but didn't announce no surplus for this great Dominion, we're sorry to note in passing.

The village constabulary is going to blossom out shortly in new clothes, this being the start of the annual clean-up campaign so far as we've heard. The force is also getting a new horseless carriage, too, so the depression must be over or something.

Local folks what has their jack invested in gold stocks aint been in a merry mood this week, Dick Bennett's Govt. clamping a tax on gold, just when the boys was beginning to enjoy themselves a bit. Life is like that, lads, we note philosophically, in passing.

Speaking of the precious metal, rumors has it that thar is gold in them thar hills up Buckhorn way and some of the villagers is thinking of staking out a few claims on the off-chance as it were. A gold rush in these parts would sorta break the monotony anyway.

The village ball park has disappeared beneath the water of the Otonabee, and the management aint worrying so much about that as about the danger of the Central League being just about as badly sunk.

Doc Coleman from Toronto, west of here, spoke at the "y" Fri. nite on the "Ice Age" and a lotta folks was disappointed, they figgering Doc was going to talk about the last winter instead of something that happened a long time ago.

Politics is still in the doldrums or something in these parts, but it won't be long enough, according to some of our political sharks. Get it over before the hot weather anyway, lads, beseech we.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE BANK OF UPPER CANADA

On this date, in 1821 the Bank of Upper Canada was incorporated, or rather the royal assent was given to its act of incorporation, which had been passed by the legislature in 1819. The stock was not to exceed $200,000 and it was to open for business when £20,000 had been subscribed. The government subscribed for 2,000 shares and in 1822 the bank opened for business. Its incorporators were William Allan, Robert C. Horne, John Scarlett, Francis Jackson, William Warren Baldwin, Alexander Legge, Thomas Ridout, DArcy Boulton Jr., William B. Robinson, James Macauley, Duncan Cameron, Guy C. Wood, Robert Anderson, and John S. Baldwin. Mr. Allan was elected president.

From its start the bank prospered; perhaps because it was the government bank; probably because its destinies are controlled by men who were either members of, or servants of, the government. It was a strictly Tory institution. No merchant who was suspected of having even leanings toward "Reform" had any chance of getting his paper discounted; no opponent of the powers was given an extension of his paper. Naturally this led to the bank and its operations becoming a target for attack by the Reformers in the Assembly. Demand was made that control of the bank should lie in the Assembly and not in the government. William Lyon Mackenzie was one of the chief attackers and of course had to pay the penalty. The directors refused to allow him to print the bank's dividend and other notices in the Colonial Advocate, and when Mackenzie was a candidate for the first city council the bank put up its cashier, Dr. Widmer, to oppose him with sad results for the bank for Widmer was defeated in the most Tory ward in the new city. And when the new city council wanted an advance on account of prospective tax receipts the bank refused and Mayor Mackenzie had to get the money from the small Farmers' Bank.

The identity of the bank with the government was officially proved in 1837. The directors wanted to suspend specie payments, but Sir Francis Bond Head, the governor, intervened by saying: "The principle of monarchy is honor; the Bank of Upper Canada is the Government Bank; to maintain its honor the bank must redeem its specie" and it did until March 5, 1836, when it had to suspend such payments.

The bank's end was tragic. The land boom in Upper Canada collapsed; the bank was left "holding the bag"; and it closed its doors Sept. 16, 1866. It was a sad end to what had been a great institution.

PERSONAL PROBLEMS

My barber's problem is getitng me to come in for a haircut just one week sooner than I do....From his point of view, that isn't much to ask. From mine, it's entirely too much.

I've never had any shirts made especially for me. But I do wish I could buy some that are the right sleeve length. I remember kids whose mothers used to put tucks in theirs, but they looked funny. Some people wear sleeve bands, but they're too much trouble.

Neither did I ever have a manicure. Once I tried going without garters, but the experiment was a failure....Too old when I tried it.

Wish a beard didn't grow while you're sleeping. It would solve this shaving problem....You shave at night and your face looks dirty by the next evening. But shaving is a trial in the morning unless you're one of those early birds.

I wish I knew Greek....But I don't know why I wish it.

I think I'll start pipe smoking again.

I always get hurt when I play with children.

Once I owned "evening clothes." I bought them in college from a fellow who'd bought them from another fellow who'd bought them from another. But they were burned in a fire and it was a great relief....Most of the men I know who own the things complain bitterly about wearing them, but I suspect they really like doing it.

When I buy shirts I'm never able to remember my collar size.... Clothing salesmen are more polite than most of the men behind the ticket window at the theater.

I used to wear suspenders, but people laughed.

Occasionally I buy a necktie and tell myself I will "keep it for best" ....But it never works out that way.

The right time to leave a party is no later than 10 minutes after you think of leaving.

TAX ON POLICE DOGS

Dear Sirs:

If you will kindly allow me a small space in your paper, I would like to say a word in reference to some members of our good City Council in regard to putting a ten dollar tax on police dogs. (First.) What is to be termed a police dog; is it to be every dog over a certain size or a dog just a little larger than some of our Council men have. (Second): Has anyone in Peterborough a proper police dog. I myself have never seen one in Peterborough. (Third): Would any of the City Council kindly inform me if they ever saw one in town; if so, where it can be seen; or are they just going to call all Belgium Shepherds, German Shepherds and Alsatians, police dogs, which in no way should be called police dogs unless they were trained in police duty and then they are not really a police dog either. (Fourth): The claim is these termed police dogs have destroyed sheep, killed other dogs, have attacked people, children in particular. Now before any of the mentioned breed of dogs were imported into this country, all the said crimes of dogs were done as often as now. (Fifth): Because Jones, Brown or Smith drive a car, get drunk, and run over and kill someone, should every one of the Jones, Brown or Smiths be charged with manslaughter and have their license cut off or their car license fee raised five or six times higer? (Sixth): If one dog fee is raised, why not raise them all, for a dog is a dog regardless of size or breed, and maybe more of our City Council have small dogs than large (or police dogs).

Thanking you for the space in your paper. I remain, a subscriber to your good paper.

A Thought

HIS PRESENCE

Wherever you are, whatever you are going to do today—if you are going to be there, there is room for God, too.

You see, each of us has to adapt herself to the circumstances of her life, and set rules do not always help much. The only way of real growth and happiness is to ask God to come everywhere all the time.

If, when you are going, you wait a moment outside every new door of experience to ask Him to come in with you, you will know the joy of His presence so well in age that you will never desire to go anywhere in life or death without Him.

QUEBEC SESSION OF LEGISLATURE OVER TILL FALL

One of Longest in Province's History—Only One Going Past Easter.

GOVERNOR'S TERM ENDS.

Special Meet Later in Year Scheduled to Deal With Montreal's Troubles.

QUEBEC, April 21 (CP) — The third session of the 18th Quebec Legislature prorogued yesterday. It was one of the longest sessions in the Legislature's history and the first one that has extended past Easter.

Brilliant sunshine enlivened the colorful ceremonies in which Hon. H. G. Carroll, Lieutenant-Governor, dismissed the members of the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly.

The members went to their homes with the prospect of being called together this Fall in special session to deal with the problems of the City of Montreal. Election of Camillien Houde with a sweeping majority of Montreal was followed by a promise of Premier L. A. Taschereau to have a special session called to improve the citys' financial situation.

With the act of proroguing the session yesterday, Mr. Carroll ended his term as Lieutenant-Governor. His five-year term would have terminated two weeks ago, but it was extended until the end of the session.

Montreal Main Snag

Matters affecting Montreal were in large degree responsible for prolonging the session. Most of the time over a six weeks' period was devoted to Montreal affairs, but it was generally recognized that the complete solution of the problem must come later.

In the list of government measures approved the most important had to do with the permanency of timber cutting leases. Hon. Honore Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests, introduced the legislation, which makes renewal of cutting licenses automatic if certain conditions are fulfilled.

The question of wages paid lumberjacks arose in connection with the bill and a commission of two men was decided upon to have power to regulate wages and working conditions.

In the field of social legislation the outstanding measure was the bill of Hon. C. J. Arcand, Minister of Labor, providing for extension of collective contracts. The efforts of the legislation is that if a group of manufacturers agree with labor unions on a wage scale, the government may compel all in the industry to abide by the contract.

AWAIT ARRIVAL MISSING FLIERS

Radio Message Gives No Details Outside of Bare Rescue Report on Matt Berry.

DANGEROUS TRIP.

EDMONTON, April 21. (CP).—Captain Jimmy Bell to-day had all in readiness at the municipal airport here for the arrival of Stan McMillan, whose successful search for his co-pilot Matt Berry of Mackenzie Air Services, was due to end before noon.

The northland still clung to the details surrounding Berry's misfortune at Cambridge Bay as he ended a 300-mile flight from Coppermine, on the Arctic shores. McMillan flew yesterday to Cambridge, located Berry and began the flight southward to beat the "in-between" season.

None of the radio messages mentioned Berry's passenger, William Gibson, superintendent of the western Arctic division of the Hudson's Bay Company. Berry was supposed to be flying Gibson on an inspection tour when he disappeared several days ago.

McMillan was believed to have brought his plane down at Willow Lake, 276 miles north of here and 26 miles south of Fort McMurray, Alberta's end of steel. Capt. Bell, manager of the airport here, waited until late last night but it was believed the fliers were having difficulty in switching the skiis on their plane to wheels so that they could be able to make a safe landing at the airport here, which is devoid of snow. Willow Lake is still frozen, permitting a ski landing, but reports here said it would be breaking up soon.

Until McMillan and Berry Reach here, their experiences on the 1,600-mile flight will not be known. Because of the advancing warm weather and the unsafe ground due to frost departing, the fliers are on a dangerous journey.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

MINING EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, April 21 (C.P.).—Gold stocks firmed in the closing session of the week on the Toronto Mining Board on a report that Washington was about to give the price of gold another boost. Base metal and silver shares were steady, except for a loss of 12 for Eldorado.

Gains up to 75 cents came out for the leaders. Dome held steady at $37.25, but Hollinger gained 20 cents, Lake Shore 75 cents, McIntyre 50 cents, Bralorne 25, Teck Hughes 5 cents and Pioneer and Wright Hargreaves were also unchanged.

INDUSTRIAL EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, April 21 (C.P.). — Revision of the duty on paper imports by the United Kingdom, favorable to Canada, gave the paper issues support to-day on the industria section of the Toronto Stock Exchange. Abitibi was active and it closed at $2.00, up 10 cents.

Small gains came out for Brewing Corporation, Canada Bud and Canada Malting, and in the distillery section Walkers Common was the leader, closing ¾ higher at 44⅞. Distillers Seagrams added 1 and Industrial Alcohol Preferred gained ⅝ to 17¼ and the new Common was unchanged.

On good volume International Nickel advanced 15 cents to $27.90 while Brazilian, Ford A. and C.P.R. were mainly unchanged.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP) — There was only a faint recurrence of inflationary symptoms in the stock market to-day and definite price trends generally were absent. The late revival of the previous session failed to carry through to any great extent and profit taking came into a number of issues. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 750,000 shares.

SEES GOLD TAX MODIFICATIONS

McCrea Believes Differentiation Between Grades of Ore Will be Made.

SAVE LOW GRADE MINES.

TORONTO, April 21 (CP)—Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, had "every reason to believe" the Dominion Government will "considerably modify" the 10 per cent tax on gold, he has stated.

Speaking at a Conservative ward meeting here last night, the Minister declared that "it is the part of wisdom to give careful thought to some modification of the tax. I have every faith that in the reconsideration of the picture a solution will be found that will be vastly different from the tax as announced from Ottawa."

Mr. McCrea said the changes he hopes for would differentiate between the various grades of ores in order not to put low-grade ore mines out of business.

"The question is, just where the line can be drawn to be fair to the various grades of ores and mines to be fair to the Government," he proceeded. "If we make representations to Ottawa, as we have done, that the tax in the form it was announced should not be put into effect, in order that no part of the gold-mining industry may be strangled, you can understand why we do it."

GET PERMISSION TO BURN RUBBISH

Spring is Here With Annual Crop of Small Grass Fires.

REDUCE FIRE HAZARD.

Spring is here, and with it the annual crop of small grass fires throughout the city, which while not serious in themselves constitute a menace to property.

In an effort to reduce fire hazards to a minimum, the Fire Chief is again urging the utmost co-operation of the whole community, and he warns that before any rubbish fires are lighted permission must first be obtained from the Department.

The Fire Chief has authority to insist that no rubbish fires be lighted without his permission under the provisions of a city by-law, and while permission for residents to burn rubbish will be readily forthcoming, providing weather conditions are such that no live ashes will be scattered throughout the neighborhood, endangering property, it will be readily realized that in keeping a close check on fires that are lighted in various parts of the city, that it is in the general interest of every householder or property owner.

Following two grass fires on Thursday, the Department turned out to two more such fires yesterday afternoon at Chamberlain Street and also at Weller Street. The only other alarms received during the day were to chimney fires at 46 Ware Street and at 604 Stewart Street.

CAPACITY CONGREGATION HEARS REV. DR. ROLLS ON FINAL NIGHT

Many Turned Away From St. Paul's Church—Pictures Shown.

REBUILDING PALESTINE.

Long before the commencement of the service last evening at St. Paul's, the church was filled, and despite every effort to make accommodation, many were turned away. Rev. Chas. J. Rolls was in fine form in his closing lecture on "Zionism: the Rebuilding of Palestine". He introduced the subject with the words of Jeremiah 30: 11, 16, on which the present movement of the Jewish people is based; and showed that there was a prophecy of destruction on all who would oppose them or attempt to destroy them, including the Hitler regime in Germany. He repudiated emphatically the suggestion of inferiority, and quoted ancient authorities to prove this. A picture of a seer, peering into the future, and proclaiming Isa 21: 6 succeeded some Arab scenes on the screen, and showed that Babylon had been destroyed on Israel's account.

The opening scenes of restoration were shown in the valley of Jezreel, with the village of Rehoboth depicted in the centre of a valley, the land having been purchased with funds raised in New York. Many harvesting operations were shown; modern methods prevail everywhere, and the settlement of Ahmet Jezreel is progressive.

Then the audience were transported to the vicinity of Mt. Carmel, where scenes were shown of Zebulon, "a haven by the sea", with the new harbor works construction, and wonderful residential districts to house a population of 15,000. On to Haifa, now a city of 86,000, with its Shemen soap factory, its quarries, and its fisheries. A modern school was shown; over 15,000 pupils arein the schools of Palestine, all Jewish children. The portrait of Dr. Naham Sokolow, the president of the Zionist organization was shown, and a meeting held 25 years ago of Jews on a barren plain revealed the pioneers in the movement for reconstruction. On this spot today a city of 42,000, Telaviv, exists, with its modern streets, its police force, and its fine polytechnic institute. Scenes depicted work in the modern hospital, with Zionist nurses about their duties. Then came pictures of a chocolate factory, canning factory, machine shop, knitting mill, cotton manufacturers, the Nathan Strauss Health Institute, and a false teeth factory, the largest in the world.

Here Dr. Rolls made the statement: "I have been cross-questioned by some regarding speaking with tongues as proof of possession of the Spirit; but I am quite prepared to stand on what I have already stated. Jesus turned water into wine for a sign; I suppose it would not interfere with Premier Henry's proposals if everyone kept the sign, and turned water into wine to show the power of the spirit. Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead for a sign; it would be wonderful if such a sign could be perpetuated, though the medical men might object. Jesus was the divine Son, possessed the spirit as no other, yet never spoke with tongues, and John the Baptist was in similar position. When Paul speaks with tongues in 1 Cor 14, it was because he knew Hebrew, Greek, Latin, etc., so that everyone understood him. I find no warrant at all in the New Testament for the gift of tongues as proof of the spirit."

Continuing his lecture, he narrated the story of the Jewish scientist, Dr. Wiseman, who saved Britain in 1915, as shown in the memoirs of Lloyd George, and his portrait was shown on the screen. Pictures of the orange groves at Nahallel, irrigation projects, harvest festival, the new Jewish University at Mt. Scopus, scenes around Jerusalem, and the Hadassah Hospital there came in rapid succession. The "City Set on a Hill", Zephad, which was burned out in 1928 was shown rebuilt with finer buildings than before. Hydro-electric operations at the head of the Sea of Galilee, flourishing villages, a group of European refugees, the experimental farm at Degeniah came next! The whole of Palestine is now electrified, and everything is up-to-date and modern. The Scripture reveals that the Jews will return to their own land, and this is being rapidly accomplished.

Rev. Dr. Barr conducted the service, while Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe offered prayer. Many availed themselves of the opportunity to say a word of farewell to Rev. Dr. Rolls at the close, and to express appreciation.

200 Injured In Paris As Reds Stage Riot

PARIS, April 21. —(AP)— Police ruled the streets of Paris again today after a night of violence seen by some as setting the stage for serious outbreaks to come.

Before police and mobile guards could quell a raging mob of 6,000 Communists, and extremeists, at least 200 persons were injured by clubs, feet and fists.

Out of the howling throng, officers grabbed 940 persons and hustled them off to jails, but all were released.

The mob shouted its defiance around the city hall in a demonstration against the government's recent decrees slashing the pay of civil employes.

Today, although pleased with the improved system of handling riots used in putting down the mob, some quarters wondered how long it will be before riots flare again. The disorders were viewed as merely a sort of "rehearsal" for May Day.

ST. MIRREN IS BEATEN 5 TO 0

2 to 1, while Huddersfield travelled to Middlesbrough to absorb a 3-0 defeat, a killing blow to the Huddersfield aspirations. Mathematically they may yet tie the Arsenal, but it would be the biggest upset in years if they did.

The third and fourth place holders also suffered setbacks. Tottenham Hotspurs were beaten 2-0 at Birmingham, a great win for the latter club which is fighting desperately against relegation. Derby County in turn were held to a tie by Aston Villa, 1-1.

The biggest struggle of the day were put up by those clubs striving to avoid going down to the Second Division. Sheffield United, on the bottom of the heap, pulled out a 1-1 tie at Leeds United. Newcastle United, next in line, turned on the Wolves and beat them 5-1. Birmingham kept two points ahead of the two tail-end clubs with the win over the Spurs, but Chelsea, another point higher than Birmingham at the start, lost to Manchester City, Cup finalists, and the Pensioners are once more on the danger-list.

AVIATORS STUNT TO SELL PLANES

U. S. and Italian Aces Startle Shanghai With Tricks to Impress Gov't.

IGNORE JAP FROWNS.

(By Morris J. Harris, A.P. Foreign Staff).

SHANGHAI, April 21 (AP)—Japanese frowns on aircraft purchases by China have gone unheeded by foreign aeroplane dealers.

Their spectacular selling campaigns, marked by daring aerial tricks over downtown Shanghai, continued unabated to-day.

With the skies as their stage, the airmen stunt while noontime crowds are packing the streets, hoping to impress the public with the prowess of their respective machines."

Lieutenant James H. Doolittle, who demonstrated a high-powered American combat plane, began the practice of using overhead Shanghai as a demonstration ground when in recent months he startled Chinese and foreigners alike with his exploits above the rooftops.

The Italian air ace, Major Mario de Bearnardi, now in China demonstrating an Italian pursuit plane, set new standards of daring to-day. Flying a brilliant, red plane, he looped, rolled and twisted in hair-raising manoeuvres barely over the downtown buildings.

STUDENTS ENJOY CLASS GATHERING

King's Own Bible Class of St. James' Church Are Pleasing Hosts.

Nearly one hundred persons, including members of The King's Own Bible Class of St. James' United Sunday School, with their guests, gathered in the Primary S.S. Hall last evening on the occasion of a delightful banquet. The class teacher, Mrs. A. E. Moorhouse, and the president, Mrs. A. Rosborough, received the guests in Wesley Hall and ushered them to the banquet room.

Mrs. Rosborough also graciously presided, and after all had partaken of the sumptuous repast, welcomed the members and friends, and acted as toastmistress for the evening. The toast to the King received the usual response by all singing "God Save the King.' This was followed by a toast to the Church, proposed by Rev. A. E. Moorhouse, who spoke of the value and importance of this great institution. He stressed the part played by the Sunday School, whose whole purpose is to win people to Christ. In response, the gathering joined in singing "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

Miss M. A. Hanbidge, in a few sincere words, proposed the toast to the class, whose name, "The King's Own," expressed their spirit. To guard this fine spirit, Miss Hanbidge said that three things are necessary: Unity, Loyalty and Faithful Attendance. She concluded by paying tribute to the splendid work of their teacher, Mrs. A. E. Moorhouse.

OTONABEE RIVER ONCE AS MIGHTY AS ST LAWRENCE

Atlantic Ocean Came Within Few Miles of Present Site of Peterborough.

17,000 YEARS AGO.

Dr. A. P. Coleman Delivers Extension Lecture in the Y.M.C.A.

Once upon a time the salt waters of the Atlantic Ocean lapped on shores only a few miles south of the ground on which Peterborough now stands. While mastodians closely resembling the modern elephant roamed the land, whales and other creatures of the sea swam in waters which have to-day shrunk to within the confines of what is known as Lake Ontario. And the Otonabee River was not then a gentle, peaceful stream for a torrent as mighty as the St. Lawrence swept down the valley which the Trent Waterways now follows.

This is not a picture from a fiction writer's imagination. It is a picture of conditions about seventeen thousand years ago from the history of the Great Lakes' region of North America reconstructed after years of study and research by geologists and paleontologists. It was outlined for a local audience in the Y.M.C.A. last night by Dr. A. P. Coleman of Toronto who has made some of the most outstanding contributions to the reconstruction.

Dealing with the subject "The Ice Age and the Great Lakes," Dr. Coleman spoke as one of the lecturers on the university extension lecture program sponsored by the Friday Night Supper Club. The fifth and final speaker of the course, he attracted an audience which well filled the Y.M.C.A. dining hall. He is a professor emeritus of the department of geology in Toronto University and is known internationally for his researches and teachings.

Peculiarities

At the commencement of his address he commented on some of the physical peculiarities of the Great Lakes' system. The surface of Lake Superior, he said, is 602 feet above sea level and yet it is so deep that in many places its bottom is 400 feet below sea level. Likewise, the bottom of Lake Ontario is below sea level, thus, the Great Lakes do not merely exist because barriers dam them from the sea. The geologists have been faced with the problem of how these great basins were originated, he said.

The problem deepens when one realizes that there are no great drainage systems supplying the water for the lakes, he continued. In the case of the largest, Lake Superior, the water shed separating it from the Hudson Bay drainage system lies but a few miles to the north. The only conclusion to be reached is that the water which flows down the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers comes from the rain and snow falling on the 100,000 square miles of surface offered by the lakes themselves. The lakes were not formed by drainage waters so they must have been formed by some other natural phenomena, he said.

Ice Age

Explaining that the Great Lakes came to be placed as they are through factors mostly in connection with the last great ice age which began about 30,000 years ago, Dr. Coleman told of the great sheet of ice many thousands of feet thick which, for a period of about 10,000 years, covered this section of America. Over the spot where Peterborough stands, the ice was possibly more than one mile deep, he said.

Before the coming of the ice, a river system extending from the present Lake Superior region to the Atlantic had existed. The ice apparently depressed and gouged out the basins of the future lakes. As it retreated, the basins filled with water from the melting ice. The ice retreated in a north-east direction so that, for a considerable period after the lakes had been formed, a barrier remained to block the St. Lawrence outlet. The water found its way to the sea through the Mississippi and Hudson river systems, he pointed out.

Depressed by Weight

Due to the terrific weight of the ice cap, the entire lakes' region was depressed and thus the lakes covered an immediately greater area than they now do. As the ice retreated in a north-west direction above the Montreal area, the depression of the St. Lawrence valley was sufficient that the open sea had access to Lake Ontario. Lake Ontario was then in reality a great bay in the Atlantic. As the ice retreated further, the crust of the earth gradually rose and the lakes were cut off from the sea with only the St. Lawrence river for an outlet.

The discovery of the bones of a whale during excavation work at Smiths' Falls, Ontario, during recent years bears out the geologists' reconstruction of the Great Lakes' history, Dr. Coleman said. Almost anybody who cares to search can find sea shells and fossilized remains of sea life in the Brockville area. Some years ago the skull of a seal was unearthed near Ottawa.

Great River

Speaking of the geological history of the immediate neighborhood of this city, the speaker related that the Peterborough area was on a large bay of the great body of water over the Lake Ontario area. Apparently a great river flowed down the Otonabee Valley and poured into the lake in this area, he said. He remarked on the presence of many large boulders and other transported debris in the valley. The boulders which are to be seen along the shores of the Otonabee in the vicinity of the Quaker Oats Company were brought there by some torrent much more powerful than the present Otonabee, he declared.

Fallen Comrades

"Fallen Comrades" a toast which was honoured in profound and reverent silence was eloquently voiced by Major R. C. Blagrave, D.D., chaplain of the unit.

Remarking that the practice of toasting fallen and departed comrades was an ancient tradition, the padre pointed out that it was a custom—and a very splendid custom wherever men assembled together in fellowship to remember those who had gone before.

"There is good reason for us to keep on carrying out the implications of this time-honored toast. It is a matter of conscience that we should not let ourselves forget" he stated.

"In a personal way and in an impersonal way, in the same manner that the nations of the world honor the unknown soldier, we wish to remember. We must not forget" the speaker urged.

He spoke of fallen comrades as being that band of men and women who had gone out, not waiting as it were the call of the great commander, but going out and meeting Him from a sense of duty in whatever cause.

It was tragic to think, he continued, that a man had given his life for what he believed to be a great cause, but which in the light of after events might prove to have been not worthwhile. It was tragic to think that the great sacrifices that have been made in the past, have been futile sacrifices. However, the padre believed, "we are saved from that tragedy by the conviction that no one can make a sacrifice for a good cause, whether we see the consequences for good or not, without that sacrifice continuing to live. We still believe that every sacrifice in life has been of some eternal value."

The Junior Sub

Lieut. Neil Gemmell, youngest member of the mess ably proposed the toast to "The Regiment" and with confident pride referred to his unit as "the best regiment in Military District No. 3."

In responding to the toast Colonel Winterbottom expressed himself as being proud and happy, not only to see so many guests present, but to be in command of such a unit as the Peterborough Rangers. He commented on the infusion of new blood into the regiment in the new junior officers who have recently been taken on the strength, and referred in terms of deep appreciation to Major Blagrave. He was proud of the officers of the regiment; proud to be the officer commanding; and proud of all the officers who had gone before and who had helped to make the unit one of the best in the district.

He spoke briefy of what the regiment had achieved and hoped to achieve forecasting a season of great activity and further progress.

"Our Guests"

Captain Gordon Monkman, M.C., proposed the toast "Our Guests", the reply being made by Colonel Anderson, and Lieut.-Colonel L. T. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O., of Bowmanville.

The D.O.C., with characteristic brevity congratulated the unit on its high standing, reminding them that other regiments in the district were also showing improvement and that if the Rangers wished to maintain their high standing they would require to put their "backs into it".

Colonel McLaughlin, after expressing pleasure that the Rangers were doing so well, voiced the opinion that the militia is coming back into its own. New officers were coming along, he remarked, and with them was coming a new enthusiasm. "Every unit wants to reach the top", he commented, "and that is the right spirit, and the only spirit."

He was particularly pleased to be present at the function he stated, because the commander of "the old brigade" is here in the person of "Colonel" Griesbach. The speaker recounting some of the harrassing and anxious moments he had spent as battalion commander, paid tribute to his old brigade commander as a man who while demanding efficiency and regularity, was also a man who could always remain cheerful and optimistic under all circumstances. He had always exerted a cheering influence on the weary troops of the line.

Colonel Park Honored

During the course of a neatly turned speech amply seasoned with sparkling humour, Major J. E. R. Munro one of the senior members of the mess, asked Colonel Park's acceptance of a handsome piece of silver plate as a token of appreciation from his fellow officers, of his services as officer commanding the unit immediately prior to the present O.C.'s tenure of command.

Major Munro paid striking tribute to the progress that had been made by the unit under Colonel Park's command, and also made fitting reference to the contribution that had been made by other former officers commanding in the persons of Lieut.-Colonel F. L. Bradburn, M.C. and Lieut.-Colonel W. Gordon Hall, V.D., who were both present at the head table.

Taken completely by surprise Colonel Park in voicing his appreciation spoke of the presentation as being, "a wonderful gift and a wonderful kindness on your part".

26-years Service

He joined the militia he stated in 1908 enlisting with the old 34th Battalion, subsequently becoming connected with the Peterborough Rangers three years later. It was a matter of deep regret, he remarked "to be going in a sense, out of this battalion".

Colonel Park recalled that Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Ackerman who was seated near him at the head table had joined the Rangers on the same night as he himself had joined. He also expressed extreme pleasure at noting the presence of Major R. T. Hounsell, V.D., one of the longest-serving officers of the unit who has 48-years of service in the Rangers to his credit.

In conclusion he extended his sincerest wishes for the continued success of the unit, and noted with pleasure that the Rangers was making marked progress under command of his successor Colonel Winterbottom.

Introducing Major - General Griesbach, Colonel Winterbottom referred briefly to the distinguished guest's political career but preferred best to "think of him as a soldier and commander."

"You never served under General Griesbach" Colonel Winter bottom stated in sincere appreciation, "you served with him."

General Griesbach

Recounting some experiences of the War years, General Griesbach said that while he was a Westerner having the distinction to be the first white child born in Saskatchewan, he was by the fortune of war appointed in 1917 to the command of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade—a brigade was made up of Canadians from the East.

He made personal reference to Colonel Frank Bradburn, M.C., who had served in his old battalion; to Colonel McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O., former O.C. of the 2nd Battalion and to Colonel Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., also an old 2nd Battalion man.

Colonel McLaughlin the speaker described as "one of the best fighting commanders I ever had to deal with in all my military service".

After touching briefly upon some of the duties and responsibilities of a brigade commander on actve service, and making special reference to the high traditions of the 2nd Battalion, whose honoured name is perpetuated jointly with the Governor General's Foot Guards, by the Peterborough Rangers General Griesbach criticised the decreased government appropriations for the militia. "You can only decrease expenditures, and maintain efficiency to a point" he stated telling a story to illustrate his point and remarking that the story was one that he would hesitate to relate to the Senate.

Praises Militia

The General was unstinting in his praise of all who are serving in the Canadian militia at the expense of their time and money. "No public work" he suggested, "is more meritorious or honorable."

Decrying propaganda which sought to make believe that militia training was non-military in character, General Griesbach declared that is mere camoflauge. "Militia training is military training for war purposes. It is a training that calls for the highest qualities of heart and body and the highest type of patriotism" he emphasized. "And you take from the dignity of that effort when you allow people to think that militia training is anything less. What you are really trying to do as militiamen is to maintain the highest institutions of the Canadian people."

Discussing Canada's suggestion of sovereign independent status among the British Commonwealth of Nations, the speaker after quoting statistics showing the enormous volume of Canada's sea-borne imports and exports, declared that Canada is not contributing her fair share to the naval defence of the Empire.

"Having claimed the right to sovereign crown status, will you say having regard to the defence of Canada's commercial shipping routes on the high seas by the British Navy, that we are playing the game with other peoples of the British Empire and with the people of Great Britain in particular?" the speaker asked.

Canada, the speaker believed, is "frightfully immature." While willing to take the honor and distinction of being an independent sovereign state she shies at the responsibility entailed. "The time is coming," he General believed," when we cannot afford to neglect to contribute our quota to the naval defence of the Empire."

At the time of the outbreak of the Great War, the speaker said, Canada was distinctly a colony, but owing to the distinguished manner in which her soldiers acquitted themselves on the field of battle, Canada could not be overlooked when the Treaty of Versailles was signed. In being made a signatory to the treaty, he declared, Canada virtually assumed national status and since that time the development had gone forward mainly as the result of the exertion of Canada's men in the war.

"I would that our country could rise to the obligations and responsibilities laid upon her," he wished, adding in conclusion, "We cannot build up a great nation without service and sacrifice."

Lieut.-Colonel W. Gordon Hall, V.D., ably extended a vote of thanks to the speaker on behalf of the members of the mess.

During the course of the program vocal solos were contributed by Captain D. G. Melton and Colonel Park, with Robert Haddow accompanying at the piano.

Ocean Currents Govern Climate

Predicting that a much more economical use of the earth's land surfaces will result if man ever succeeds in controlling the ocean currents, Dr. A. P. Coleman, famous Canadian geologist, addressed the Friday Night Supper Club last evening. "The possibility is indeed remote, however," he said. "There is nothing we can do about it so we might as well make the best of our present climates."

He pointed out that it is a matter of ocean currents that makes Iceland habitable while Labrador is practically useless to humans as he outlined the influence which currents such as the Gulf Stream have on the world's climates. G. H. Roper introduced him to the club.

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

A highly diverting interchange occurred between Premier Bennett and Sir Stafford Cripps during the latter's visit to Ottawa, so I am reliably informed.

Sir Stafford addressed the Canadian Club at Ottawa. He was advertised as a member of the Left Wing of the British Labor party—a very radical man indeed—and I think he was a little embarrassed to find Premier Bennett on his immediate right at the head table.

However, having undertaken to deliver a radical address, he manfully went on with it, uttering volumes of what must have been to Premier Bennett the utmost heresy, bordering on contempt of court, mahem, and what not.

Premier Bennett bore the ordeal rather philosophically, I thought, although occasionally a wave of what seemed to be pain swept his countenance at some more than ordinary excursion into the realms of heterodoxy.

As the luncheoners trooped out, however, Bennett's opportunity arrived.

"How's your father, Lord Parmoor?" the prime minister inquired.

"Not half bad," responded Sir Stafford. "Still, I'm sorry to say he's aging rather fast!"

"Well, what can you expect, with such a son!" retorted Premier Bennett devastatingly.

Sir Stafford's "come-back" (if any) is not recorded.

Before he left Ottawa, Sir Stafford (who otherwise was warmly received by the capital) had to suffer a sting of a very different nature. At one of his Sunday evening meetings, I am told, he was actually introduced by the youthful chairman as "Sir Stafford Cripes." Cripes, see you!

Illustrating the bewildering variety of answers which examination papers, whether for young or old, always produce, Sydney Roe, editor of the National Revenue Review, tells me that he was looking over some application forms recently, and encountered the following gem:

The applicant was asked to state: "Length of residence in Canada."

He replied:

"Thirty by forty feet!"

Robert Charles Matthews, minister of national revenue, is an ardent cricketer, and thereby hangs the following tale:

Oxford, the home of "groups" as well as lost causes, was the birthplace of an Oxford Cricket Movement which undertook to do something about the underprivileged boy. In Oxford, through the kindness of some boys' workers, an unused cricket field was obtained, equipment was secured, and the street arabs and ragamuffins were soon playing cricket, to the great benefit of their health and morals.

This movement spread, ultimately reaching Toronto. It came to the attention of the Hon. R. C. Matthews, who unostentatiously supplied equipment for no less than 16 of these underprivileged boys' cricket clubs.

In order to give the boys some sense of financial responsibility, a fee of 10 cents each was charged them. Even with such a low fee and free equipment, the clubs ran occasionally into financial difficulties.

I was told of one historic meeting of some 300 boys, threshing over this grave problem of finance. Gloom was prevalent. At a critical moment the minister of national revenue, escaping for a few moments the joint responsibility, with Mr. Rhodes, of financing Canada, came into the room.

At his entry a great shout went up, and one ragged urchin climbed on to the table amid great confusion. "Hurray!" he shouted. "Here's where we balance our budget!"

Houde's overwhelming "come-back" at Montreal recalled to a friend of mine the witty remark made by Premier Taschereau when asked to comment on the drastic defeat of the same Mr. Houde a couple of years ago.

Taschereau, instead of responding directly, quoted cryptically the old Latin proverb:

De mortuis nil nisi bonum (Speak no evil of the dead).

The corpse has since, however, shown considerable life.

TORIES TURNED TO SOCIALISM CHARGES MOORE

Claims Marketing Bill May Cause Widespread Resentment Abroad.

LEAD TO REPRISALS.

New Relief Act Becomes Law Three Weeks After Old One Expires.

OTTAWA, April 21 (C.P.).—Canada's Conservative Government has gone Socialistic in the opinion of William H. Moore, Liberal member of Parliament for Ontario. The evidence of it he finds in the natural products marketing act now before the House of Commons which is designed to regulate the marketing of farm and other natural products through the operations of a Federal marketing board and a system of local board.

While Mr. Moore hurled the charge of Socialism at the administration yesterday as Liberals continued their attacks on the bill, a Conservative defender used the term "controlled capitalism" as applied to the bill.

He was F. W. Turnbull of Regina, who said Canada was facing three alternatives, controlled capitalism, Socialism and laisser faire. It was clear the Liberals stood for the latter alternative but Canadians had to face facts, not theories.

The bill was a sincere attempt to solve the problem of distribution in some measure and contained not a word about restriction of production.

Should Seek Mandate.

The Government was not elected as a Socialist government, said Mr. Moore. Before making such a sweeping change in the economic life of the country as contemplated in the bill it should seek a new mandate from the people.

He further predicted the measure would cause resentment abroad, particularly in the United Kingdom, and lead to tariff reprisals against Canada and perhaps the elimination of the Empire preference.

Almost three weeks after the old relief act expired the new one became law yesterday when Sir Lyman Duff, deputy to the Governor-General, gave it the Royal assent. The bill was the subject of a prolonged battle in the House of Commons, but received an easy passage through the Senate.

Next week the budget debate begins, when Hon. J. L. Ralston, former Minister of National Defence, and chief Liberal financial critic, rises to analyse the presentation of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, on Monday.

BAILIEBORO.

On Sunday during the afternoon Sunday School service, the Gleaners' Class of the United Church Sunday School presented their teacher, Clara Seens, with a book called "The Teachers' Manual," as a birthday gift. Mrs. Parsons, president of the class, made a few remarks, while Mrs. John Heaslip presented the gift and Miss May Earl read the card of birthday greetings. Miss Seens, although completely taken by surprise, made an appropriate reply and thanked the class for their thoughtfulness.

Miss Fern Rahmel, convenor of the literary and recreational department of the Young People's Society of the United Church, was in charge of the regular weekly meeting on Tuesday evening. The entertainment was in the form of an impromptu program, commencing at the devotional service and carrying it on throughout. The following program was very much enjoyed: Piano solo, Miss F. Watt; duett, H. Seens, S. Johnston; reading, Willa Watt.

Following the contests, the meeting closed with the benediction.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE SYMPTOMS OF CONSTIPATION

Get Relief with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sallow complexions, and sleeplessness are often warning signs of common constipation. Unless checked, constipation may impair health.

Today, you can usually get rid of common constipation by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes. How much better than taking patent medicines.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. Chronic cases, with every meal. If seriously ill, see your doctor. ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all."

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

NO MENACE IS SEEN TO COUNTRY IN INTERLOCKING DIRECTORIES

Sir C. Gordon Delves Into Relationship Between Banks, Trust Companies.

HOLT MAY TESTIFY.

OTTAWA, April 21—(CP)—Probing into the relations between Canadian banks and trust companies the House of Commons banking committee has been assured by prominent bank officials the banks never use trust companies to carry on business undertakings they cannot handle themselves.

Yesterday the committee examined Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal, Jackson Dodds, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and Morris Wilson, general manager of the Royal Bank of Canada.

A decision will be made next week, whether to send a sub-committee to Montreal to examine Sir Herbert Holt, president of the Royal Bank. The committee was informed last night Sir Herbert was prepared to give evidence but the condition of his health precluded him from leaving Montreal.

Sir Charles Gordon was asked about the allegation a few men controlled the financial affairs of Canada through interlocking directorates on banks, trust companies, insurance companies and industrial concerns.

Sees No Menace

He said he could see no menace to the country in interlocking directorates. He could not remember off-hand how many boards of directors he was on but believed it was about 30. If a bank director obtained concessions for another company with which he was associated from the bank his fellow directors would soon see that he was removed, he said.

Canadian trust companies were not subsidiaries of Canadian banks although the Bank of Montreal had close relations with the Royal Trust Company. The Trust Company carried on a straight trust business and was not a backdoor speculating concern. Conditions which had developed in the United States in connection with the linking of trust companies and banks had no counter-part in Canada.

The other witnesses corroborated Sir Charles' statement in connection with the relations of banks and trust companies. Mr. Wilson told of the relation of the Montreal Trust Company to the Royal Bank and Mr. Logan of the relation of the National Trust Company to the Bank of Commerce.

The banks had little trust business to give to the trust companies but if they had any they would likely give it to the one with which they were associated, they stated. On the other had the trust companies usualy maintained deposits with the banks. There, their relations ended except for the fact bank directors also held post on the trust company boards and, in the case of the Bank of Commerce, which owned four percent of the stock of the National Trust Company.

and in easy and comprehensible language.

Murray Stephens in the junior group took for his theme 'The History of Book' and in this well delivered oration showed himself a keen student of literature and a lover of reading. His talk dealt with the history of writing from the earliest ages, when symbols were engraved on rocks and stones, and later on tabets of clay. From there he ran over the gradual growth of the art to the days of the ballad singers and later the earlier books, to the present day with all the reading matter at the disposal of the public. It was a splendid address, well delivered and presented in an easy and efficient style.

In the senior section of the contest Mary Hoey with second standing took for her theme 'The Sailor King of Britain,' a history of King George V, and this she told in a very pleasing manner giving a wealth of historic detail relative to the early life of our present King. "Washington and his Farewell Address" was the subject of Angus Robertson who gained third place, and was a very able thesis on the morals of that great American and the application of these to our present day living. It was a well prepared and thoughtful topic and delivered in a very convincing manner.

Message of Garcia

In the junior group Jack Carr at second place had a subject out of the ordinary, 'The Message of Garcia.' The story of a Cuban bandit during the Spanish-American war, to whom a message was taken by an American officer, Rowland by name, the speaker applied modern applications of this worthy deed, and outlined the sort of men in work and business who would be fit to 'Carry Messages to Garcia.' It was a splendid address and delivered in true speakers style, with a punch to it that stressed every moral point the speaker enumerated.

And a theme that held the attention of the audience was that chosen by Joseph O'Sullivan, who gained third place. This was 'James Wofe and the Plains of Abraham.' It was the life history of this English soldier from the time he was an Ensign in the 12th Foot to the day when he died on the Plains of Abraham, knowing at the last that he had achieved the almost impossible in the capture of the city. It was an appealing address well delivered and full of detail, and one in which the speaker showed a platform manner and poise, combined with a good choice of words, that was extremely pleasing.

Wide Range of Subjects

The choice of subject matter by the contestants covered a wide range of subjects and there was not one repeat. All contestants this year seemed to be abov e the average and the platform manners as a whole were excellent. Judging was based on fifty points for matter arrangement, twenty-five points for language and twenty-five points for delivery, poise, gesture, and the power to impress. A list of the contestants with their subjects is as fol-

Juniors—James Robertson, "Our Debt to the Redmen"; Murray Stepens, "The History of oBoks"; J. M. Kelly, "The Waterpower of Canada"; Irene Curle, "Artists of Ontario"; Joseph O'Sullivan, "James Wolfe and the Plains of Abraham"; William Hoey, "How Marconi Invented the Wireless"; Ruth Farrell, "Railways of Canada"; Jack Carr, "The Message of Garcia"; Wilsey Phillips, "Transportation."

Senior.—Donald Lloyd, "An Exclamation Mark"; Sandy MacDonald, "The Mechanical Evolution of the Nineteenth Century"; Frank O'Sullivan, "The Effect of the Nazi Regime on the Peace of Europe"; Angus Robertson, "Washington and His Farewell Address"; Mary Hoey, "The Sailor King of Britain."

Between the speaking numbers, the following program was given: Musical current events by the boys of the First Form; "The Football Hero," a chorus by Fifth Form pupils; a violin and guitar duet by Clark and Frank McKelvie; a piano trio by Marie Hardy, Bernice Clarke and Mary McAvoy; and piano solos by Kathleen Wilson and Marie Hardy.

FALL WHEAT AND CLOVER CROPS

season has been one of the worst on record from the standpoint of securing a good stand of clover, the extreme dry weather of last summer affording young clover plants very little chance to develop, then the early freeze-up last fall and the very low temperatures during the winter, and in addition the thawing and freezing of the past month have all worked against the farmer who tried to secure a good stand of hay for 1934.

About the only insurance the farmer can use in addition to having his soil in good condition is to treat all clover seed with nitroculture.

Treating the Soil

By using nitro-culture he is placing in the soil at the beginning of the season, the bacteria that grow and develop on the roots of all legumes and help them to store up more plant food and thus become more firmly established in the soil and in a better shape to withstand winter and spring killing.

Experiments carried on over a period of years have proven without a doubt the value of treating legume seed and especially alfalfa seeds, with the culture before seeding time. All legume crops are known to leave the soil richer than it was before the crop was grown. The reason for this condition is on account of the amount of free-nitrogen that legumes take from the air and make use of. By treating the seed with culture, the bacteria begin their work sooner and thus a greater amount of nitrogen and fertility is left in the soil.

These nitro cultures are prepared by the Bacteriology Department of the Ontario Agriculture College and sold to the farmers at cost, one small bottle being sufficient to treat 60 pounds of seed. Realizing the need of treating seed this year, and also for the convenience of the farmers who wish to secure them, Mr. Runions states that he has just received a supply of nitro cultures direct from Guelph.

NEW DELHI (CP)—To help India attain complete equality of status within the Empire was declared by Lord Willingdon to be the main purpose of his life, and that of Lady Willingdon. The Viceroy was recently tendered a farewell dinner in view of his leaving for England on furlough.

2 MONTHS GIVEN TO WIFE BEATER

Tweed Man Also Has 5 Lashes Added—Children Made Wards of Shelter.

HIS THIRD OFFENCE.

TWEED, April 21 (Examiner Correspondence). — Martin Pringle, Tweed, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail and receive five strokes of the lash after being found guilty of assaulting his wife, by Magistrate Casement.

Despite the fact that creditable character witnesses gave testimony on behalf of the accused unsolicited, His Worship severely reprimanded the accused, who was facing his third charge of wife beating.

Following the court procedure the four Pringle children, who accompanied their mother into the court room, were made wards of the Childrens' Aid Society.

Pringle was arrested by P. C. Hayes of Tweed after his wife had complained to the authorities relating to his alleged attack on her while intoxicated. Mrs. Pringle displayed a black eye and severe bruises where her husband had beat her with his fists. Pringle was still under the influence of liquor when arrested by P. C. Hayes.

In defence, Pringle denied drinking or striking his wife. His Worship said, "You have disregarded previous warnings. In receiving the lash perhaps a little of your own medicine will prove a lesson to you in wife beating." The children, four little girls ranging in age from 3 to 9 years, were comfirmed wards of the Shelter.

Obituary

JOHN BRIANT.

LAKEFIELD, April 21.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Death came suddenly to John Briant, Belleville, father of George Briant, of this village, at the Belleville General Hospital, Thursday afternoon. Early Thursday morning he was taken with a severe seizure and was removed to the hospital, but the attack proved fatal.

The deceased was born in England and was in his 63rd year. He had been a resident of Canada for some years, and before going to Belleville he made his home in Desoronto for a short time. Thirteen years ago he came to Belleville and was appointed sexton of St. Thomas' Church, the duties in connection with which position he performed faithfully and well from that time up to the Sunday evening preceding his death.

Surviving to mourn his loss, besides his widow, are two sons, Frederick C. of Kingston and Edward of Lakefield; five daughters, Mrs. H. W. McKay of Toronto, Mrs. R. C. Newton of Belleville, Mrs. E. R. Hulbert of Fairfield, Mrs. L. J. Cowling of Buffalo, Mrs. C. Corill of Algonquin; and four sisters and two brothers in England.

The sympathy of many friends and of many citizens will be extended to the family in their bereavement.

MRS. WILLIS FRY

MARMORA, April 21 (Examiner Correspondence). — Early Friday morning, Mrs. Willis Fry passed peacefully away in her sleep at her residence in Marmora village.

The previous evening she complained of chills and received medical attention from Dr. H. Crawford. Last August she underwent a serous operaton, but for a woman of her years, seemed to have made good recovery.

On Easter Sunday she celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday. Her maiden name was Katharine Dingman and she was born in Napanee. She had resided in this village well over half a century. Her husband predeceased her on January 2, 1924. Previous to this she lost two sons in the Great War, both members of the 21st Battalion Canadian Infantry. Frederick Alvey was killed at Hill 70 on August 18, 1917, and thirteen days later William John died of wounds received in the same sector. Her bereavements she bore with Christian fortitude.

She cheerfully devoted hours of her life to neighborly acts. She will be especially missed in the eastern end of the village in which she resided.

Surviving her are one son and two daughters, Stewart, Niagara Falls, Ont; Mrs. Alex Kennedy, Havelock, and Mrs. Adrian Hawk, East Aurora, N.Y. She is further survived by two brothers, William and John Dingman of Belleville. She was a member of St. Andrew's United Church.

The funeral leaves her late residence on Sunday, April 22nd, to arrive at St. Andrew's at 1.30 p.m. for service, to be conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth. Interment takes place in the family plot in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

A CLOSE CALL.

When his sailboat overturned in the river yesterday, the aged man, once a powerful swimmer, managed to grasp the side of the craft and he clung to it for three hours before he was rescued.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAINS

F.o.b. shipping point: Wheat, carlots, 77c to 79c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

Butter prices continued on the down grade on the Montreal dairy and produce market yesterday. Freshly arrived butter from Quebec or Ontario, grading No. 1, was available as low as 24c a pound, while finest graded No. 1 New Zealands or Westerns ranged from 24½c to 25c a pound. Receipts totalled 1,184 boxes.

Other lines were unchanged. The egg market was steady despite heavy receipts, 4,180 cases being offered for sale. Graded shipments in carlots or less brought 19½c to 20c a dozen for A-large, 18½c to 19c for A-medium, 17c for B and 16c to 16½c for C.

Cheese was quoted at 11c to 11¼c a pound for current make Ontario, while white and colored summer Ontario lines brought 11½c to 12½c. Offerings amounted to 79 boxes.

Quebec potatoes again sold at 95c to $1 and New Brunswick Mountains at $1 to $1.05, Prince Edward Island Mountains in 90-pound bags brought $1.20 to $1.30.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Renewed talk of possibilities of Congressional silver enactments for an inflationary character led to moderate upturns in grain prices yesterday.

Assumed likelihood of silver legislation was associated with the fact that a conference had been scheduled between President Roosevelt and Senate advocates of various proposed monetary measures. A further stimulus to grain price upturns came from increased complaints of dry weather affecting domestic wheat territory, the spring wheat belt in particular.

Wheat closed unsettled, ¾c to 1c higher than Thursday's finish; corn, ⅞c to 1¼c advanced; oats, ⅜c to 1⅛c up, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 12c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 21. — With the Chicago market showing strength and export buying in evidence, wheat prices steadied up on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, to close ⅜ to ¼ cent higher.

May wheat closed at 64⅜c, July 65⅜c, and October at 67⅛c. Trading through the pit was not large in volume, but foreign sales of Canadian wheat approximated 600,000 bushels.

Offerings came from several sources, but at no time was the market unable to take care of the pressure handily.

Lightness of offerings restricted cash grain sales, while coarse grains firmed in sympathy with strength in the major commodity.

Contest Ends

Final reminder to the pupils of the Second and Third Books of city and rural schools—Eight prizes for compositions.

Only one more week remains for children of the second and third books of the city and county schools to prepare their compositions on the subject "Why we should be kind to animals" in the contest conducted by the Peterborough Humane Society.

Essays should be forwarded to Dr. Thos. Johnston, Monaghan Road, not later than Monday, April 30. That date mark on an envelope would be acceptable, but there is no reason why entries should not be received before that day.

Children are requested to write on one side of the paper only and their names an addresses and the name of their school should appear at the top right hand corner.

Eight prizes are offered in this contest, four for the children of the city schools and four for the rural pupils. Some of the teachers have taken a special interest in this effort of the Humane Society to direct the attention and the sympathy of the younger children to this subject and principal of the kindly treatment of animals. It is one of the humanizing influences in life, and an authentic mark of civilization.

The children taking part in this competition are potential members of the Humane Society of tomorrow, and the encouragement they receive from their parents and teachers may leave a permament effect on their characters.

Just a last word to children who have not yet begun their essays or who have just heard of the contest. They have more than a week to try for the prizes, ample time to compete. They are reminded that the neatness of their writing will be considered by the judges in selecting the best essays.

YOUNG PETERBOROUGH BUSINESS MAN MAKES GOOD IN HIS HOME TOWN

Untiring Energy and Enterprise Crowns His Varied Activies With Marked Success.

F. H. JOHNSTON.

Here is the story in brief of a young Peterborough business man, who by untiring energy and farseeing enterprise, has made a marked success in his chosen vocation. We refer to Mr. F. H. Johnston, head of Johnston's Tire, Battery and Radio Service, corner of George and McDonnel streets.

At the age of 21 years, Mr. Johnston entered the business arena in partnership with Mr. R. H. Dawson. This was in September, 1921, and the firm 'Dawson & Johnston" specialized in rubber vulcanizing by advanced methods operating in premises at the corner of George and McDonnel streets rented from the Schneider estate. In 1928 Mr. Johnston purchased his partner's interests, bought the entire property where his partner and he had operated since 1921, made extensive alterations and started reaching out for new business under the firm name, "Johnston Tire, Battery and Radio Service." Thus, Mr. Johnston has been 13 years in business at the one location—at the corner of George and McDonnel streets.

Dunlop Tires

For ten years Mr. Johnston has handled the widely-favored and dependable Dunlop Tires, which he has no hesitancy in claiming to be the finest tires in the market, both for mileage and economy in upkeep. These tires enjoy royal patronage and were used by Sir Malcolm Campbell in all his world speed records.

Varied Interests

It is six years now since Johnston's Tire, Battery and Radio Service accepted the agency for British American oil and gasoline, and the 100 per cent. efficient U.S. L. batteries. They also display in their commodious show room "Connor Washers"—guaranteed for twelve years—together with Tudhope electric ranges, which plug into a floor socket and need no special wiring.

The Frigidaire '34

Johnston's Tire, Battery and Radio Service are also district agents for Frigidaire, the pioneer of electric refrigeration. The new Frigidaire '34 is a triumph in refrigeration economy, using less current than an ordinary electric light bulb.

In addition to other business activities, Johnston's operate one of the best equipped vulcanizing and tire repairing departments in the city, being in a position to repair and vulcanize any car or truck tire manufactured to-day. Also a battery and recharging department and a complete washing and greasing annex, not forgetting a general repair service on all makes of cars, while featuring the repair of Chevrolets. Mr. Payne, formerly with J. K. Hughes Limited, for eight years, is in charge of the latter department and is giving all-round satisfaction. Last, but not least, Johnston's operate a curb gasoline service station, enabling them to give a one-stop service to automobile owners.

Mr. F. H. Johnston, familiarly addressed as "Tony" by his large clientage and friends, has, by his enterprise, the courage of his convictions that there is a bright near future for Peterborough, his own home town.

SHOW BOAT DAYS HAS FULL HOUSE

Every Available Seat Taken For Second Performance.

REALIZE TIDY SUM.

"Show Boat Days," the brilliant musical comedy of the old South, had a capacity audience at the Grand Opear House last evening, where every available seat was taken for the final performance, and great interest was manifested in the fine program.

At the conclusion of the show, bouquets were presented by the Kinsmen Club off stage to the lady principals in the cast.

From the two nights' entertainments, the Kinsmen Club, who sponsored the undertaking, will realize a nice sum for the benefit of eye clinic work among the city's children.

The outstanding success of the affair, besides being due to the energetic work by Kinsmen Club members, is undoubtedly due also to the very skillful and expert type of direction by George Zarfas, who proved his ability and professional knowledge in the way he secured co-operation from every person in the production and was able to bring out the very best in each member of the cast. It was an excellent type of direction that has seldom been duplicated here.

CASH PRIZES WON BY LOCAL PEOPLE

Mr. and Miss Donaldson Win Out in Conger Coal Co.'s Collection Contest.

Last December the executive of the Conger Lehigh Coal Co., at Toronto, organized a collection contest, open only to their branch offices outside of Toronto. The inducement to enter energetically into this contest consisted of two cash prizes for the office which made the highest percentage of collections on all accounts for coal and coke contracted before December 31st last year. The contest started January 1st and ended March 31st, 1934, with Peterborough branch successful in winning first prize. Peterborough's percentage of collections on outstanding accounts was 85.5, being 4 per cent above Guelph, a close runner-up.

At a banquet tendered branch managers by head office officials at the Ontario Club in Toronto last Tuesday night, the result of this contest was announced, and Mr. T. O. Donaldson, manager of the local Conger Coal Co.s branch was presented with two cash prizes amounting to $75. Mr. Donaldson personally received a cheque for $40, and Miss Muriel Donaldson, his secretary, was made the happy recipient of a cheque for $35.

Of course, Peterborough branch winning out in this contest is due largely to the hearty co-ordination with Mr. and Miss Donaldson of Conger Coal Co.'s local clientage—a co-ordination which reflects the utmost satisfaction in both quality of "Conger" products and excellence of service.

Chas. R. Kennedy of Silverwoods Elected President of New Dairy Group.

KAWARTHA BUTTER CLUB.

Butter makers of local and district creameries organized the Kawartha Butter Club at a meeting in the offices of Silverwood'sDairy last night.

Presumably the slogan of this new association allied with the dairy industry may be expressed in the simple phrase "better butter."

Peterboro, Lakefield and Lindsay creameries were represented last night, and it is expected that Omemee, Millbrook and Keene will join the group at the next meeting. Membership includes butter makers and their assistants with the objective of improving their product and working conditions along the lines so successfully followed by the cheese makers.

The following officers were elected: President, Charles R. Kennedy, of Silverwoods; Vice-President, Neil Driscoll, of Canada Packers; Secretary-treasurer, Thomas Johnston of Campbell's Dairy.

Three creamery inspectors were present, explaining the methods of organization and the purposes of the association. They were A. Davies of Toronto, whose district includes the Peterborough area; Thos. Adams of Toronto and Jas. Baker of Belleville.

CLEAN-UP WEEK COMMENCES MAY 5

Sponsored By Retail Merchants Section of Chamber of Commerce.

The annual Spring "clean-up; paint-up; give-a-man a job" campaign is to be held here during the week commencing May 5, it was announced by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce this morning.

Sponsored by the Retail Merchants' Section of the Chamber of which James Juby is chairman, the campaign has received the hearty endorsation of Mayor Roland Denne, and is receiving a wide measure of support from the merchants. Another meeting of the merchants has been called for Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber at 5.15 o'clock, when plans for the campaign are to be further advanced.

One of the annual features in the Chamber's program of community efforts, the Spring "clean-up" campaign has in former years been a means of inducing united effort on the part of the citizens generally, with advantage to the unemployed of the city, in the securing of temporary employment.

BERMUDA POLICE DECLARE WAR ON TOURISTS' 'SCANTY PANTIES'

Trippers Take Modesty Move Good-Naturedly, But Envy Regimental Soldiers.

IN SHORTER SHORTS

HAMILTON, Bermuda, April 21 (CP)—The day of the "scanty panty" is over on this coral island. Flappers must do their flapping in public places with shorts not shorter than two inches above the knee, according to the police decree.

There have been no arrests since the police department's modesty move but many American visitors have been politely advised to return to their hotels and "cover up." The reaction to the decree has been on the whole one of good nature and amusement amongst the thousands of trippers. It is expected that the warning will be sufficient to prevent any "flagrantly improper" dress in future.

Visitors are green with envy over the bold appearance of the Manchester Regiment who paraded on their first route march attired in their customary shorts. Police didn't even budge to measure their pant legs.

The Chief of Police is determined that "the isles of rest" will not become a second Atlantic City. Some say that the trouble al started because a young lady cyclist on the South Shore skidded when her too-short shorts got entangled in the handle bars Be that as it may, the official answer to the extremely scanty attire of the post-Easter parade is that bathing costumes and shorts of undue brevity will be looked upon with disfavor by police and that wearers of them render themselves liable to prosecution.

"Modesty shall prevail" is the police slogan and violators who are stopped by policemen will find themselves hauled into court to answer charges of being improperly and possibly indecently dressed.

The large number of college students now in the Colony are the principal offenders. Many of them rush to and from the beaches, it is claimed, in a near nudist attire. Bathing costumes are being used by cyclists. Young women and girls were alleged to be sporting shorter shorts.

How many are wondering under what authority the police are acting and if measuring rules will form part of their regular equipment when they go forth on the King's highway to judge improper dress.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

The other day I happened to pick up a patient's chart in the hospital, and then I said excitedly to the nurse, "Good heavens! This patient must have something pretty serious—his temperature is 105!"

'Oh," replied the nurse, "that will be down in an hour or two. That was just given to him for purposes of treatment."

And so it is. In the old days they used to think fever was a very unfavorable symptom and tried to reduce it one way or another. Nowadays, except in very long continued fevers, we feel that it is a part of the defense reactions of nature, and one of the ways that nature uses to get the patient well.

The reason for this simply is that the ordinary temperature of the body is a very favorable temperature for the growth of most germs. However, the favorable limits are not very wide, and if they are reduced slightly, the germs stop growing, and if they are raised slightly, the germs cease part of their activities. A temperature of 103, therefore, which is about four degrees higher than normal, is actually an extremely unfavorable temperature for the growth of many germs.

More than that, there are certain germs that are even killed off at a temperature of 104, 105 or 106, so that nowadays instead of reducing fever, we actually use it as a form of treatment.

This method was discovered when an outbreak of erysipelas occurred in an asylum, and a great many patients with paresis were completely cured after having had erysipelas. Instead of using erysipelas in the form of treatment, however, the director began to use malaria, which produces very high temperature and which can be easily controlled. They bred malaria germs in test tubes and inoculated them into patients. After several paroxysms when the temperature was raised to a high place, the malaria was killed off with quinine and the patient was no worse off.

The latest form of this treatment is to use what is known as a "hyperpyrexer", in which diathermy, an electrical form of heat, is employed. The patient is put into a cabinet lying down, with just the head out and, as the saying goes, "The heat is turned on." This produces temperature up to 105 and 106 for a few hours, and is just as good as a malarial chill without the trouble of infecting the patient with malaria.

The treatment is used in paresis and several forms of nervous diseases. Recently it has been extended to other diseases, one being St. Vitus dance, "chorea". The case which started this form of treatment is somewhat similar to the erysipelas cases just described. A child was observed at Bellevue hospital and showed no improvement on the regular form of treatment for chorea, but when, from some infection, he got a temperature of 106, the chorea promptly stopped. A number of cases have been treated along these lines with what appears to be very gratifying results.

It is probable that a very considerable number of diseases may be found responsive to this treatment.

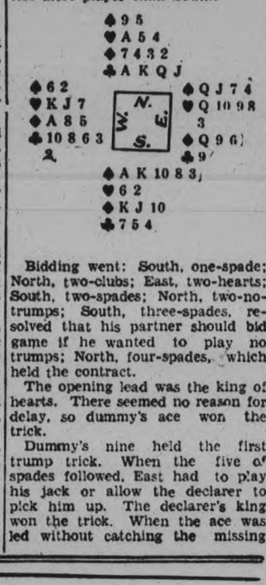
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

EAST BOTHERED ALL HE KNEW HOW

Neither side was vulnerable when the following interesting hand appeared. Luckily South did not allow his partner to play no trumps with opponent's suit single stopped. East proved to be as slippery as an eel bothering the declarer in a way which would have cause a loss to a less alert player than South.



Bidding went: South, one-spade; North, two-clubs; East, two-hearts; South, two-spades; North, two-no-trumps; South, three-spades, resolved that his partner should bid game if he wanted to play no trumps; North, four-spades, which held the contract.

The opening lead was the king of hearts. There seemed no reason for delay, so dummy's ace won the trick.

Dummy's nine held the first trump trick. When the five of spades followed, East had to play his jack or allow the declarer to pick him up. The declarer's king won the trick. When the ace was led without catching the missing queen South stopped leading trumps for a while.

South led a low club and dummy was in with the jack, dropping East's only club. Instead of going ahead and playing off dummy's clubs until East ruffed, the declarer led a diamond and finessed his ten. West's ace won and he led back the jack of hearts, costing the declarer his second trick. South ruffed the third heart held by West, leaving him the same number of trumps as East held.

The only way to fulfill his contract was to force East to ruff a club. South led a club, which East passed, discarding a heart. East was laying to ruff the next club led, so that eventually South would have to lead a diamond to East's queen, thereby going down a trick.

South saw the trap being set for him. Instead of leading another club, he led a diamond, and won with his jack. Then South led his last club. East had the option of trumping or discarding. He let go his diamond. That did him no good, however, as South could force East to ruff the next lead of a club or a diamond, unless East chose to let go his last heart and win the final trick. East let go his heart when dummy's last club was led, but the last trick of the hand had to be given East's high trump. South just fulfilled his contract, when a mistake on his part would have cost him game.

Almost Instant Relief From Neuralgia

For Quick Relief Say ASPIRIN When You Buy

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia . . . the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

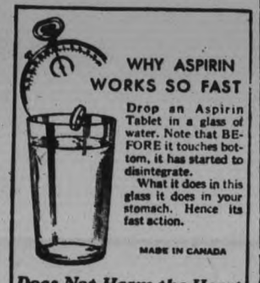
Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which an Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. An Aspirin Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, be on guard against substitutes. To be sure you get ASPIRIN'S quick relief, be sure the name Bayer in the form of a cross is on every tablet of Aspirin.



Does Not Harm the Heart

STAMP CORNER

By M. A. BESSEY

What do you know about Mongolia? To the average person, Mongolia means China, in a general way. To all intents and purposes, that is what it should be, but of recent years Russian influence seems to be extending through the entire territory in more ways than one.

For instance we find that Mongolian postage stamps are printed and distributed from Moscow, and on the 15 mung stamp as illustrated above, we see a young Mongolian revolutionary; we'll wager the flag he holds is red. However, it would seem that this same Russian influence isn't doing the Mongols any great harm. If we may judge from what we see, on stamps, it is teaching them many trades, some of which are illustrated, such as on the 1 mung value, a Mongol at a printing press; 5 mung, a Mongol at lathe; 2 mung, a Mongol telegrapher; the 10 mung depicts the government building at Ulan Bator, the capital city of the territory.

A Huge Territory

Mongolia is a huge territory, included in which is the great Gobi desert, which extends down into Turkestan; its total area is epproximately 1,800,000 square miles. For the most part the inhabitants, who are mostly Mongols and Kalmucks, range the wild country with droves of sheep and herds of cattle.

The original province of Mongolia is divided into two regions, the inner region we know as Mongolia, the outer region being Tannou Touva.

Although the stamps of Mongolia are very interesting in appearance and somewhat educational, we cannot say a great deal in their favor as sound investments for the collector. Fortunately there are sufficient of the lower values which are not expensive, and which will fulfil the requirements of the average album.

Some of the earlier issues are of considerable catalogue value, but they are in little demand, and their actual price is far below that of the catalogue.

Stamp Exchange Club

Every collector who has any duplicates, for exchanging, should be a member of our club.

We have received a number of letters from members, telling us of some very successful exchanges they have made to date. Doubtless there are a great many others who have not written to us so far, who have done well in exchanging stamps through club members, and we are always glad to hear from members, letting us know how they are getting along.

There are no dues in connection with the club. If you would like to be a member, just fill in one of the forms which are printed in our column from time to time. Be sure to state your address very plainly, also your age.

Questions and Answers

Harold Johnson, Alderson, Alta.:

Collectors should by no means encourage stamp companies to send approvals, unless they really want them.

Quite often one may receive unsolicited approval selections from some company, and be glad to get them. This is quite all right, but, if you do not want approval selections sent to you, simply write a note, stating so. If further approvals are sent, put them in the return envelop and mail it back. If a stamped, self-addressed envelope does not accompany the approvals for their return, I would suggest taking the stamps, etc., to your post master and explaining the circumstances to him.

It is a little too soon to set any definite value on first-day covers of the Regina Grain stamp.

Unpeelable hinges, which stick to the back of mint stamps, do not materially lessen their value, but of course, they are not desirable, and good clean stamps always look and sell the best.

John G. Golby, Toronto, Ont.:

We have no information at the present time, as to whether or not there will be any further additions to the set of the present 6d Kookaburra and 1 shilling Lyre bird stamps of Australia.

OUR MAIL

Dear Water Lily:

Yes indeed the neighbours have certainly neglected us since Easter. But now that you have broken the ice with your lovely letter I am sure they will all be back again. Your letters are always an inspiration and I know that in this busy worka-a-day world too many of us miss the glory of the sunrise. But we must get our rest sometime. And how nice it is in bed in the mornings. I remember one time for a whole week I arose at 5 o'clock each morning and I shall never forget the beauty of the early hours of those days. It mkes up for any misgivings one may have the night before about getting out of bed at such an early hour. Do write again soon, Water Lily.

Sincerely,

Anne Wilcox

We are now conducting a Special Spring Showing of the sensational new Frigidaire '34 models—Frigidaires which have made inconvenient refrigerators entirely out of date.

Among the new features of the Frigidaire '34 are automatic defrosting; ice trays that slide out at the touch of a finger; an Utility Basket which groups small packages to save space; the Servashelf, so useful when rearranging things; greater ice-making capacity; amazing operating economy and a host of other improvements.

We cordially invite you to visit our Spring Showing to see the Frigidaire '34—to see for yourself for why you can't afford to be satisfied with less than Frigidaire convenience, dependability and economy.

It is interesting to note that Madam Norah Drewett de Kresz of Toronto, the brilliant pianiste who delighted her audience at the recent concert presented by the Madrigal Singers in the Collegiate Auditorium, paid a tribute to the Peterborough Memorial by remarking that she was impressed by its beauty and comparing it to the graceful, flowing music of the French composer, Debussy, some of whose compositions appeared on her program.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Boxing the closet is a term which can well be applied to the modern method of keeping closets neat and trim. To meet the requirements of such a scheme all sorts and kinds of cases of boxes, durable yet lightweight are found in the shops. There are boxes for shoes and stockings, boxes for blouses, boxes for gloves and handkerchiefs, boxes for lingerie, and boxes for gloves and handkerchiefs, boxes for lingerie, and boxes for almost every conceivable thing which can be folded or laid away and kept good. The boxes mentioned are for clothes closets, but the handy containers are found excellent furnishings for other closets too. It seems a bit odd to talk of furnishing closets but that is precisely what is done when the spaces are filled with boxes.

* * * * * * *

Closet boxes differ from ordinary kinds for, since they come in sectional cases, they are uncovered, and can be pulled in and out. As a matter of fact they are drawers rather than boxes, although they are customarily called boxes. The cases come in endless sizes and shapes to suit shapes and sizes of closet spaces as well as to best accomodate the contents.

* * * * * * *

In furnishing a closet with these box-drawer cases it should be remembered that they should fill nooks, and stand on shelves, and be low and out of the way of the spaces needed for hanging up garments. It is assumed that one or more clothes poles extends the length of the closet or possibly its width if the closet is deep. Either of these arrangements uses to best advantage the space area of the closet, leaving the walls free for the case. of boxes.

* * * * * * *

For those who live in rented houses or apartments it is important to have these boxes easily portable They can be purchased in sections, sometimes so planned that they can occupy a long, low space, when resting on one side, or a high, narrow one when standing on end In each instance the drawers fit into place correstly merely by putting them in to suit the positioning of the case.

* * * * * * *

The boxes and cases may all be of extra-heavy cardboard. Or they may be of light-weight wood. Or they may have the cases of wood and drawers of the durable processed paper. The finish may be fancy paper or paint, or both may be used on one case when made of both wood and paper. Colors come in such wide variety than any preferred color scheme can be followed in the closet to suit the room from which it opens

* * * * * * *

The orderliness that pervades closets trimly furnished with these boxes, is refreshing. This is particularly noticeable in a place of the store closet sort, in which ribbons and laces, notions, and the usual array of necessary oddments must be kept. By labelling the box-drawers all items can be found without searching, and valuable time is saved

REV. GEO. W. TEBBS TO GIVE LECTURE

"The Garden Beautiful" Be Subject of Illustrated Lecture.

Spring is here, the swallows have returned, the birds are mating and building their nests, growth is everywhere manifesting itself, gardeners are anxiously checking up on possible losses due to the exceptionally severe winter, now past, and the Peterborough Horticultural Society announce another timely event in the engagement of the well-known lecturer for the Ontario Horticultural Association, the Rev. Geo. W. Tebbs, of Burlington, to give a lecture in the library, Tuesday, April 24 at 8 p.m on 'The Garden Beautiful,' illustrated by an entirely new set of slides. No charge made for admission. There should be no need of urging upon the attention of flower-growers the splendid work done by Mr. Tebbs in furthering interest everywhere in planting round the home, in beautifying the city, also stressing the importance of building horticultural societies where ideas on growing things can be exchanged and efforts pooled to promote civic pride.

This lecture will deal with gardening in general and should attract many who are now wondering what to plant.

The Peterborough Horticultural Society held another in the series of euchre parties to raise funds for prizes at the annual flower show. Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw, Mark street, loaned their home on Wednesday last, at which five tables of euchre were played. Prizes were carried off by the following: 1st lady, Mrs G. H. Clarke; 1st gent, Mr. G. H. Clarke; 2nd lady, Mrs. F. Biddle; 2nd gent, Mr. W. Wilks; consolation, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce.

Mr. J. A Smith conducted the party, and an enjoyable evening was concluded with the service of dainty refreshments.

The draw for the bedspread, which was donated by Mesdames G. H. Clarke and Dixon, was also made and the winner was ticket No. 108, held by Aileen Cardwell, of Fraserville.

Repeal Influence Is Displayed By Beauticians, Declares Gladys

June Vlasek applies her powder carefully.

By GLADYS GLAD

Since the advent of repeal, the cocktail hour no longer is a nondescript, masculine function that takes place at Mike's or Benny's behind a locked door. Today "the ladies" lend their feminine influence and do their teaing at cocktail bars.

And the repeal influence even has had its effects on cosmeticians. For one venturesome cosmetician has imbued his lipsticks with the flavor of the epicurean's favorite vintages. A lass can have her lipstick flavored with Port, Burgundy, Grenadine, Chianti or Maderia, if she prefers.

Personally, however, I think that most femmes will continue to choose their lipsticks with a view to their becomingness, rather than their flavor. Lipstick is not basically a confection, or a liquer. It's a beauty accessory. And it certainly can help to enhance a woman's attractiveness, if it is properly employed.

There are a number of women, however, who do not have much skill in the use of lipstick. They purse their lips when applying the coloring, or attempt to hold them firm. And they achieve a rather overpainted, hard effect. The lips should be relaxed and slightly parted when lipstick is applied, for a much softer effect can be achieved in this fashion.

Lipstick also can do a great deal to improve the shape of the mouth when rightly used. If your lips are thick, for instance, keep the coloring well within the line of their edge. They will tend to make them appear thinner. If your lips are thin, use the cushion part of your finger to push the red a little above and below the line of your lips, to thicken them. This must be done delicately, else the red will show too plainly on the skin outside your lips.

If you possess a very long mouth, do not let the red run out near your mouth corners, and exaggerate the Cupid's bow a bit on the upper lip. If your mouth is too small, you can increase its size by applying your lipstick to the very ends of your lips at the mouth corners. And if you wish to make your mouth appear temptingly soft and child-like, leave your upper lip free of color in the very center, and arch the lipstick on the curve of the lip on both sides of the center.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Colors

Martha: I think that you will find shades of tan, brown, blue, gray, dark green, dark red and black, especialy becoming to you.

Complexion

Mrs. Temple: My methods of clearing the skin of pimples, lightening dark spots, and correcting enlarged pores are too long to print here. They are, however, contained in detail in my "Beauty Culture" booklet.

Callouses

Gertrude: You can use powdered pumice and olive oil to remove the callous on your hand. Soak the hand first, and then rub the mixture over the callous. The oil will soften the skin, and the pumice will remove all dead cuticle.

Itching Skin

Dinah: Your skin itches because it lacks sufficient natural oil. After the bath, massage your body with cold cream or olive oil.

A Message to the Citizens of Peterborough

Elmwood Park,
Peterborough, Ontario,
April 19, 1934.

"Give and it shall be given unto you."—St. Luke 6:38.

Dear Fellow Citizen:

The physical and moral standard of Canadian youth must be maintained, irrespective of the financial stress and strain brought about by economic unrest. The neglected and discouraged boy of to-day may be the criminal of to-morrow.

Just try and imagine living in a world void of all organizations interested in the welfare of mankind. Such a world would be unfit to live in.

Many organizations are trying to help the boys and young men who must become our future leaders. One of the most effective organizations in this field is The Young Men's Christian Association. By varied programs of activities it is building up their physique, broadening their mental outlook and increasing their appreciation for the better things of life.

The doors of the Y.M.C.A. are open from 14 to 16 hours a day, six days a week, 52 weeks a year, to boys of all classes, creeds and vocations, at membership fees which are exceedingly reasonable. In cases where it is impossible to pay fees, provision is made to take care of those so situated. If the fees were made high enough to cover all the operating costs, the organization would become an exclusive club and defeat its main objective.

Business, while not yet booming, is steadily and surely improving. In view of this fact we hope you will give us generous support.

As Chairman of the Committee of the Association in relation to the Annual Campaign for public subscriptions, we would like to say that we have associated with us nearly 100 business men of Peterborough, who next week are undertaking to call upon the citizens of Peterborough, humbly soliciting your financial help in the interests of our boyhood and young manhood. May we bespeak for them a cordial reception and a generous response?

Thanking you for your support, we remain,

Yours faithfully,

Chas. Shaw

Chairman Campaign Committee.

Relief Hurler Carithers Stars in Albany's 10-7 Win

INSIDE THE PADDOCK

BY ART MURRAY

TWO WEEKS from today the famous Kentucky Derby will be decided and we notice where Mati Hari has at last been installed as the public choice. She arrived at the Churchill Downs course this week from winter quarters and turned in a couple of fast workouts that completely overshadowed that has as yet been shown by any of the contestants. This column has, since early last fall, consistently called her as the winner and we are glad to know that so far she has lived up to our expectations. That well known conditioner Clyde Van Dusen is the trainer and there is no smarter in the business.

GETTING NEARER home we notice that the bangtails are getting down to real business at the Woodbine and are breezing six furlongs in around 1.14 which is no mean effort at any time of the year for a workout. . . . Under a new amendment passed at Ottawa the other day Canadian tracks may now run fourteen day meetings instead of seven. Fort Erie seems to be the plant hereabouts that is incined to take advantage of the change but all the western Canada tracks will benefit by it as its cuts shipping expenses in about half.

WE UNDERSTAND that Willie Morrissey has his good sprinter Golden Spur in tip top shape. He gave her a complete rest all winter and for the last two months has been bringing her along slowly until today she is on razor edge. She should account for a purse the very first week they get under way in Canada. Nat Ray has a couple of well charged guns in his barn in Stealingaway and Kiltamond. They raced all winter very successfully in Florida and for the last few weeks he has been freshening them up in our climate and both will be ready for action at drop of the hat.

WIRE-TAPPING—Now for a few sleepers that are due to click in Maryland and Texas. Excellency from the Tarn stable has been working in a manner that suggests he is not far off a winning effort and here is a timely tip, the further the distance the better he likes it. Pulls is another at the same place. He was second this week, only being a jump behind the winner at the finish and is a dividend paying plug in any kind of going. At Harvre De Gras they have Soeur Blanche in rare fettle and this fellow is a bear for consistency. Hackey H is another to keep the nude optic on, a hide that is all set to go places and do things. Elmer Trueman has brought Corrymeela around to excellent condition and it won't be long now until this one is schnozzling the placing stand.

LOROMETER is still training at the McLaughlin farm near Oshawa and believe you us that bag o'bones is burning up the dirt. Unless something happens between now and four weeks from today the running for the King's plate should be just a mere gallop for him with Frankie Mann on his back sitting straight up. The Labrot stable have decided to send a division of their large stable to Canada this summer, so we will see some of the best in American action. This stable houses such outstanding handicap performers as Tred Avon and Springsteel.

HOLDS TORONTO RALLY IN NINTH TO EVEN SERIES

Newark Bears Take Home Run Route to Overcome Buffalo Bisons 5-4.

SYRACUSE GAME OUT.

Red Wings Score Nine Runs in Tenth Inning to Submerge Baltimore 14-8.

(By The Associated Press)

Garrison finishes apparently are to be the rule in the International League this season.

The Buffalo Bisons scored nine runs in the ninth inning to beat Newark on opening day Wednesday and yesterday the Rochester Red Wings hit that same figure in a tenth inning uprising that submerged the Baltimore Orioles, 14 to 8.

Blanked by Pete Appleton (nee Jablonski)) for six innings, the Red Wings came to life with three runs in the seventh and two in the eighth to tie the score at 5-all. Neither team could count in the ninth, but Rochester hammered out five hits in the tenth off Appleton, George Miner and Max Butcher and, with the aid of a wild pitch by Miner and two fielding errors, tallied nine runs.

The Orioles came back in their half to drive Ad Liska from the box but John Berly stepped in and shut out the rally after three runs had scored. Bissonette and Abernathy for Baltimore, and Goodman and Crabtree for Rochester clouted homers.

HOMERS PLENTIFUL

The Newark Bears took the home-run route to overcome Buffalo, 5-4. Circuit drives by Dale Alexander and Jimmy Hitchcock in the fourth and Doc Farrells homer with Joe Glenn on base in the fifth, gave the Bears a 4-3 lead going into the ninth. Here the Bisons rallied to drive Marvin Duke from the box and square the count, but in the last half Roy Schalk rifled the ball over the left field fence for the deciding tally.

FIRST SET-BACK FOR LEAFS

Fine relief pitching by Jimmy Carithers enabled the Albany Senators to down Toronto, 10-7, in a free-hitting battle, trailing by four runs going into the ninth, the Leafs drove Ned Porter to cover in short order. They had one run in and the bases filled with none out, when Carithers was summoned to the rescue. The young southpaw stopped the rally cold, retiring the next three men in order. Fred Sington of the Senators drove in four runs with three singles.

The Montreal-Syracuse game was postponed on account of cold weather.

CANADIANS LEAD IN BICYCLE RACE

Fielding and MacDonald Ride Brilliantly to Improve Standing.

MONTREAL, April 21.— In a display of speedy and daring riding, two young Canadians, Reggie Fielding of Toronto and his Ottawa team mate Roy Macdonald, last night took the lead in Montreal's tenth semi-annual six-day bicycle race, which ends to-night.

The youngsters cut loose in a jam that did not end until 43 laps in all had been gained. Fielding and Macdonald took eight of these to go out in front, passing Onesime Boucheron and Henri Muton, the Frenchmen, who had been leading earlier, by one lap. Alfred Letourner and Henri Lepage, the Franco-Canadian combination, followed, with Torchy Peden, Victoria, and Jules Audy, Montreal, another lap in arrears.

The field was cut by another team yesterday when Frank Bartell of Newark, N.J., one of the best-known American riders, quarrelled with his partner, Piet Van Kempen, the Dutch champion. Bartell and his mate had failed to get along as partners all week and their enmity came to a climax with a flurry of blows.

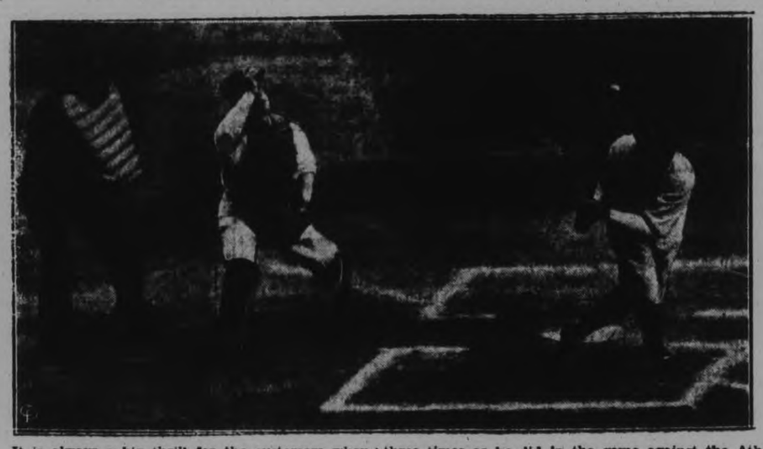
Gorman Resigns as Manager of Chicago Hawks

Strike Three And Out In Babe's First Time At Bat



It is always a big thrill for the customers when Massa George Herman Ruth steps to the plate. But it is more thrilling than usual when he does it in the opening game of the season and fans the atmosphere three times as he did in the game against the Athletics at Shibe Park, Phila. Here the Yankees' star swatsmith is shown taking the third and retiring swipe at the apple before resuming his seat on the bench.

ROOKIES STAR AS DODGERS BLANK PHILADELPHIA 5 TO 0

Emil Leonard and Len Koenecke Play Prominent Part in Brooklyn Victory.

GIANTS WIN AGAIN.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

When Casey Stengel, new manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, admitted this spring that he intended to devote a large part of his efforts to building for the future, the boys from Flatbush figured that was just one way of admitting the Dodgers had little in the way of prospects for 1934. Some of the early performances at Ebbetts Field, however, look as if someone already had done a little building with the current season in mind.

Emil Leonard, a knuckleball hurler who came up from York, Pa., just in time to get into a couple of games late last season, and Len Koenecke, who was known as the $75,000 'bust' when he failed to make good with the Giants a few years ago, got into the line-up almost by accident. But they did enough in one game yesterday to justify their being kept around a while.

Leonard, named as a starting pitcher because Ray Benge didn't get into condition soon enough, shut out the Phillies with six hits to win his first start 5 to 0, gave only one walk and contributed a double to his own victory. Koeneck, who got the center field job when Danny Taylor was injured, took care of most of the scoring. When he finally got started hitting yesterday, the Phils couldn't get him out. He rapped Ed Holley and Ted Kleinhans for two homers and two singles that accounted for all but one of the Dodger runs.

The New York Giants continued their unbroken string of triumphs in the only other National League game which survived yesterday's chilly weather in the mid-west, scoring in two big innings on a combination of hard and "head" hitting, they trimmed the Braves 7 to 3 for their fourth straight victory. A homer by Mel Ott started them off on a three run burst in the second, then after the Braves had tried the count with the aid of a four bagger by Marty McManus, they crossed up Pitcher Ben Antwell with a cuple of bunts and staged a four run rally that won the game in the sixth.

Mound Duel

Detroit and Cleveland furnished the feature of the two-game American League program with a mound duel between Carl Fischer and Lloyd Brown which wound up abruptly in the ninth with Detroit the 4-0 victor. After eight scoreless innings the Tigers loaded the bases on a couple of walks, one intentional, and a sacrifice on which Brown threw late to second. Marvin Owen stepped up and cleared the corners with a double, took on the throw to the plate and squeezed home on Fisher's sacrifice. The Tiger southpaw earned his shutout by granting only five hits.

Washington's mound staff again failed to hold the oppositinn down and the Athletics slugged out a 9 to 6 decision for the Senators' third straight defeat. The A's pounded Monte Weaver for four runs in the first and wound up with 15 blows against four flingers, plenty to win even though Washington collected 12 hits.

Rain and cold weather forced the postponement of all other games in both leagues.

Costly Accidents

PITTSBURG, April 21.—Baseball leads all major sports in the number of accidents resulting in damage awards, while the see so many guests present, but to football trails at the end with the fewest.

Hunting heads the list in total damage claims, however, according to reports made to the Pittsburg Safety Engineers' Conference.

The meeting was told that a survey from 1922 to 1930 showed 2,120 accidents resulting from baseball, on which $156,864 was paid in damage claims. Figures for the football for the same period showed 373 accidents, costing $24,400.

RACING DUTIES CONLFICT WITH PILOT POSITION

Hawks' Owner Regrets Resignation But Has Already Decided Upon Successor.

LED 4 CHAMPION TEAMS.

Will Devote Time to Duties as Secretary of Quebec Racing Association.

CHICAGO, April 21.—Tom Gorman, who managed the Chicago Black Hawks to the world's hockey championship, resigned yesterday to devote his interests to the Quebec Racing Association, of which he is secretary.

The announcement of his resignation, rumored during the Stanley Cup series, was made by Major Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Black Hawks, who said a successor had been selected, but declined to divulge his identity.

"Some time before the start of the playoff games (Stanley Cup series) Manager Gorman notified us that because of his racing connections he felt he would be unable to manage the Hawks after this season," said Major McLaughlin in a prepared statement.

"Because of our pleasant relations with Gorman and his great success in managing the team, this was a great disappointment to us. His consideration in giving us notice so far in advance of his intentions did, however, enable us to make a thorough canvass of the field in looking for his successor, and we have been very fortunate in picking a man who will be able to follow successfully in his footsteps. Owing to certain circumstances, we are unable to announce the new manager's name at present, but we hope to do so shortly."

Gorman replaced Emil Iverson as manager of the Black Hawks during the 1932-33 season and made good his promise of a championship club for the Hawks by leading the team brilliantly in the Stanley Cup series during the past season. As former manager of Ottawa Senators and New York Americans, he has managed four teams to victory in the Stanley Cup, emblem of world hockey supremacy.

As hockey fans called up names of possibilities for the past, that most often heard was Frank Patrick. The general manager of the N.H.L. let it be known that he likely would be in a new role next Winter.

RACING DUTIES CONFLICT

OTTAWA, April 21 (CP). — Tommy Gorman, confirming the announcement from Chicago that he had definitely decided to relinquish his duties as manager of the world's champion Black Hawks, said:

"When I agreed with Major McLaughlin in January, 1933, to take control of the Black Hawks it was with the understanding that I would only remain in charge until such time as the team had been rebuilt. I recently found it impossible to carry on my racing duties and continue with the Black Hawks, hence my resignation from the Chicago club.

Major McLaughlin has treated me splendidly during my term at the head of the Black Hawks, and I was delighted to win for him the worlds' championship and the Stanley Cup. The Chicago fans and the sport writers also treated me wonderfully, and no words of mine could adequately express to the players my gratitude for the fine loyalty and spirit they maintained in their gallant fight from last place to the championship. They are worthy holders of the Stanley Cup and I hope that they hold it for many seasons to come."

EQUIPOISE TO MAKE 1934 DEBUT TO-DAY

Whitney Star in $7,500 Feature at Havre-Texas Derby at Arlington.

NEW YORK, April 21. — The big shots of the turf will swing into action on three fronts to-day, with C. V. Whitney's famous Equipoise making his 1934 debut in the $7,500 Philadelphia Handicap at Havre de Grace, Norman Church's Riskulus meeting eleven other 3-year-olds in the $10,000 Texas Derby at Arlington Downs and twelve high-class sprinters matching strides in the Paumonok Handicap at the opening of the New York season at Jamaica.

The Texas Derby will do much to determine Riskulus's ability to compete against the country's best in the Kentucky Derby.

But the big race of the day will be in Maryland, with Equipoise resuming a campaign designed to pass Sun Beau's money winning record of $376,244 before the end of the year. The little chestnut now the fourth on the list of earnings, with $322,970 caps top Gallant Fox with a victory in the one mile and one-sixteenth jaunt which he won last year.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, the big show in baseball is under way, and for we who like the diamond pastime they's a new interest in life. They ain't been much happen yet to give a line on the pennant winners, but big crowds seen the opening games and some mighty smart pitching performances has already been turned in. Mister Warnecke of the Cubs come near pitching himself a no-hit, no-run game the very 1st day, only 1 blow being got off his delivery, and if that ain't bearing down in April I'm a long distance runner. The home-run makers is away to a good start, too, and altogether it looks like a real lively season with plenty to interest the died-in-the-woollens fans.

In the International League the big surprise so far, Mac, was the 1 the Toronto Leaves got opening day at Albany. All along the Toronto crew thought they didn't have no pitchers, but when the pinch came they uncovered the best heaver of the day in Umpire Van Grafiin, who give them a shut-out victory by forfeiting the battle to the Boone boys. By all accounts it musta been as thrilling as a movie serial.

The rasslers opened up here last week, but to be truthful, the new bunch of talent imported for the occasion didn't make much of a hit. The terrible Turk wasn't the only thing terrible on that bill, for the grunt and groaners was neither clever or funny, and so both the fans that take their rassling serious and the others that go just to laugh both was fed up before the boys called it a nite. It was plenty cold enough without a frost in the ring, and the only good thing about it was that the falls come quick and it was all over early.

Our Central baseball loop is having a tough time to get squared away, what with some of the clubs objecting to paying the shot for a interlocking schedule with a Toronto league and Oshawa not wanting to come back to the Central circuit. The fly in the ointment, of course, is the long Kingston trip, but on the other hand, them Ponies has always been keen contenders and they have color enough to make the games with Kingston about the anappiest of the season. It's a tough layout all round, and no wonder the ball moguls ain't having much fun these days.

Well, here's hoping they get it all straightened out soon. In the meanwhile I'm going to bail out right now. Look out below!

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

CRACK TEAMS SOCCER FINAL

Portsmouth and Manchester City Ready For English Cup Classic.

AT WEMBLEY STADIUM.

WEMBLEY STADIUM, April 21 (CP)—When Portsmouth and Manchester City step on the field here next week for the English Soccer Cup final, it will be a battle between two of the most evenly-matched sides in first-class soccer.

Manchester City, making their fourth appearance in the final, is a somewhat difficult team to weigh up. There is no suggestion of greatness about their style. Speedy wing play, first time shooting and energetic defenders are their chief attributes, although in Busby and McLuckie they have two artistic attackers.

Portsmouth is a good cup team. With varied methods in attack, accuracy in shooting and a sound defence, they appear to stand a pretty good chance of winning the trophy for the first time in the club's history.

In J. Gilfillan, Portsmouth have a very capable goalkeeper who is as "safe as houses." He has saved his side on many occasions, particularly again Bolton Wanderers in the sixth round.

J. A. Mackie, the right-back, wears well. He possesses fine judgment and a fine knowledge of positional play, while his kicking is very sure. His partner, Willie Smith, is also a sturdy defender and a sound kicker. They are a stern pair of full-backs.

The half-back line, with Nichol on the right and Captain D. Thackeray on the left, is capable of combining defence with attack. The pivotal position is in the capable hands of J. Allen, the England centre-half. He plays the third-back game to perfection.

The general of the attack is Jack Smith, the England inside-right. He is the "brains" of the line and in J. Weddle, in the centre, he has the right man to translate his scheming into goals. A cool, constructive player, Smith is the connecting link with half-backs and forwards, and his presence has a steadying influence on the rest of the line. One of Smiths' greatest assets is that he can keep the ball on the ground. There is no wild lunging about him.

Weddle, a tall, well-built player, is of the go-ahead straight-for-goal type and very difficult to hold. His display against Leicester, with Heywood in opposition, marks him as a player of great possibilities. F. Worrall, on the right wing, is a go-ahead winger who also "uses his head" and is quick to grasp a situation and run in for a shot. The other forwards are J. Easson and S. Rutherford.

Manchester's Hopes

For the City, F. Swift, 19-year-goalie, has the head of a veteran. He knows where to expect the ball.

The defence consists of L. Barnett on the right, and W. Dale at left; both consistent performers.

M. Busby, at right half is not only a fine defenceman but a dangerous attacker at times, and the same goes for S. Cowan's, the City's centre-half. One of the best headers in the game, Cowan is strong and resourceful. On the left the City has J. Bay, on ex-factory worker who proved so useful that the City put Jimmy McMullan up into the forward line to make room for him.

On the attack the City has one of the fastest wing men in present-day soccer in E. Toseland on outside right. He is a very tricky ball handler and a consistent scorer. At inside right there is R. Marshall, with the City for six years, and a league player for 14 years, always dangerous.

S. F. Tilson will lead the City's attack. He was moved to centre forward last season and was an immediate success. He has a deceptive swerve and although called one of the unluckiest players in football, he can seize an opportunity quicker than anyone else. Injuries which took him off sides that he had carried to honors, or kept him off international teams, gave him the "unlucky reputation."

On the left of the attacks is none other than E. Brook, internaitonal star and irrepressible opportunist with a roving disposition, a terrific and accurate shot. At inside left is A. Herd, the utility man of the side who can play anywhere in the attack or at wing half, and generally does. Skilful and effective, he is a great feeder of scoring changes and shoots equally hard with either foot.

AIR-GUN PUTS UP EIGHT-TON PLANE

British Try Out Accelerator to Launch Flying Boats in 20-Yard Run.

LONDON, April 21 (C.P.)—Successful trials have been made of the new machinery designed to launch big flying boats from the decks of the Fleet.

Tests at the Royal Aircraft establishments at Farnborough indicate British warships will in future be able to carry heavily armed and manned flying boats with them, in addition to the smaller aircraft with which they are already equipped. The heavier flying machine will be literally hurled into the air as by the hand of a giant.

Four test launchings were photographed. In the first and second the machine was propelled along the launching rails at half speed; its full equipment was on board, but no crew, and the engine was stopped. The craft ran smoothly along the rails and ran down the ramp at the end to come to a rest after running straight ahead over the aerodrome for about 100 yards. Pilot and crew then got aboard and the engine was started. This time the full power of the launching gear was applied and the pilot opened the engine throttle wide. Before the end of the run the craft had reached flying speed, and it left the rails to climb easily away.

The type of catapult employed for the tests was the "field accelerator" designed by the experts. It launches aeroplanes weighing up to 8½ tons in a run of about 20 yards. Power derived from two spheroidal engines driven by compressed air, rising in a second or two to more than 4,000 horsepower, accelerates the aeroplane in that short distance from rest to 60 miles an hour.

Catapults are coming into increasing use in the Royal Navy. New ships are fitted with them as they commission for service. At present 21 capital ships and cruisers have them; in the capital ships the catapults are on the gun turrets.

NUNNS MAY NOT REPRESENT CANADA IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

Needs Walter Martin, Now in U.S. For Training He Tells Writer.

RAINVILLE NOT IN.

C. C. PETERSON

TORONTO, April 21. — Gilbert Nunns declared to me: "None of the men who have played Davis Cup tennis for Canada in the last few years will ever win or come close to winning the famous trophy for Canada. If C.L.T.A. is really looking to Canada's future in international lawn tennis they might as well forget our existence as players and commence building a team around young fellows who obviously have at least five playing years ahead of them."

Nunns first made the team in 1927 at the age of 20, and is on the records as being the youngest player to ever wear the Canadian Davis Cup blazer. Yet he was never given a chance to start a first-day match until last year against Cuba. Winning both singles matches easily won him the right, despite a howl from the Montreal press, to start again, this time against the U.S.A., and he acquitted himself creditably, even to the entire satisfaction of the Montreal tennis officials. This year he is considered a certainity for a place. The choosing is in his hands, but maybe he will not choose to try. Right now he does not know himself. Getting away from business would have to be arranged, and it evidently is imperative that Walter Martin be on hand to give him the necessary practice at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club.

"If Walter does not return after the Pinehurst and White Sulphur Springs tournaments I will withdraw from the trials," said Gilbert.

Consistent accuracy in stroking a tennis ball is a matter of split-second timing. Gilbert knows it would take him all of a month to acquire that automatic control over mind, eye and racket hand. He says he could condition himself playing against Ross Wilson and Maurice Margesson, whose names have been mentioned as prospects for the trial, but 'good players that they are, they could not help to accustom my timing to the speed I will be up against in the international contests." This was spoken in an unassuming way, his manner indicating regret that he did not feel they could provide the competition needed.

Says Rainville Slipping

"What do you think about Dr. Jack Wright's decision to take another fling at making the team?" I questioned.

"Wright," replied the most rational ranking tennis player writer knows, "has a lot of friends in the east. Naturally he would like to see them. If he can make the trip at the expense of a tennis association he saves himself quite a bit of money."

Nunns had nothing to say on the subject and I did not ask him if he thought he could defeat Wright this year. Gil has never beaten Wright in a match that meant anything and he is too conservative to reply other than "I don't know".

However, I did ask him if he thought he could beat Rainville even if Martin was not in town for practice sessions. He replied without hesitation: "I think I should be able to take Marcel," reasoning, "Marcel always was soft and getting softer every year. If he did not spend weeks in the south every spring and play tennis steadily all summer he would not beat anyone." But he agreed with Walter Martin that it would be very difficult for the C.L.T.A. to keep him off the team with the "trials system" in vogue.

Nunns figures Montreal wants the team to comprise Martin, Laird Watt, Rainville and Bob Murray. The second and third named are University of McGill students. He thinks well of the promise they show, believes they are the right kind of fellows for the selection committee to encourage and bring along, and intimates that whenever their development warrant inclusion on the team they should be given their chance and given it as early as possible. Nevertheless, he points out the error of acting too hastily. Young players, he says, are very apt to flash to the front, looking like comers, but really lack the the ability to become players of calibre.

TUMBLING THE PINS

Friday nights' tumbling wound up the bowling for the season in The Examiner Shop League, with the Barringer team copping the first place honors with 2,273 total pinnage against 2,188 rolled by the Wyllie four who hold down second place money. Bob Wyllie rolled the only 600 total in this fracas. In the battle for third and fourth place honors, Logans' 2,113 gave his boys the former berth by 48 pin majority over Lacheur who rolled up 2,065 to wind up in last place for the money.

* * *

In the consolation event, highest pinnage for the night among the four teams not in playoffs counted with the Ron Taylor outfit taking the laurels by the high total of 2,457, Dunkley ranked second with 2,164; Zeihr with 2,095, and Killingbeck 2,039 ranking next in order. The high bowling of the evening featured this event with Thexton, Wyllie and Holyman rocking the pins over the 600 mark, and Taylor knocking down 583 on the winning team. Scates and R. M. Glover were other 600 marksmen.

* * *

At the close of the evening's activities Ralph Holyman league secretary, received the presentation of a cheque for his services during the season, and M. Dunkley, who assisted in keeping the records was given cigarettes. R. M. Glover made the presentation also of the Shop League Cup to the victorious Barringer team of Max Glover, Jerry Cullen, Frank Grey, and Walter Barringer.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By C. J. P.

Even in the world of sports there are people who believe in fairies. And so we will tell a fairy story. Once upon a time, not many years ago, in this very town there was a softball fan Now, this softball fan was stranger than most fans because he used to drop a quarter into the hat every time it was passed at games! Yessir, believe it or not, two bits went into that chapeau every game. Well, the first time the collector saw it, he figured the guy had made a misake and tossed in the quarter thinking 'twas a big nickel. And, as he didn't want to give the league treasurer heart failure, he just pocketed the coin himself. And darned if he didn't make a habit of it, till he was caught and given ten years for grand larceny. The next collector was an honest chap but he wasn't very strong, and he collapsed the first time he saw that two bits. He ended his days in a sanitarium.

* * * * * *

Gradually, it got bruited around that this guy never failed to throw in twenty-five cents and the crowds came out to see him drop his dough and forget to watch the games. Well, the league executive had to do something about it and, much as they hated to see a quarter-fan—that means a chap that antes up two bits—removed, still they knew that the fans would soon forget all about softball just gazing spellbound at the reckless spender. So they had a brain-specialist call on the guy. He asked him: "Do you really like softball?" And the fellow replied bravely: "I do!" Then the doc says: "But surely not two bits' worth a game?" And the chap answered doggedly: "Yep!" Well, to shorten a sad tale, they took the unfortunate man away—though we've always had the feeling that he might have been more or less sane, and at least harmless. The story was hushed up but it must have leaked out, as from that day to this no softball fan in town has ever been caught throwing more than a dime into the hat—and doggone few go that high!

* * * * * *

Last week—no, no, folks, stick around, we're not starting another one—the Lakeshore Gals' Softball League was put together. It embraces (a good word where the femmes are concerned) Oshawa, Newcastle, Port Hope and Cobourg. They affiliated with the Provincial Women's Union, as intermediates, and must have a winner declared by August 15th. Twilight games will be seven frames while afternoon squabbles go nine heats. And the serenades in the gloaming commence at seven bells, except in poor Newcastle which is without daylight saving yet so they must go into their song and dance at 6.30 by your gold watch and chain. Schedule starts May 24th, and bring your own firecrackers just in case. The only reason we're taking the trouble to press-agent this loop is to give the local damsels' circuit an idea of how others do it who have said "I do" to the Women's Union.

Call this a style note, or a colorful paragraph or what you will, but the fact remains that local lacrosse chappies are wearing blue, seeing red and being taken for green. Yeah, that's right. Seems Toronto loops, or is it the O.A.L.A.?, think we're green down this neck of timberland, and after first asking a thirty-five-dollar guarantee to have senior teams come here, they've jumped the price up to half a C—that's fifty smackers in any language. So the boys around here are rawthaw peeved, don't you know? And they are also a bit glum, by jove. Looks like no senior, but how about intermediate with us and maybe Cobourg, Norwood and Campbellford?

There being another City Baseball League meeting in Duffus next Thursday, we'd like to see some action toward getting team entries. It's tougher'n pulling molars with a door-knob and string the past few years to rake up half a dozen squads in this loop. Without straining in the slightest what we laughingly call our brain, we can remember when there were a dozen good teams, good ones too, in the City League, and when good crowds enjoyed 'em. Are those days gone forever? The kids are still here and they still want to play ball, but where are the managers and backers of other years? True enough, the league saw its best days before '29 when stocks took a longer count than Tunney, but with every second bird you meet these days yipping about his stocks, they should be back in the baseball market this year.

The C.O.B.L. Centennial—a hundred years of baseball in one month!—continues, and, we hope, concludes today in Cobourg. After a record marathon mixup in trying to get organized the league clubs are holding a final meeting and expect to either get lined up satisfactorily for the season or disband as a loop. With reason replacing hot-headedness, if there's such a word, the session should terminate to the satisfaction of all. Anyway, the C.O.B.L., the Ulster League Oshawa, maybe Napanee, and the O.B.A.A. will all have delegates present. The tangle down this section of the Province is being watched with interest by Toronto as it will affect baseball in the Queen City one way or another. Quite a contingent went from Peterborough today. The issue now rests in the laps of the gods—and we hope the gods don't decide to stand up without warning.

Church Softball Loop executive met in the 'Y' last eve to check up on rules for this year. These will be distributed to the Sunday Schools before tomorrow along with entry forms. The junior age-limit was left at twenty-one, and players changing Sunday Schools must stay out of play for a year—this to stop tourist players. It's a new rule here but used in Toronto and other towns. If the Church Hockey and Basketball Leagues would adopt this, it might prove advantageous all around. Entries must be in by April 30th, with the usual half-dollar fee. Play starts, with a formal opener, on May 7th. With a number of new entries and much interest, the Church Circuit should have its best year so far. The executive this year consists of: Chairman Len Agnew, Secretary Don Charlton, Whitty Thirnbeck, Jim Anderson Jr., Reg. Kingdon, and a Lakefield man.

Kawartha District Tennis League met and organized here last p.m. and enlarged itself to ten teams, a southern group of Port Hope, Cobourg, Quaker Oats, a Peterborough Club team and a Kawartha Club team; and a northern group to include Lakefield, Lindsay, two Peterborough Club teams and a Kawartha Club entry. It probably means the doing away of the old Central League, with the Peterborough teams withdrawing to make a strong compact Kawartha Loop, the largest in Eastern Ontario. The groups will play individually a home-and-home schedule, first two teams meeting and the two runners-up meeting to declare finalists for the league title. Matches will be men's singles, two men's doubles, a ladies' doubles and a mixed doubles.

Sport hash: There's some talk of Lindsay having two men's softball teams and Peterborough four and an interlocking schedule being played . . . . And we hear 'Beefy' Logan of Lindsay is figuring on putting a junior baseball team into the O.B.A.A. this summer . . . . Idle thought: If horses can think, what must one feel when it is being 'pulled' by a crooked jockey in a race? . . . . The popular Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield was re-elected prexy at the Kawartha District Tennis League meeting here last e'en . . . . Mustapha Pasha, the Turk Terrible, is rasslin' next week in Detroit— but that's their tough luck; we should worry . . . . A couple more frames, and alley-bowling will be all washed up till next winter . . . . You could pretty nearly sail a young steam around the bases at Riverside Park yet, and swim under water from home plate to the bench!

Pensioner Lays In Supply Of Tobacco

BRIDGETOWN, N.S., April 21 (CP)—Proud of the fact that he is the oldest person in the district to receive an old age pension, 100-year-old Captain William Henry Sabeans remarked: "I sent down town jes' soon as my cheque came an bought me a whole dollar's worth of tobacco. Guess p'raphs that'll last me a good long while, until I can get down town myself at any rate."

When the weather is fine the Captain walks at least a mile a day, although he sometimes has to walk very slowly. He was born on October 17, 1833 in Port Lorne. He was a youngster when he went to Saint John and enlisted as cabin-boy on a four-master sailing to the West Indies. Since then he has held all positions from cabin-boy to captain, even sailing on a few voyages as cook.

He deserted the sea after 25 years as master of various ships, building a house for himself, his wife and nine children at St. Croix Cove. Unsuited to the comparatively inactive life of a retired man, he sold his house and moved to a farm in Dalhousie, N.B., where he spent 10 prosperous years.

With the death of his wife and the departure of eight of his children the Captain left the farm and spent a short time in the United States with William, his youngest son. Later he moved here and there living with his other children. Only two of them are left now, a son in Rockland, Maine, and a daughter in Saint John. Although for 35 years he has received no word from young William, who became a prospector in South Africa, he still hopes to see him again.

TEN TEAMS IN RE-ORGANIZED TENNIS LEAGUE

Larger Kawartha Loop to Take Place of Disbanded Central Ontario League.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Important decisions regarding the future trend of tennis in this district were reached last evening at the annual meeting of the Kawartha Tennis Association here.

It was decided to more or less disband the Central Ontario Tennis League as far as this district was concerned and concentrate on building a stronger and more unified Kawartha League. Transportation difficulties in making trips to more distant places and difficulties regarding schedules caused this decision by the representatives who attended last night's enthusiastic gathering.

Dr. J. C. Smith, of Lakefield, was unanimously re-elected president and Walker Jones succeeds Walter Perks, who retired, as secretary-treasurer.

Ten teams will play in the reformed league, which was split into two groupsof five teams. In the southern group were placed, Cobourg, Port Hope, Kawartha Club's A team, Quaker Oats and Peterborough Tennis Club's A team. The northern group will consist of Lindsay, Lakefield, Kawartha Club's B team and Peterborough Club's B and C teams.

Matches will consist of five games instead of six as formerly, ladies' singles being dropped. Scores will be made as before, one point for victories in each game.

It was reported by delegates at the meeting that tennis throughout the district appears to be due for a great revival of interest this summer, all clubs stating that their members were most enthusiastic.

The Kawartha League will have representatives at the Central Ontario League's meeting to be held in Port Hope.

JUNIOR LEAGUE SURE.

COBOURG, April 21.—(Special to The Examiner).—The organization of a junior baseball league affiliated with the O.B.A.A. is now regarded here as a certainty. Port Hope, Cobourg and Oshawa have practically decided to enter teams and Whitby and Bowmanville may come in.

Passengers carried by the Transport Board lines of London now have the use of 3,156 railway cars, 5,321 omnibuses, 2,518 street cars, 495 motor coaches and 60 trolley buses.

He is still in very good health and pointing to the tattoos on his arms declares: "So long as I am able to see those anchors on each side of my wrists I shall continue to live."

TORONTO FIVE CAPTURES TITLE

St. Andrew's Quintet Defeats Woodstock By Round Score 87 to 52.

SECOND GAME 56-30.

TORONTO, April 21 (C.P.).—The team that almost got lost in the playdown shuffle was a victim today of the powerful young Toronto St. Andrew's playground basketball team along with the rest of the Saints' challengers. The Toronto quintette downed Woodstock, "the forgotten team," here last night 56-30 and won the Ontario juvenile title by a round score of 87-52. The first game was played in Woodstock last Saturday and was won by the playground team 31-22.

Led by Bill Stukus and Harry Goodman, the Saints never faltered, after the first two minutes, which saw Woodstock take a three-point lead, and had the game in hand throughout. They led 20-11 at the half-way mark.

Woodstock only brought seven players on the trip and by three-quarter time their ranks had been depleted to four by banishment through personal fouls. Coach Sniderman of the Saints benched one of his players to make the sides even at four all, and the crowd was treated to the most wide open and speediest session of a fast game. Four Saints' substitutes were sent out to get baskets and they outplayed their hard-fighting opponents in every department to pile up their margin. A spare forward Hy Surobesick, who had not scored a basket all season, was the hero of the session with four baskets.

DATES ARE NAMED FOR SENIOR GAMES

First Basketball Association Finals Will Be Held Late in April.

MONTREAL, April 21. (CP).—The Canadian American Basketball Association yesterday approved dates for the senior men's championship finals to be held at the Forum here next week.

Joe Hornstein, president of the Quebec Association, submitted April 26, 28 and 30 as dates for the first three games, with May 1 and 3, if necessary for the fourth and fifth. The Dominion secretary at Vancouver yesterday wired the dates were acceptable.

The series will see Nationales, conquerors of Ottawa Glebe Grads, Windsor, Ont., Assumption College, and Dalhousie University Tigers, Halifax, in turn, representing Eastern Canada as Montreal's first senior Dominion finalist since 1926.

Opposing Nationales will be either Vancouver Province or Winnipeg Robertson Memorials, now fighting for the Western Canadian title.

A Montreal team has never won the title, the closest being the M.A.A.A. squad which lost to Winnipeg Toilers here in 1926 by 57-42 in a two-game, total-point playoff. Nationales, however, including in its front line the two brilliant sons of Lester Patrick, Lynn and Murray, look like strong contenders. The Patrick boys played a large part in securing Dominion honors for the Victoria Blue Ribbons last season.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Mrs. Henry Grant Taylor, Warsaw, Ont.

Your handwriting distinguishes you as a person with a genuine taste for the unusual. You are most discriminating and desire perfection in all details. Above all else, you demand self expression. The establishing of a dramatic society would create an outlet for this ability. Your capital letters denote a passion for constructing works of an intricate nature both with your minds and your hands, and an ambition to make a success of your life. This, you can do, especially if you make a speciality of one line. Your disposition is mild and you are undemonstrative in your affections. Your brain is keen and susceptible to outward influences and happenings. Your power of mental observation penetrates much deeper and more logically than the ordinary. You are unobtrusive and carry yourself with the utmost propriety and well bred poise. There is a nervous tendency noted in the writing, which seems to have a bearing upon your health. Your birthsign is Cancer the Crab. You are ruled by the Moon. February and September are your best months. Monday is your lucky day.

Mrs. D. L. Mulhern, Indian River, Ont.

Your handwriting is expressive of a gracious personality. You are most pleasing and agreeable, courteous and benevolent. You are not too indulgent but sufficiently so to demonstrate your kindness of heart. Your perceptions are keen and understanding. You prefer quietness to noise and invigorating fun or exercise. You maintain your dignity on all occasions, but once in a while you are inarticulate when you really wish to express your sentiments. You dress with delicate refinement and taste. You seem quite set in your ways. You will not change your ideals for any reason in the world. You are nervous and become very easily excited. You sometimes have to resort to sarcasm, if your feelings are deeply hurt. You are quite sensitive and also rather too generous at times. The 't' bars as illustrated, depict a tendency to become argumentative.

Lillian V. Mills, 75 Park Hill Road, City.

Your writing shows youthful attributes. You are of course not yet fully mature in years, and so no doubt your writing will take on definite characteristics as you grow older. However, it does show unusual promise, and I want you to be encouraged to look for, and imbibe, every source of information pertaining to knowledge, that comes within your sphere. Make yourself think that you want to know things, then tell yourself why you desire to know them. Listen eagerly while others speak. Walk with an upright carriage, breathe deeply as you walk, and thereby gain poise and distinction. I can see that you have a very good imagination, and you can make this work for you, instead of letting it get the better of you. Now if you will follow what I have told you, you will find that your school lessons will be much more interesting to you than they have been. You see, you will want to learn, you will seek knowledge, and interest will develop with each new subject under discussion. Here's wishing all the good luck that you could wish for yourself.

Mr. Gilbert Moore, Warsaw, Ont.

Your writing does not do justice to your age. Does it? I think perhaps you have missed many opportunities to study, which have presented themselves to others, while you have worked with your hands at hard physical labor. Farming and mechanics are illustrated in your type of writing. You are too impulsive for your own good. Don't you often find that you do things and say things for which you are heartily sorry afterwards? You dot your 'I's' with rather more care than one would expect to note according to the rest of your writing, and this trait relieves the stress of other formations, for it illustrates gentleness and sympathy to those whom you love, or kindness to animals whichever the case may be in your instance. It shows that you can be most thoughtful to the sufferings of others, but yet too sensitive to talk about it. On the other hand, if you desire to make your wishes known, in regards to your work. You can do so in no uncertain manner.

CHILD SWALLOWS PENNY

TORONTO. — Four-year-old Evelyn Dalgish put a copper in her mouth for safe keeping and it took two physicians, with anaesthetic, an aesophaguscope and three nurses to take it away from her. The child swallowed her "penny" and an X-ray revealed it on a level with Evelyn's breast bone. She is recovering in hospital.

QUEEN CITY TRADITION PASSES WITH WRECKING OF OLD "EMPIRE"

One of Toronto's Last Burlesque Strongholds to Become Parking Station.

MANY WEIRD TALES.

TORONTO, April 21. (CP).—No more will actors skate on thin ice across the stage of the Empire Burlesque Theatre nor bald heads shine dimly through the tobacco smoke that used to cloud its atmosphere.

Through the empty tiers of the old house an auctioneer's hammer yesterday sounded a funeral note as buyers took away its furnishings and props. In a few days wreckers will start tearing it down to make room for a department store's parking station.

The Empire, situated on Temperance street, had been one of this town's traditions. It had existed from the days when burlesque troupes contained persons who could do smart dancing turns, sing a sentimental ballad, maybe, about "My Buddy" or the long lost and presumably misguided Saly whose whereabouts a decade or so ago none could determine.

Many stories were told about it most of them unverified. There was one about a young man who was alleged to have thrown a lighted cigar at a diaphanously clad dancing girl with unerring marksmanship and setting her dress afire.

Though most of the tales appear to have been myths the theatre remained almost throughout its existence a horror to reformers. Its last days, particularly, were unhappy. The last show that played it was observed by the police who subsequently arrested the producer, a show girl and a concessionaire. The girl was acquitted of a charge of appearing unclothed, but the manager was fined for permitting an indecent performance, and the concessionaire for selling obsence literature.

Yesterday the public took away chenille drapes, an old-fashioned double-keyboard typewriter, a military uniform, 15,000 German marks and other odds and ends.

Old timers may shed a tear at the passage of another landmark, but some say burlesque was about through in town anyway. Growing sophistication and the movies, they claim, would have beaten it eventually.

Of 974 articles listed in the Hungarian tariff, 424 have been classed as essential to the operation of local industries and therefore subject to restriction.

A Spring Restorative

To Enrich the Blood

Almost everybody needs a restorative
In the springtime.
Indoor winter life thins the blood.
The breathing of super-heated air
Fills the blood with poisonous impurities.
With spring comes pains and aches,
And tired, languid feelings.
You lack energy and vigor,
Have digestive troubles and do not sleep well.
You can depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food
To put iron in the blood,
To make the blood rich and red and restore the tired nerves.
The functions of the vital organs of the body
Are strengthened and quickened by this treatment,
Because it builds up new nerve force.
Prove this for yourself by using it.

ECKENER SURE AIRSHIP BEST AMONG FLIERS

Graf Zeppelin Commander Says His 50 Atlantic Crossings Give Evidence of Safety.

AT LONDON LUNCHEON

LONDON, April 21 (C.P.) — In spite of the wonderful increase in the efficiency of the aeroplane, Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, is convinced the airship type of flying craft is the best available method of aerial transport for long distances, especially over the ocean.

Dr. Eckener expressed this view here when he attended a luncheon in his honor of the British branch of the All People's Association. He is president of the German group of the organization.

Dr. Eckener told the gathering he had many problems to solve. One of them was whether the airship could become a dependable and safe means of transportation, and if so whether it could become a paying business. It was impossible for mechanical transportation to arrive at 100 per cent safety. It would only be obtained, he thought, "for our last journey to heaven," but he claimed as a result of his 50 Atlantic crossings that the airship gave the 99.9 percentage of safety some people wanted.

Dr. Eckener said he was working on plans for regular airship services to North and South America.

Captain F. E. Guest, M.P., who presided, suggested the extraordinarily satisfactory results Dr. Eckener had achieved with the Graf Zeppelin might enable the reopening the British Airship factories at Pulham, closed for some time.

PENNY BANK BRANCH QUESTION DEBATED FOR HAVELOCK SCHOOL

Inspector Outlines Subject — Third Teacher Needed Continuation Classes.

CONSIDER RAISING GRADE

HAVELOCK, April 20 (Examiner Correspondence) — The regular meeting of the village school board was held in the school room on Wednesday evening, April 18, with chairman, Bernard Smith presiding and all the members present.

Mr. P. Yuill, principal of the Public School brought two matters before the board. Concerning the supplementary reading in the primary classes he said suitable books might be purchased for twelve dollars. He expected to see some samples carred by the inspector. Mr. Yuill also drew the attention of the board to the fact that some kind of a couch or davenport was needed in the teachers' room. Just recently he pointed out two accidents had occurred in the school and the need for such a couch was clearly shown.

On motion of trustees Taylor and Roche the board authorized Mr. Yuill to purchase the books for supplementary reading as recommended by the inspector. The matter of procuring a day bed for the teachers' room for emergency cases was left in the hands of the property committee.

Miss Jessie K. Whitton, B.A., principal of the Continuation School reported everything well. Mr. Yuill when asked at this juncture concerning the number of beginners at Easter said that seventeen had been started and there was a possibility of more later. About twenty-five started at September.

Caretaker Mr. Robert Buchanan, reported the job on the school bell as not yet being completed. He also suggested that now the ball season was at hand an extra strip of wire might be put to good use on the south side of the playground. The old wire having given out.

Penny Bank

Mr. J. R. Littleproud, Ontario Penny Bank Inspector then addressed the board regarding the opening of a branch in the school. Having seen the account of the last meeting in The Examiner, he noticed the penny bank question had been discussed. He wrote the secretary, Mr. Fennell and arranged to present the matter.

"A bank is usually thought of as an institution for the purpose of buying and selling credit at a profit for its shareholders," he said. "Now that is just what a penny bank is not.' He went on to say the bank originated in the city of Toronto and was later extended to the rest of the province. It now embraces four hundred and seventy-five schools and holds one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in safekeeping for Ontario school children.

"Actual saving is the best teacher of thrift,' he said. The value of thrift is inestimable, especially have we found this to be true of late years. Each child has its own pass-book and deposits are made each Tuesday. The average class requires fifteen minutes to perform this operation. They not only learn the way in which to conduct business; but the true sense of value is instilled.

The students learn foresight and self-control. The operation of the system is simplicity itself. Two and one half per cent is the interest paid. The investments are so restricted by the government to only high grade securities that after the small yield and the small cost of operation is taken into account this is the highest rate payable. The school boards pay for their own stationery. The cost to put the system in operation for the first year would be $25 and twelve to fourteen dollars in the years that follow. Money spent in teaching thrift is money well spent, the government inspector said. Casual inspections are made at frequent intervals and a talk on saving is given at least once a year by the inspector.

Asked concerning the progress of the project, the speaker said until 1929 steady progress had been noted. A hundred thousand dollar increase had been made each year. Since then sharp declines had brought on by the depression showed eighty thousand, seventy thousand and one hundred thousand dollar decreases reported for the years 1931, 32, 33, respectively. Since June last year a sixty thousand dollar gain had been noted.

The speaker thought this a splendid indication that the general financial condition of the province was on the upward trend. The people in general realize the value of the project and the success is largely dependent on the attitude of the teachers.

Trustee H. W. Roche asked Mr. Yuill how the teaching staff would look on the matter. Mr. Yuill thought they would be quite agreeable to the installation. When asked concerning the installation in the continuation school, Mr. Littleproud said the project was more popular in American secondary schools than those in the province; but that it could be used. Most of the secondary teachers were inclined to think their curriculum was already too crowded.

The board thanked the speaker for his fine talk; but preferred to leave the matter over until September and in the meantime enquire as to the public's disposition. This was put in the form of a motion by trustees Copp and Roche. The matter will again come up at the August meeting.

Inspector Reports

The annual report on the continuation school by Inspector C. D. Randle was then read to the board. No grading was given for cloak rooms, the premises received third grading, the lavatories two, lighting two, ventilation three, boards, one. It was suggested sets of books be procured for Lower School literature and Middle School French. Pupils were tested in writing and spelling, writing lessons were recommended for form one to end of year. The staff is qualified, the discipline good, and attendance too large. The ratio of pupils is 78 as to two and 39 to one. The supplementary reading is up-to-date. The board was commended for making a daily paper available to the pupils. The janitor is very capable and the general ability and organization is of relatively high standard. The inspector regretted to report that general neatness was not stressed sufficiently. The physics class was backward and the equipment only fair. The principal, Miss Whitton was described as being sincere and conscientious and was supported by a good assistant in Mr. Small.

Third Teacher Needed

The overcrowded condition of both the public and continuation schools was then discussed at great length. It is quite apparent an expedient will have to be sought in the near future. Fifty pupils in one room calls for a third teacher and the lower school has now fifty-two. It was discovered that only about fifteen will leave the school at the end of the term and there may easily be thirty new comers to the continuation school.

Trustees Roche said if the school is overcrowded it will be detrimental to progress. It was noticed the school grounds were too small and lack of good reading material accounted for lack of interest in reading.

The teaching of music was then discussed. After some time Trustee McAdam enquired "How do they manage with those who can't learn music at all?" The very speedy reply by the chairman "The same as they do with those who can't spell,' lent a humorous touch to the otherwise comparatively quiet meeting.

On motion of Trustees Copp and Bullied the report was received and filed. McAdam and Taylor moved the accounts be passed.

On motion of Taylor and Spencer, Fred McAdam was engaged to remove the ashes from the school.

The secretary-treasurer, Ed. Fennell had an up-to-date statement of the finances for each member and reported the village had paid their share of the electric power bill when presented at the last meeting.

Mr. Fennell had been in conversation with the inspector of the continuation school who suggested raising the grading of the school to grade A from grade B. This would require an extra teacher. Two of the staff would have to be graduates. The grants would be increased, the cost of pupils attending the county high school would be done away with and would entail very little extra expenditure to teach upper school work. It would do away with village pupils journeying to Norwood and Peterborough for advanced education in a high school or collegiate.

Trustee Roche enquired as to whether or not a large enough number of the students would take the upper school work, to warrant the changing the status of the school. Mr. Roche felt the teachers at present had a big chore on their hands and something should be done. He suggested a committee be appointed to delve into the matter, and report findings. He said, "There is a possibility that the county council will not approve of the change. This was experienced a number of years ago when the same move was contemplated by the board. It was found after the board had gone to some expense."

Committee Named

It was moved by Trustess Ernest Spencer that the chairman, Mr. Smith name a committee to deal with the matter. Mr. Smith complied and named, following Trustees, H. W. Roche, Chas. Taylor, William Copp, E. Spencer and the secretary, Mr. Fennell.

Trustee Chas. Taylor as the board's representative to the Ontario Ratepayers' and Trustees' convention in Toronto reported most fully of his trip to the city.

Mr. Taylor praised the work being done in the public speaking classes in Ontario. He heard with much interest the contests. The resolutions framed were described by the delegate and the general trend seemed to be to get away from the teaching of languages in the schools and more stress being placed on the practical subjects. In some cases the urban and rural boards were divided on this question. Earlier departmental examinations and the abolishing of fees were the other highlights of the report.

On motion of Trustees Bullied and McAdam the report was received and on motion of McAdam and Copp the meeting adjourned.

Banquet Tendered Hon. L. Macaulay

John Lawson at 86 Walks Ten Miles to and From Havelock—Digs Postholes for Fence.

RECALLS POTASH DAYS

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — The Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Provincial Minister of Highways, was welcomed to Campbellford, when the local committee of the Liberal-Conservative Association tendered him a banquet in the St. Lawrence Hotel last evening, prior to his speaking engagement in the Regent Theatre. Reeve N. Alex. MacColl presided over the gathering.

The banquet was wholly informal, no address being given, with the exception of a brief welcome to the guest of honor by Reeve MacColl. A short program included two vocal solos by George Lucy and E. H. Lewis, and a reading by J. D. McEachern.

Other prominent guests present were F. J. McArthur, M.P.P., Northumberland; R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways; W. B. Horkins, K.C.; R. J. Willmott, A. J. Skeans, Cobourg; Mayor H. N. Carr, Campbellford; Reeve Wm. J. Duncan, Seymour Township; Robert Lowery, Honorary President, Northumberland Conservative Association; R. J. Allan, Association President; and ex-Warden C. H. Davidson.

TRENT RIVER, April 20. (Examiner Correspondence).—One of our oldest and most highly esteemed residents, Mr. John Lawson, who is enjoying the best of health in his 86th year, can put it all over the younger generation of the day. When interviewed by The Examiner one day this week he was digging post holes for a new fancy wire fence he is erecting in front of his residence on the 15th concession of Seymour township. Mr. Lawson, the week previous, made a trip to Havelock and return a distance of ten miles on foot and was none the wore for the experience.

Mr. Lawson can give many reminiscences of early pioneer life, coming to this township when it was all forest, and clearing land to build a log house. Grain at that time was threshed with a flail and as there were no fanning mills at that time the grain was placed where the wind could blow the chaff out. They made their own sugar, tapping 200 to 300 trees. One year Mr. Lawson in partnership with John I. Nixon, made 1,000 pounds of maple sugar which sold for 10c a pound. Huckleberries were plentiful in the vicinity and great quantities were preserved with maple sugar for winter use.

"Had to Have Cash or Potash"

When logging land the log heaps were burnt and the ashes put in leeches and run off into lye and boiled into potash in huge potash kettles holding 20 or 30 pails. Potash sold for $6 and $7 a hundred and there was a great demand for it for bleaching linen. Mr. Lawson said they used to it by boat to Healy Falls where David Clute kept store and they traded it out for goods.

Mr. Lawson tells many interesting stories of the early days and is ever interested in present day events, being able to read without glasses.

A host of friends wish him continued health in his declining years.

Mrs. John Free

Mrs. John Free, who has resided with her brother, John Lawson for the past four years, celebrated her 2nd birthday Friday May 20th, at the home of her son Raymond, Seymour west. Mrs. Free, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Lawson of the 15th concession, Seymour Township (on the farm now occupied by Raymond Thompson) was united in marriage to John Free of West Seymour whose death occurred in 1910. Mrs. Free remained on the farm in West Seymour until four years ago when she came to reside with her brother. There are six of a family—Isaac on the old homestead; Mrs. John McGreggor, of Campbellford; Mrs. Alfred Stephens of Seymour east; Mrs. Thomas Kerr of Campbellford; Raymond of West Seymour and Captain George H. Free of Campbellford. Mrs. Free has thirty grandchildren. Her many friends wish her many happy returns of her birthday

MISSING PILOT SAFE IN ARCTIC

Mat Berry and Hudson Bay Official Found by Rescue Plane.

TOURING TRADING POSTS.

EDMONTON, April 21 —(C P)—Pilot Matt Berry, missing for two weeks in the Arctic, was reported safe to-day and en route by aeroplane from Coppermine, N.W.T., to Edmonton. Pilot Stanley McMillan was flying with him in another plane. Both are of Mackenzie Air Services.

Meagre word reaching the company offices here gave no details, beyond the bare fact Berry was safe.

The message said McMillan and Berry returned to Coppermine, in Coronation Gulf, on the Arctic Ocean, Thursday, and that they took off at dawn to-day on the long hop over the barren lands to Edmonton 1,600 miles away.

Berry had been unreported since he hopped off from Coppermine to Cambridge Bay, outpost on Victoria Island, 300 miles to the east. Slight fears were held for his safety. Bad flying weather, it was believed, had delayed completion of his trip.

Along with Berry was William Gibson, Superintendent of the Western Arctic Division of the Hudson's Bay Company. He had been on an inspection tour of company trading posts.

With the Spring break-up near, McMillan and Berry will hurry through to Edmonton, stopping only to re-fuel at posts along their route. It is considered likely they will land at either Fort Chipewyan or Willow Lawe, near McMurray, to change their machines from skiis to wheels, and will hop off immediately for Edmonton.

MIDDLE COURSE RECOVERY PLAN ROOSEVELT AIM

Hull Claims Rehabilitation Program Will Preserve Fundamentals of Popular Gov't.

AT PRESS LUNCHEON.

Most Serious Threats to Peace Be in Nations Where Newspapers Are Suppressed.

NEW YORK, April 23. — (AP) — Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, today named a middle-course recovery policy of 'sound Liberalism' as the very essence of the dew deal.'

Standing before United States publishers and others gathered at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press, Hull tossed aside talk of dictatorship. The Roosevelt "rehabilitation" program, he said, would preserve "all the fundamentals of popular government."

"It is never wise," said Hull, "especially in a time of crisis, to hearken too much to the extreme reactionary or the extreme radical.

"We enthroned dictators. We made no secret trades with private self-interest groups — we merely drew together the different and scattered groups of democracy into a common effort, openly conceived, openly discussed, open chosen."

The Secretary of State expressed confidence that what he called Mr. Roosevelt's middle course between extremes would result in "recovery, restoration and rehabilitation which would embrace the rights and liberties of the individual and the progressive improvement of the social and material condition of the masses."

In discussing matters of the press, Hull declared the service given by a free press was of "incalculable value."

The gathering and dissemination of news along 'right lines,' he added constituted a "powerful influence for international understanding, friendship and peace."

Freedom of Press

"The most serious threats against peace to-day," he said, "are in those parts of the world where the press is controlled by government officials who have power either to declare war or to force war."

Most of the diplomatic chieftain's address centered upon the Roosevelt's administrations aims and hopes, and the pitfalls it hoped to avoid.

Among the recovery objectives named by him were preservation of the national credit, balancing of the budget as early as is practicable, avoidance of schemes for inflation, permanent exchange stabilization and monetary arrangements, resoration of American foreign trade, relief of unemployment and general improvement in working conditions and wages, and "necessary" governmental regulation for the general improvement of business, commerce and agriculture.

The Roosevelt recovery program was deliberately designed, Hull explained, to meet two urgent objectives—the immediate crisis this nation faced at the moment, and durable prosperity in the future.

Americans want recovery based on sound policies and honest methods, Hull contended and not by such artificial measures as brought the 1926 boom and the "inevitable disaster of 1929" in its wake.

75 FOOT BRIDGE NEAR HAULTAIN

Structure Over Eels Creek on New Burleigh-Bancroft Road.

$9,000 ESTIMATED COST.

Construction of a new steel bridge over Eels Creek a short distance below Hautain has been begun by the Public Works Department of the province. It is situated on a new section of the Burleigh to Apsley road, a diversion that was planned to eliminate a dangerous slope approaching the old bridge in that vicinity.

The new structure includes a seventy-five foot span with concrete abutments and floor. It is twenty-four feet wide, and has been designed to accommodate the traffic which is expected to develop over this road on the completion of the present extensive development project.

T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., Havelock told The Examiner today that the estimated cost of the work is $9,000. He said that the new bridge is about two hundred yards below the old one.

Girl Is Stricken With Leucocythaemia Medical Science Unable To Check Disease

A medical practitioner here today confirmed reports that a young woman residing in a rural district adjacent to the city is stricken with leucocythaemia.

Prior to the young woman's removal back to her home, every effort known to medical science was made in an effort to check the disease, and it is understood by The Examiner that the patient underwent several blood transfusions.

Leucocythaemia,a disease characterized by an excess of white corpuscles in the blood is a disease which is regarded as incurable, and it is also a malady that has received much recent publicity in the press.

Barred by professional ethics from entering into a discussion of this specific case, the doctor was not unwilling to talk of the disease in general terms.

While agreeing that the disease is comparatively rare, the medical man stated that several deaths have occurred from leucocythaemia in Peterborough and district, as well as in other places. The disease had recently come into the spotlight, he said because of the "bunk" emanating from the United States which recently appeared in the press. Such publicity, he felt, was in bad taste and was not favoured by the Canadian medical profession.

Leucocythaemia, he added, is not a contagious disease.

SECOND YPRES 19 YEARS AGO

April 23 Must Bring Crowded Memories to Survivors.

BATTLE RECALLED.

Nineteen years ago this morning Peterborough's first detachment of volunteers in the Canadian Expeditionary Force was decimated in the Second Battle of Ypres, the engagement in which the Germans first employed poison gas as an agency and weapon of war.

The enemy's surprise attack exposed the French left as colonial and regular troops broke before the wave of lethal vapor, leaving a wide gap in the line which threatened a serious reverse to the Allies in that sector. It was into that emergency the Canadians were thrust to check the German advance. They went up on the night of April 22, and towards dawn on the following morning, St. George's Day, their counter attack halted the German advance with a valor and sacrifice that won the following recognition in the brief note cabled from the War Office under the date of Saturday, April 24: "The Canadians had many casualties, but their gallantry and determination undoubtedly saved the situation. Their conduct has been magnificent throughout."

Some of the survivors of that morning are: Col. C. H. Ackerman, who was a lieutentant of the Second Battalion; Ernie Mesley, Theodore (Barney) Quinn, Bruce Clegg, Tom Griffin, Ernie Nicholls, John Allen, Lansdowne street; Heber Rogers, who was taken prisoner; Bruce Mills, William Simmons, Colonel Winterbottom of the 57th Rangers. Other Peterborough men who had enlisted elsewhere were Harvey Staunton and Gordon Fallon.

No. 1 Company of the 2nd was led by Major George W. Bennett, and it was in this section that most of the local casualties were suffered. About twenty of its strength of 120 men answered the roll-call when the battalion was withdrawn. The news of the battle was briefly hinted on April 24, in a despatch which said that the Canadians had borne the brunt of the recent fighting, were outnumbered and forced to give way. After an anxious week-end information from Ottawa suggested the casualty lists that were to follow from day to day in a headline: "Canada must now steel itself for a heavy casualty list."

On Wednesday, April 28th, the deaths of Major George Bennett of Peterborough and Lieut. W. J. Doxsee of Campbellford were announced, but it was not until May 10th that the major list of killed and injured was cabled. The dead included Sergt. Major Fred Howarth, Sergt. Fred Stevens, Privates Bill Gibson, O. D. (Scoop) Taylor, George Minorgan, E. B. Boswell, Sergt. A. F. Field, Sergt. G. V. (Dick) Boone, and others who were subsequently reported.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY

OTTAWA, April 23 (CP)—To-day, St. George's Day, that of the patron saint of Scouting, was made the occasion of announcement by the Governor-General, Chief Scout for Canada, of the award of the Silver Wolf, Scoutings' highest honorary decoration, to two prominent Canadian Scout leaders, S. J. Latta of Regina and A. W. E. Van Someren of Hamilton, Ont. The award was made "for long and valuable service to the boyhood of Canada."

Mrs. Sarah Guy, aged 103, of Holloway, is believed to be England's oldest living woman.

Lad, 15, Arrested as Firebug

TORONTO, April 23 (C.P.).—A 15-year-old boy was arrested by Ontario Provincial Police near here to-day and charged with setting fire to the Aylmer Inn last April 16. The blaze destroyed the inn with the loss of three lives

The fire started in a grocery store in one corner of the brick hotel building, swept up to the third storey where it trapped Mrs. Grace Wetherall and her two young daughters. All were found burned in the charred ruins when the blaze subsided.

The 15-year-old suspect will be taken to Aylmer to-morrow to face an arson charge. Police said a more serious charge may be laid.

RAIN, SNOW, DUST SWEEP PRAIRIES

Warm Weather Prevails on Coast Regions and Across Alberta.

SEEDING SLOW.

WINNIPEG, April 23 (CP).—Rain and snow in Manitoba, dust storms in Saskatchewan and high winds in Alberta made a varied weather picture for Western Canada during the week-end. On the Pacific coast summer warmth prevailed.

Rain fell during the early part of Sunday in Winnipeg and elsewhere in Manitoba, turning to soft snow at midnight.

Dust storms occurred in both Northern and Southern Saskatchewan, with Saskatoon describing it as the worst storm of the year. The only point to report rain in Satkatchewan was Yorkton, near the Manitoba boundary.

Warm weather prevailed throughout Alberta. The wind was only of moderate intensity in the north, Edmonton reported, but it was stronger in the southern and central regions.

Saskatchewan's dust storms, as in the four which preceded them in recent weeks, were not believed to have caused any damage as seeding has not progressed very far. The earlier storm damage was practically nill.

Woman Shot In Raid On Winnipeg Hotel

WINNIPEG, Apri 23. — (CP)— A woman received a bullet wound in the throat and a man suffered a broken foot and bitten fingers as the result of a desperate struggle with three armed masked bandits who held up the Transit Hotel St. Bonifance, today and escaped without obtaining any booty. One of the bandits is believed to have been wounded in the back.

Mrs. Florence McGirr, wife of the proprietor, was shot in the throat when the robbers entered her room, but her condition is not serious. Hearing the shot, Alfred Beatty, 21, resident of the hotel, rushed to her rescue and gave battle to the thugs, wresting a gun away from one of them. He fired six shots as the men were leaving, and evidently wounded one.

Two other residents of the hotel were bound and gagged downstairs and were guarded by one of the trio while the other two went upstairs in search of the proprietor from whom they evidently intended to get the combination of the safe.

SCHOOL BOARD BRANT RESERVE BEEN ABOLISHED

Six Nation Body Been Functioning Since Authorized by Dominion in 1906.

ONLY ONE IN CANADA.

May Mean End to Squabble With Girl Over Right to Teach There.

OTTAWA, April 23. (CP).— The school board on the Six Nations Reserve near Brantford has been abolished after functioning since 1906, according to an order-in-council passed by the Dominion Government. This board was the only one operating on any of the Indian reserves, and, comprising five trustees, it supervised the 11 day schools of the Six Nations.

From 1906 to 1928 the greater part of the expenditures in connection with school matters on the Reserve had been taken care of by the board; but since that year all monies have had to be found from the Dominion treasury. The order-in-council rescinds one passed 28 years ago creating the board, and abolishes that body altogether. The educational affairs of the Six Nations are thus placed on the same basis as those on other Reserves.

Teaching Fracas

For over seven months Miss Sylvia Jamieson has been teaching at one of the schools on the Reservation though she was officially dismissed last October.

Day After day Miss Jamieson has contended with Daniel Green for teaching supremacy of the school. She has, on occasions, been removed from the school by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, but has always returned.

A case of assault brought against her by Daniel Green in the county police court here some time ago was dismissed.

At the time she was advised by Magistrate Blake not to return to the school, but shortly afterwards again returned and has been teaching ever since. Mr. Green, the official teacher being in the room, but doing little or no teaching.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID DR. STARR

Varsity Students, Citizens Every Walk of Life Attend Noted Surgeon's Funeral.

SIMPLE SERVICE.

TORONTO, April 23 (C.P.). — Classes at the University of Toronto were suspended to-day as students joined the Faculty and hundreds of citizens from every walk of life in paying last tribute to Dr. F. N. G. Starr, noted Canadian surgeon, who died suddenly at his home Saturday morning.

Following a private service at Eaton Memorial Church, a general service was opened in Convocation Hall, where crowds thronged the main floor and two tiers of galleries to pay tribute to the man who had been awarded almost every recognition granted by Canadian and United States medical institutions.

There were no hymns at the hall and Rev. Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University, led the prayers, with Chancellor E. W. Wallace of Victoria University reading the lessons from the Scriptures.

Honorary pall-bearers included Sir Joseph Flavelle, Premier George S. Henry of Ontario, Dr. T. C. Routley, secretary of the Canadian Medical Association; Dr. J. G. Fitzgerald, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine; Dr. E. A. Archibald, representing McGill University, with Lieut.-Governor Herbert A. Bruce, representing certain Ontario hospitals.

Interment was made at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Your Evening Smile

AN APPLE A DAY

When the doctor arrived he found the patient in tears. "Cheer up, my good man," he said, "you'll pull through all right."

"It isn't that, doctor," groaned the patient, "but just think of the money I've spent buying apples to keep you away."

Family Tragedy

NORFOLK, Conn., April 23 (C.P.). — Two children and their father were believed to have perished to-day in a fire which police were told had been set by the man after a family quarrel.

Discovery of human bones in the ruins caused police to express the conviction that Jacob Wirsula, 48, and his two children died in the blaze that destroyed their North Norfolk home, near Doolittle Lake.

The children were Robert, nine, and Helen, 10.

BRITAIN ASKS C L ARIFICATION CHINA QUESTION

Would Know Position After Japan's Recent Ultimatum on Financial Aid.

QUERIES TOKYO.

Simon Claims England Sent No Notice of Change in Far East Policy.

LONDON, April 23. —(AP)— Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today the government has communicated with Japan seeking a clarification of the position of the British government in connection with financial assistance to China.

The communication, he said, was brought about by certain references made by the Japanese foreign minister in its recent informal verbal statement on the subject of China.

Sir John prefaced his announcement by stating that the British government had received no notice from the Japanese government of any intention to re-define its Far Eastern policy or to disapprove of foreign loans or other foreign assistance to China.

Word From Envoy

He said, however, he had received from the British ambassador to Tokyo the text of what was described as an informal verbal statement by a Japanese spokesman.

This appeared to be, he said, "inspired by the apprehension of certain dangers to the peace and good relations between China and Japan or the integrity of China which might follow from certain actions by other powers and China."

None of these dangers, said Sir John, was to be apprehended from any policy of the British government which, in fact, aimed at avoiding them.

"On the other hand," he said, "the general character of the statement and certain details in it, such as the reference to objections to financial assistance to China, has made me think it is necessary to communicate with the Japanese government with the object of clarifying the position of his majesty's government."

Small Child Saves Family In Toronto

TORONTO, April 23 (CP).—Five-months-old Walter Wolak tumbled out of bed and saved three persons from probable asphyxiation in their gas-filled home. The baby's father and mother are in hospital to-day, recovering from gas poisoning.

John Stahurski, who rents the home, heard a thump on the floor early to-day and went into the Wolak room to investigate. He found the baby on the floor, the room filled with gas fumes and the mother and father unconscious.

A hurried call to the police brought doctors and an ambulance, and the family was hustled off to hospital, where it was said all members would recover.

Bakeshop Inspection Asked Acting M.O.H.

In a communication which was received at the adjourned meeting of the local Board of Health this morning, held under chairmanship of Alderman Walter Stocker, the Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture promised the Board he would place the request for an enquiry into the price of milk in Peterborough before the Milk Control Board.

On motion of Mayor Roland Denne seconded by Alderman Malcolm McIntyre the chairman of the Board was requested to ask the acting Medical Officer of Health to inspect the bakeshops in the city and to report back to the Board.

TWO DEAD MEN ARE LEFT BEHIND AS FRACAS ENDS

Outlaw, 6 Pals Desert 3 Girls in Commandeered Inn and Take to Bush.

INNOCENT TOURIST SHOT.

Search Cost $1,500,000 to Date With Toll of 12, Five Being Peace Officials.

MERCER, Wis., April 23. (C.P.). — Using machine guns and rifles, John Dillinger and six companions shot their way out of an ambush early to-day, leaving two dead.

A veritable army of Federal and State officers was unable to hold the desperado, who escaped from the Crown Point, Ind., Jail with a wooden pistol. The officers accidentally shot one resident to death. In a later tear gas raid on the gang hideout, they captured three girls, who said they had been at the place since last Wednesday.

arrest the gang were W. Carter Baum, Federal agent from Chicago, Eugene Boisoneau, 35, CCC worker of Mellon ,and an unidentified man.

The wounded were John Morris, 59, a CCC camp cook, John Hoffman, 38, of Mercer, J. C. Newman, Federal agent, Carl C. Christensen, 42, Deputy of Spider Lake.

The murderous Indians outlaw and his party arrived at Bohemia camp Friday, seized the wooden resort by force, mounted a machine gun on the roof and declared their intention of fighting off any attempt to take them. They made good their threat when 28 Federal agents, aided by sheriffs and deputies attacked the place during the night.

Tear gas was used, but it served only to drive the fast firing thugs from the building into the forested country. They fired viciously as they ran to cover, and apparently escaped uninjured.

The latest report to the police was that they headed south in two cars, but it was thought they likely would double back on their tarcks as soon as the pursuit eased.

Mistake Costs Life, Foils Raid.

The mistaking of Eugene Boisoneau and his mates for members of the Dillinger gang caused the Federal agents' trap to fail, they believed.

Boisoneau, John Hoffman and John Morris stopped at the little Bohemia resort late Sunday night. They entered their car, and turned it around on the resort driveway, when the Federal posse opened fire, killing Boisoneau.

The shots, it was believed, warned Dillinger, who fled out a rear door.

Three of them turned up in a few minutes at Mitchell's resort, a mile down the road. They commandeered a car and drove away.

Another member of the gang, described as being "too small to be Dillinger," showed up at Turner's resort, a few hundred yards from Little Bohemia.

Confronted by the Federal agents, he killed Baum, seriously wounded Constable Christensen, and escaped, apparently in the car the three were using to pursue him.

Alvin Turner, a witness, said the man, armed with a machine gun, had demanded a car. Almost immediately the three Federal men drew up outside.

"The bandit yelled 'Who's that?'" Turner said.

"Then he ran outside and opened fire with the machine gun."

Hoffman, cut by flying glass, and wounded by a bullet, said he feared the car was being held up and abandoned the machine, fleeing into a woods nearby, but was captured by the agents. Both he and Morris were taken to a hospital at Ironwood, Mich. Hoffman said he and his friends had stopped at the little Bohemia resort for some beer and were not aware that the agents were there.

Two hundred applications for garden plots have been received by the special committee of the Central Relief Board.

A. B. Cunningham, chairman of the special committee, said that these applicants would all be accommodated with lots. PARITY IN AIR BRITISH DEMAND

MacDonald Assures Questioner Gov't Has No Intention of Changing Mind.

FORCE MUST EQUAL BEST.

(By George Hambleton—C.P. Staff Writer).

LONDON, April 23 (C.P.). — Prime Minister Ramsay Macdonald made it plain in the House of Commons this afternoon that Britain still demands parity in the air.

He was asked by a Conservative back-bencher whether he was prepared to give the assurance that unless the leading foreign powers make substantial reductions in their air strength before the Commons rises for the summer, Britain would immediately build up to parity.

"The Lord President of the Council," said Prime Minister Macdonald, referring to Stanley Baldwin, "has stated the determination of the Government quite specifically." He referred to Mr. Baldwin's recent declaration that if disarmament efforts should fail, Great Britain will make sure that her air force is not inferior to that of any other country which might endanger her shores.

"The Blackshirt movement comes to combat British decadence into a policy of surrender. For such a purpose, and led by flame of inspiration, this movement arises from the spirit of England, that England may live in greatness and glory."

Lending the colorful touch 3,000 Sir Oswald's Blackshirted followers were on duty at the rally.

BLAST IN MINE BRINGS DEATH TO 146 WORKERS

Explosion So Terrific Sarajevo Peasants Believed it to be Earthquake.

60 BODIES RECOVERED.

Hope of Finding Rest Faded as Water Wells Up in Fatal Pit.

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia, April 23 (AP).—Rescue workers abandoned all hope to-day of finding any survivors in the depths of the blast-wrecked Kakanj coal mines.

Officials included in a death estimate of 146 the 86 men still unaccounted for. Sixty bodies had been recovered. Fifteen miners escaped or were rescued.

It had been hoped some of the entombed men might be found in distant galleries, but when the bodies recovered last night were found to be charred and mutilated, rescuesuads conceded the other miners trapped likewise died almost instantly.

Even the hope of recovering the remaining bodies faded as water welled up in the pit. Gas which overcame a number of diggers added to the hazards of rescue work.

Many of those who had sought to reach the victims turned their efforts to building caskets.

At Belgrade, an official investigation commission laid the explosion to "unusual quantities of methane gas."

So terrific was the explosion Saturday that peasants thought it was an earthquake.

"There was a thunderous roar, one peasant, ploughing nearby at the time, related. "The earth heaved. I thought it was an earthquake. Then great sheets of flame and dense columns of smoke poured out of the pit."

LABOR ENTERS FRAY.

C.C.F. Launches Four Candidates—Contest Warms Up.

TORONTO, April 23 (C. P.). — Left wing Labor and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation to-day paraded into the Ontario general election picture prepared to fly their banners against those of the old line parties.

During a week-end packed with speeches, nominating conventions, preparations for conventions, and Liberal Party's announcement of its beer and wine stand, the C.C.F. launched four candidates into the fray in the Hamilton district. At London the Labor Conference, severed from the C.C.F. at the Ontario reorganization its intention of fighting for a seat.

In an official statement last night Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, said his party was determined the liquor issue, which he described as one of minor importance, should not be made an election issue. He emphasized his party would retain the local option clause in the Act.

(Amendment to the Ontario Liquor Control Act passed at the last session of the Legislature provides for sale of beer in beverage rooms of hotels and sale of wine with restaurant meals.)

The statement said the Liberal Party regards its responsibility to the people of Ontario such that it was determined to hold the administration of Premier George S. Henry to a "defence of its record of increased debt and taxation; dissipation of our natural resources and mismanagement of Hydro."

It asked "if the Government of Ontario believes in its own mea-

ICE JAM BREAKS AS PASSENGERS CROSSING BRIDGE

Catastrophe Narrowly Averted in Matopedia Valley, Nova Scotia.

MATTER OF MINUTES.

Passengers and Mails Were Taken Across Bridge on Flat Cars.

HALIFAX, April 23.—(CP)—Terrifying experiences in the flooded area of Matapedia Valley, where the Canadian National Railways has been submerged for several days, were described by passengers arriving here today.

Catastrophe was averted, they said, by quick action of railways officials in moving their trains when the great ice jam broke and started an avalanche Saturday.

There was only a matter of minutes to work after the roaring flood of water and ice was seen approaching the improvised bridge of 32 flat cars which bridged the area over which passengers and mails were being conveyed.

Memory Remain Long

To John Alec MacGregor of Westville, N.S., who all but felt the force of the surging waters as they raced past him carrying great cakes of ice, "memory of the experience will live long."

It was about nine o'clock in the morning when the train from Monreal on which he was a passenger with many more Nova Scotians arrived at the end of the bridge gulf. The other train from Halifax was at the other side. Up the river the ice jam looked solid and safe, he said, and passengers were being transferred across the flat cars. About 12 canoes were being used to get the mail, 600 bags, across.

Ice Jam Broke

"Suddenly the great jam broke," said Mr. MacGregor. "Signals were hurriedly given by railway officials on hand and in a few seconds train crews already waiting for such an emergency were ready to start the train back away from the approaching avalanche."

Passengers ran for the train and Mr. MacGregor was the last man on the bridge. The train was moving as he raced off the end, and was hauled over the railing of the car just as the flood swept by behind the train.

Even as the train sped to safety several cars were almost washed over by the force of the avalanche.

Passengers on the train included Senator Hance J. Logan and Mrs. Logan of Amherst and Alex MacGregor, former Member of Parliament. They estimated that about 400 people had seen the great ice jam break.

BE NO LESSENING LIQUOR CONTROL HENRY PLEDGES

Tells Barrie Audience Local Option Communities' Opinions to be Respected.

NO "CHANGE OF FRONT."

Mayor J. F. Craig Selected Conservative Candidate for Liberal Centre.

BARRIE, Ont., April 23.—(CP)—Extension of the sale of beer and wine in Ontario will not mean any lessening in governmet control of distribution, Premier George S. Henry pledged himself to see that handling of liquor would remain as at the present when he addressed the Centre Simcoe Conservative convention Saturday.

As long as he was head of the government, Premier Henry emphasized, distribution of liquor would be directly under control of the government-appointed Liquor Control Board.

Premier Henry said that after the Ontario Temperance Act had been in force 10 years it was deemed necessary to have a change. The Conservative party appeared in favor of government control and in the 1926 election it was endorsed on the Liquor Control Act platform. In that election, Premier Henry said, the Conservatives promised if the Act proved at any time to require a change the government would do so.

Premier Henry said conditions had changed, particularly, in the United States where prohibition had been dropped. His government then decided to introduce "modifications of the law so the Liquor Control Board could alter the regulations governing the sale of beer and wine."

"It passed the House subject to proclamation," he continued, "the government take the responsibility of putting it into force depending on the result of a general election."

Change of Law.

After explaining the change was not put into force immediately because it was a change of the law, the Premier declared the Liberal-Conservative Party did not consider a referendum suitable on the question of extension in beer and wine sales.

The Government Leader declared control of distribution would be exercised through Liquor Control Board as definitely as it had been during the last few years. The Government will respect the opinion of a local option community and no attempt will be made to cause alterations in the sale of beer and wine in communities which opposed such a step.

There had been a tendency during the last few years, he continued on the part of Ontario citizens to drink strong liquor because it could be carried more easily, but now there had appeared a demand for freer beer distribution.

It was not a case of a "change of front" on the Government's part, but it had been realized the "people of the province demanded a change."

Main Aim—Aid For Farmer.

Premier Henry said his government had concentrated on aiding the farmer during its regime. Advances totalling $3,000 each to 17,000 farmers had been made and $10,000,000 had been expended in construction of rural Hydro lines.

The tourist traffic was a boon to Ontario, he said, and he considered worth while the investment of $185,000,000 to $190,000,000 in roads.

A total of $600,000,000 had been invested to advantage by the government during the last four years, most of this had gone to Hydro and roads. Expenditures had been made at the people's behest and a great amount had gone to education to build up a system of which Ontario citizens could justly be proud.

The convention selected Mayor John Franklin Craig as Conservative candidate in the coming elections for Centre Simcoe. He was named on a third ballot after Lieut-Col. Dr. John Norris Nettleton, of Penetanguishene. Alderman H. G. Robertson of Barrie and Major William M. Thompson of Penetanguishene, had been defeated.

BUDGET DEBATE OPENS IN HOUSE

Ralston Former Minister of Defence to Express Official Liberal Views.

MARKET BILL DROPPED.

OTTAWA, April 23 (C.P.).—Debate on the budget, one of the two fixed major debates of the Parliamentary session, begin to-day. The official Liberal party view of the financial presentation made last week by Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, will come to-day from Hon. J. L. Ralston, former Minister of National Defence.

Opening of the budget debate will side-track for the time being the oratorical battle over the Government's marketing bill in which the Liberals have assumed the role of champions of individual and civic liberties against what they regard as a Government plan to impose a bureaucratic control over the production and marketing of natural products.

A day will be fixed, possibly this week, for a debate on the bill to legalize sweepstakes for hospital purposes in the House of Commons.

The measure was recently passed by the Senate for the second year in succession and proponents of lotteries will make a new attempt to get it through the House of Commons which turned it down last year.

As usual, the budget debate is likely to be lengthy and pending its completion and also disposal of the marketing bill, the Givernment is unlikely to introduce much further legislation although it still has an imposing series of measures it hopes to get through this session.

POLICE MISTAKE

C. Newman, another agent, and Carl C. Christensen, 42, a constable of Spider Lake were wounded. Christensen's wounds are serious. Both he and Newman were taken to a hospital at Ironwood.

For days they had been waiting at Spider Lake Lodge in expectation that Dillinger might seek the spot as a hiding place in his game of hide and go-seek with the law. Last night they received a tip that a car, parked, without light, was at the lodge, and as they stepped up to investigate, a man leaped out and began shooting.

Federal Agent Baum died instantly. Because of their wounds neither Constable Christensen nor Agent Newman were able to return the fire, and the man, who was not identified, escaped. It could not be learned whether the gunman was alone, or whether he had help.

Until last night, 12 persons, including five peace officers, were killed either in the search for Dillinger or at the hands of his companions in their crime excursions.

Following his sensational "wooden pistol" escape from the Crown Point jail, Dillinger had been "seen" in a score of places at the same time.

However, on March 31, he shot his way out of a police trap at St. Paul, Minn., using a machine gun. Eugene Green and a woman companion escaped with him, but Green was shot down by Government agents three days later, and died April 11. Later a Warsaw, Ind., policeman identified two men who raided the police station there, taking four bullet-proof vests and two revolvers as Dillinger and Homer Van Meter.

Pals Re-united.

After several months' supposed separation, Dillinger and Hamilton were reported definitely re-united at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. Police said Hamilton's sister, Mrs. Isaac Steve, told them. She said Saturday Dillinger, Hamilton and a woman companion fled in her car three days before with their arsenal of machine-guns, rifles, ammunition and bullet-proof vests.

In their search for the desperado, authorities have spent roughly three times the $500,000 loot which Dillinger is reported to have amassed in the past year.

Gas

(Written in memory of those brave men of the British Empire and our noble sons of Canada who fought and fell around Passchendale, April 22, 1915).

From Passchendale, the warning ran,
Along the trench to every man:
Prepare to hold positions fast,
The "Jerries" have attacked with gas;
The ridge once more they've tried to claim,
We're holding them with might and main;
Though in our line they's made a gash,
All unprepared, we were, for gas.
Reserves rushed up, and hurried in;
Guns, lumbers, men; Oh, what a din;
Shells roared and burst as cannon flash
To stem the "Bosche" behind the gas;
'Twas then the "tide" began to turn;
Canadians had them on the run;
With bombs, and bayonets fixed they dash,
Straight through that cloud of deadly gas.
Some say, "That was a glorious day,"
Perhaps: For those who far away;
Aspending profiteering cash,
But not for those who fought the gas;
From Ypres, north to Dunkirk;
The deadly poison did its work.
Mules, horses, men had breathed their last;
That April morn, in German gas.
The battle raged the whole week through,
Across the lines our airmen flew;
Their signals to the batteries pass
To shell the source, from whence came gas;
The wind veered round the other way;
As if the enemy to repay
And teach him not to be so rash,
When liberating poisoned gas.
Now this is only half the tale;
Unless you've heard that mournful wail
Of mothers, wives, whose hopes were crashed;
Their dear ones killed, with dreadful gas.
God, give them power to heal the "smart."
Should words like mine e're touch their heart,
And comfort those unto the last;
While lingering on, still fight the gas.
Nineteen years have passed away,
Since we beheld that dreadful day,
Through horrors worse than Hell we passed
The day, when Passchendale was gassed.
Yet every year my thoughts are borne
Along with those who weep and mourn,
I picture, as through mud we splash,
I hear that warning shout: "It's Gas."

Softball Annual Meeting On Friday

CAMPBELLFORD, April 23 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Softball players and fans will swing into action for the 1934 season on Friday evening, April 27, when the annual meeting of the Campbellford Softball Association will be held in the Public Library. Election of officers, entries of teams, and general business will be transacted at this gathering.

Last season a four-team league was run, with a double schedule, and a very successful sports year was featured. However, this season there is some talk that another one or two teams may be in the running, which would necessitate some re-arrangement both of schedule and players.

PAARL, South Africa.—(CP). — Hennie Van Niekerk, farmer, narrowly escaped death while pumping spirits into a wine tank when he struck a match, the spirit catching fire and the tank's cement roof being blown to pieces. He escaped with a scorching.

LONDON (CP)—Potatoes don't fatten, they only nourish, is the claim of the Potato Trades organization here, campaigning for more eating of the starchy tubers.

WILL ENFORCE HENRY SCHEME

sure, despite the repeated statements of Premier Henry that he would never introduce such legislation, why is beer being used as election bait?"

It asked also why the measure would not be put into effect until after the election, and added: "I deprecate to the fullest extent such attempted bribery of the electors by an issue of minor importance."

The preamble said the Liberal Party had decided at a convention in 1930 that problems relating to distribution of liquor should not be made partisan political issues. The decision, it said, was reached after endorsement of the Liquor Control Act in two elections.

C.C.F. Name Candidates

Controller Sam Lawrence of Hamilton will make a C.C.F. bid in East Hamilton and Robert Roatt will contest Centre Hamilton for same party. Other C.C.F. entrants are Mrs. Barclay Evans in North Wentworth-Hamilton and Alderman John Mitchell in South Wentworth.

The Labor Conference's decision to enter the ballot struggle came at a meeting in London where delegates attacked the C.C.F. Toronto meeting as "farce" and a "vote catching organization."

The conference further intimated Communists might be admitted to membership when Chairman Dr. Levis Jessel stated when the constitution was framed "it is likely provision will be made for including various left wing groups." He had been asked if the new constition would permit Communists as members.

A liberal and a Conservative are destined to seek selection in London and with a Labor man entering there is a possibility the C.C.F. will make it a four-cornered affair in an effort to back their stand against the left wingers.

Two Conservative candidates were launched into the whirlpool of campaign oratory during the weekend. A. A. Shaver, K.C., was selected to represent government supporters in North Wentworth-Hamilton at a convention in Dundas while Mayor John Franklin Craig of Barrie was selected Conservative candidate at a convention of Centre Simcoe Conservatives in Barrie which heard Premier George S. Henry reiterate his stand on the wine and beer question.

Freer sale of beer and wine, Premier Henry said, was considered necessary by his government in the face of increased consumption of hard liquor and the fact conditions had changed during the last few years, especially with United States dropping prohibition. The Premier however, stressed that there would be no change in control which would continue in the hands of the Government-appointed Liquor Control Board and remain so long as he was in power.

Kingston Liberals and Conservatives have started organizing for the elections. Lieut.-Col. George Bawden is the Liberal candidate and the Conservatives are expected to meet early to make their choice, with Lieut.-Col. T. Ashmore again entering the lists for the nomination. The C.C.F. group in Kingston has not yet indicated if it will place a candidate in the running.

Tory Rallies Planned.

In Western Ontario seven Conservative conventions are to be held within the next two weeks. Perth Conservatives will select a candidate at Stratford April 26, with Charles E. Richardson, St. Mary's, present member for South Perth, expected to get the nomination. Elgin and Bruce-Huron Conservatives will make their selections April 27, the former meeting slated for Aylmer and the other meeting at Wingham.

Wellington-Dufferin convention, originally scheduled for April 27 at Arthur, has been postponed. Five names are being mentioned for the nomination convention.

Dr. H. J. Davis and Charles E. Raven, present members for the Elgins, are expected again to appear for the nomination, although Mr. Raven has indicated he might retire.

Other conventions include North Waterloo Conservatives at Waterloo April 28; South Middlesex Conservatives at Mount Bridge, April 30; Haldiman-Norfolk Conservatives at Mount Bridges April 30; Haldiman-Norfolk Conservatives at Simcoe, April 30, and West Lambton Conservatives at Sarnia, May 2.

Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, will address the Perth Conservatives at Stratford and Hon. W. G. Martin, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare, will appear before the Elgin convention at Aylmer. Mr. McCrea also will speak at the Bruce-Huron convention in Wingham, while Attorney-General W. H. Price will be the speaker at the South Middlesex meeting in Mount Bridges.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 23 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — After a very lengthy illness, Elizabeth Gay, beloved wife of Luther A. Denike died at her Campbellford home early on Saturday morning. You Can't Fool a BLOOD TEST

On November 14, 1932, a pale, thin girl walked into a physician's office and had her blood tested. The reason for her condition was at once evident. The haemoglobin content of her blood was only 68 per cent. Red corpuscle count only 4,640,000. She just had to be pale. And her weight was but 91½ pounds.

The physician, who knew the formula of the remedy, told her to take two of Dr Williams' Pink Pills after each meal and to come back in a month for another test. She followed instructions and took no other medicine

On December 14, her blood showed 88 per cent. haemoglobin and 5,024,000 red corpuscles. Her weight was 100½ pounds, a gain of nine pounds in thirty days! She had gained color and attractiveness. The doctor noticed for the first time that she was positively pretty.

Blood tests scientifically prove the real value of a blood-building remedy. If you are anaemic pale and underweight; if you lack ambition and energy, get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from your druggist and begin the treatment to-day. Revitalize your blood stream and build up new resources of strength and vigor. You are taking no chances. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are clinically tested.

A PLAN WORTH IMITATING.

The Council of Brantford Township is to be congratulated upon the progressiveness it is showing in adopting a policy of reforestation.

It has been decided that twenty-five acres of waste land in the township will be cleared to permit of the planting of 25,000 trees, and it is expected that next year the plan will be expanded to take care of another twenty-five acres.

The approval and co-operation of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests have been secured, and everything points to a very successful project, the results of which will become more valuable with the passing of the years.

This reforestation scheme serves a two-fold purpose.

In the first place, a plantation of young trees is a very acceptable substitute for a tract of waste land, which at its best is usually a decidedly unattractive feature of the landscape.

In the second place, this reforestation scheme will develop into a splendid asset; most of Old Ontario has been practically denuded of forest growth, and it is high time that we began to realize that fact and the necessity of taking steps to ensure a future supply of wood and timber.

If Ontario municipalities generally would take a leaf out of the book of Brantford Township The Examiner is sure that it would be good business for themselves and for the province generally.

UNCONTROLLABLE EXPENDITURES.

Mr. Rhodes' Budget presentation last week covered so much ground that the average newspaper reader probably has failed to study the figures very closely or to obtain the clear-cut picture of Canada's financial position that was made possible by the completeness with which the Minister of Finance dealt with the subject.

One striking feature stressed by Mr. Rhodes was the fact that a very large percentage of the ordinary expenditure of the Dominion was uncontrollable.

Out of a total of $364,000,000, as a matter of fact, $230,000,000 dealt with expenditures which could not be cut and about which the Government could do nothing but devise ways and means of paying.

Interest on public debt was the largest item in this category and was responsible for $139,000,000 in the year.

Then came $41,700,000 for war pensions and $9,500,000 for the treatment and care of returned soldiers.

To the provinces in the form of subsidies was paid $15,300,000, and the Federal Government's share of old age pensions accounted for $12,500,000.

What economies could be effected therefore had to be made in the remaining ordinary expenditures, and it must be admitted that the field for saving was therefore limited.

Under those circumstances the Government has made at least some progress toward economy by lopping off $81,000,000 in three years, a reduction of 38 per cent.

THE Y.M.C.A. APPEAL.

The Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association is appealing to the community this week for $7,250.00, the amount necessary to balance its budget for the current year.

The question that may occur to some people: why does the association need help from the public, in other words why should it not be self-sustaining? is a reasonable one and is not difficult to answer.

The Y.M.C.A. could be made a self-sustaining unit by simply raising the cost of membership fees and other charges high enough to cover operating costs, but to do that would be to defeat the chief objective of the institution, which is to supply a very necessary and desirable service to boys and young men at a cost to them that enables them to take advantage of what is offered.

It would rob the city of a community asset of the greatest importance if the Y.M.C.A. were to be converted into an exclusive club, available only for well-to-do members.

As a matter of fact, under the present arrangement the business men's section and the dormitory department are self-sustaining; the members of the former pay in fees more than enough to cover the expense involved, while the dormitories are operated at a profit.

It is in the boys' and young men's departments that the loss is sustained, and necessarily so, because here the fees must be kept at a moderate level.

When the public is asked for financial assistance it should be remembered that these subscriptions are needed because the Y.M.C.A. desires to give the boys and young men of the community a chance to enjoy the services provided by the institution.

THE HARVEST OF THE MAPLE.

Large quantities of maple syrup were on sale on the local market on Saturday, although in the main the present season has not been a satisfactory one.

The yearly harvest of the maple is an industry of considerable importance to Canada, running into millions of dollars every spring.

In the calendar year 1933, the Dominion exported 2,370,802 pounds of maple sugar, valued at $389,475, and 32,994 gallons of maple syrup, valued at $32,073, the produce of four provinces, Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Much larger quantities of both products were, of course, consumed in Canada.

The maple industry is strictly a native one; it originated with the Indians, and Canada and the United States are the only countries producing maple sugar and syrup.

The red man's methods, we learn from the National Revenue Review, were very crude. He gashed the maple tree with his tomakawk and caught the dripping sap in a birch bark vessel.

With the Indian moose meat boiled in the sap was considered a great luxury.

According to a legend held by some Indian tribes, maple syrup was discovered in the following manner: One day a mighty hunter named Woksis went out in search of game while his squaw, Mogua, busied herself with preparing the meal against his homecoming. As was customary, she boiled some moose meat in the sweet maple water. Forgetting her charge, however, the boiling sap thickened into a syrup. When Woksis returned and tasted the new dish he was so delighted that he informed the tribe that a heaven-sent instructor had taught his Mogua how to make this wonderful new dish.

The size of the yield each spring depends largely upon climatic conditions. With freezing nights and thawing days, clear skies and moderate winds, the yield is good. Ordinarily the run extends three weeks, but sometimes it exceeds a month. From 10 to 20 gallons of sap are taken from each tree, but it requires 50 gallons of sap to make one gallon of syrup or about 6 pounds of sugar.

The first run of the season is the richest. Gradually as the season advances the sap becomes poorer. The final run is drawn off when the buds are swelling and almost ready to burst. This poor quality sap is called buddy sap and has a peculiar flavor that cannot be eliminated.

Until about sixty years ago there was little improvement in the methods of sugar makers; but since that time the advance has kept pace with that in other branches of agriculture; until it has become a more or less highly organized commercial industry.

LONESOME TORONTO.

(Sarnia Canadian Observer)

Certain organizations in Toronto associated with the affairs of community progress are not pleased with the Toronto centennial operations. Apparently the people from the Ontario "sticks" are not exhibiting much excitement over the circumstance that Toronto is celebrating its hundredth birthday, and certain elements in the Ontario capital are peeved because business is not as good as they expected it to be. One of the organizations so disturbed held a meeting a few evenings ago and wanted to pass sarcastic resolutions directed at the committee sponsoring the centennial program. After more mature consideration, however, it was decided not to proceed that far and other methods of expressing disappointment will be resorted to.

It is quite characteristic of Toronto that a peevish spirit should be displayed if the rest of the country is not hurrying to pay tribute. Toronto's pet obsession is to lure the hicks there for some sort of a celebration whether it happens to be the National Exhibition, the Winter Fair, a skating carnival or a fake wrestling match. When provincial communities endeavor to secure business in Toronto the cold shoulder that is extended to them has become notorious. Evidently the outsiders have awoke to recognition of the one-sided sort of deal in which they are expected to play and be cheerful.

AN UNSIGNED LETTER.

Unsigned letters are the bane of a publisher's existence. No matter how great the desire to give publicity to all views received, the line must be drawn at most anonymous missives. But here is one which appeared in the April number of the Kiwanis Magazine which can be regarded as an exception to the rule, for the timely inspiration it contains. It reads as follows:

"Yesterday morning I saw a boy, a very ordinary and quite ragged boy, down on his knees alongside a concrete highway near Hope, Arkansas. He was sobbing and crying. Alongside the boy was the limp remains of a big white dog. The picture threw me off my stride for the entire day. Throwing me off my stride is not important, but it is not pleasant to recall that a boy's heart had been broken.

"Of course they boy will get over it, and there are lots of dogs, but the older I grow the more I realize that it is not a little thing to break a boy's heart, even temporarily. I am a grown man and in 1926 I lost a pointer. Whatever I think of Micky and his great brown eyes, my own eyes fill up. They are doing it now, and I wouldn't be a darned bit ashamed if there were ninety-seven million people watching me.

"A lot of dog killings are avoidable. Of course, some cannot be avoided, but a lot of them can. I have driven nearly forty thousand miles a year for some years, and I have never hit a dog. At the expense of a couple of dented fenders and maybe a few feet of brake lining, I have always avoided hitting them. They respond to the tooting of a horn very well, and I have slept better because I have no broken-hearted boy on my conscience.

"If I were a writing man and had a page or two to fill with editorials, I would write an editorial about driving so as to avoid hitting dogs. If you had been with me you would have written two editorials. I know what you must think about dogs and boys' hearts.

"Why don't you write an editorial?"

The editor of the Kiwanis Magazine didn't write an editorial. He just published the letter. That was editorial enough.—Chatham News.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Probably Mr. Henry is withholding his announcement of the election date until he feels sure that the winter is over.

If Hon. W. A. Gordon was not consulted about the effect of the new gold tax he most certainly has a legitimate grievance. Surely his opinion should have been sought for more than one reason.

Premier Henry is crossing swords with the Globe, and is likely to find out that the pen is still mightier than the sword.

Discussion on the marketing bill has already gone back to the signing of the Magna Charta. Evidently the early Britons did not have a word for it or Mr. King would have used it.

The lower sugar tax does not go into force until July 1st, which is one way of adding sweetness to Canada's celebration of Dominion Day.

"I was outspoken at the club to-day," remarked a West Side woman in an emphatic tone at her dinner table. "I can't believe it," replied her hubby. "Who outspoke you?"—Topeka Capital.

STORM DRIFT

By ETHEL M. DELL

CHAPTER 45

In the cool waters of the bay Tiggie recovered his self-possession and told himself it was all a joke which he had been a fool to take seriously. It was perfectly natural that Viola should want to play with him a little, try her woman's wiles upon him, now that she was feeling better. He would take it as a sign of approaching convalescence and give no further thought to it. For to be idealized in any way was a state of affairs quite intolerable to his honest soul, and in his own opinion no one deserved it less. What he had done had been done because of the love he had for her. He had been literally driven to it, and he could not have pictured himself following any other course. But—so ran his chivalrous thought—he must not tell her so. That could only distress her, make her feel more hopelessly than ever in his debt. It might be that already she suspected it, was trying to make some return—trying perhaps to school herself into transforming her gratitude into some semblance of womanly love—trying to give him back his own.

That thought tortured Tiggie and he thrust it away and turned himself into a dolphin for the delighted Joyce to ride the waves upon. She could only do so by clinging desperately to his neck and nearly choking him, but as he would not take her out of her depth his own progress was a safe if grovelling one on hands and knees through the ripples.

He finally left her to play alone while he went for one good swim, from which he returned refreshed and in a state of mind which he would have described as sane. They walked up from the shore hand in hand—the brown elf of a child dancing beside the bulky red figure of her playfellow around whom it would have been hard to weave any fairy magic. Harvey had once uncharitably told him that he was more like his namesake in bathing kit than anything else on earth.

They paused by a rock to don their mackintoshes, and Joyce, glancing up in the direction from which Tiggie for some reason was persistently averting his look, remarked, "Why, there's Uncle Puck in our garden—with Auntie Viola! What is he doing?"

Tiggie's eyes shot upwards in an instant. The name was not unfamiliar to him. Harvey himself had supplied it with a sardonic chuckle a week before. He beheld him now seated before his easel, which was established a few feet away from Viola's couch, his whole figure expressive of the most fevered intensity while he worked rapidly at the canvas in front of him.

"He's painting Auntie Viola!" said Joyce in an awed tone. "And oh, how funny he looks!"

"So he is!" said Tiggie. "Well, let's go and get dressed!"

He saw the child start on her way up the cliff path, and turned himself in the direction of the inn. A curious sense of uneasiness went with him for which he would have found it hard to account—something connected with the poised eagerness of Harvey's attitude which was so totally different from his customary rather slovenly lounge.

It was the hour for luncheon, but it was with a distinct effort of will that he made himself remain to partake of it. He was convinced that Harvey would make no appearance, and he was not mistaken. Save for an impecunious clergymen and his wife who were taking a five days' holiday at "The Sea Lion", and one or two pedestrians who had tramped in over the moor, he was alone.

It had never been his custom to go up to the cottage in the afternoon, as Viola always rested till four, but when the meal was over he went straight out with his pipe and made his way to the shore whence her corner was visible, telling himself that in Spot's absence the strings of discipline might be loosened. But he saw at once that the cottage garden was deserted. Only the empty couch remained.

Somewhat reassured, he took the cliff path himself and started off for a ramble along the grassy slopes that bordered the coast. The day had turned very hot, for the wind itself had lost its early coolness. There was not much of it, but it came occasionally in warm puffs from the westward, and a smoky haze hung over the sea which had a heavy leaden look, as though its ridged surface had congealed to solidity. There was no sound of breaking waves, only by listening intently a kind of secret rustling might have been heard at the foot of the cliffs as though the caves were whispering together. To Tiggie's practical mind this portended little, though he was vaguely conscious of a certain ominousness in the atmosphere which he ascribed to the coming change which Joe Penny had foretold' It did not, however, appear to be close at hand and he did not pay much attention to it. His thoughts still dwelt upon Harvey and the curious effect his sudden presence had had upon himself and Joyce. He had always known that the fellow was a crank, but he wished he knew what sort of a crank. Did Viola like him near her? Or was she still afraid? That at least he might manage to find out. He would certainly try. And with the resolution newly formed in his mind he looked ahead and saw the man himself swinging down upon him with his peculiarly springy gait from a steep eminence above the cliff edge along which he was walking.

The suddenness of his appearance from nowhere in particular, and his evident intention of waylaying him, gave Tiggie a passing impression that his own movements had been under observation for some time. He waved a greeting to the oncoming figure while some yards still divided them, which was acknowledged by the jerky uplift of an arm. Then, Tiggie turning landwards off the narrow path, they met.

Harvey's hat had been pulled forward over his eyes. He pushed it abruptly back, and Tiggie stared at him in wonder. He had never before looked upon such a mixture of intelligence and insanity.

"Well?" said Harvey roughly. "What's the matter with you?"

His eyes, red-rimmed and bloodshot, challenged him with an almost bestial ferocity, but Tiggie, fancying he recognized in them the demon of drink, made pacific reply.

"Nothing, old chap. Just out for a walk, that's all."

"All?" Harvey's lips curved back in a snarl. "You didn't come up here to hunt for devils in the wilderness by any chance?"

Tiggie looked him straight in the face. "No, I didn't," he said. "Did you?"

Harvey laughed, a wild and awful laugh. "No," he said. "I brought 'em with me if you want to know—quite a party of 'em. Care to join us?"

His face was gray-white and contorted, but there still lingered that gleam of intelligence in his strange eyes as though an imprisoned soul looked forth, and it was to that that Tiggie addressed himself.

"You'd be wiser if you joined me," he said, "and went back for a few hours' sleep."

"Sleep!" said Harvey. "Sleep!" He threw back his head and laughed until laughter failed, finally croaking himself into silence.

Tiggie spoke into it firmly. "Look here! You'll do no good up here. Come on down with me and I'll look after you."

Harvey gazed at him for a moment or two as though seeking for some inner meaning to his words. Then, with a quick and oddly childish gesture, he laid a bony hand upon Tiggie's arm.

"Good fellow—Tiggie!" he said. "I always said so. You won't come between me and my picture?"

"Why should I?" said Tiggie.

"Because I know you love her." Harvey's teeth gleamed. "But remember, I helped you to get her. You wouldn't have found her but for me." The croaking sound came into his voice again; he subdued it with a harsh effort. "I'll kill anyone," he said deliberately, "who comes between me and my picture."

"Where is it?" said Tiggie.

A guarded look crossed the artist's drawn face. "P'raps you'll see it some day on the line," he said. "For the present, it's nowhere."

"But she gave you a sitting this morning," said Tiggie.

"Yes, she did." Again Harvey's eyes challenged him. "And she's going to do it again. She's promised."

"Did you frighten her?" demanded Tiggie suddenly.

"I?" said Harvey. He began to laugh again, but checked himself. "No, it's I that am the frightened one. It would be ghastly to fail." He flung round on his heel and walked a few paces away, then impatiently swung again and returned. Tiggie saw with relief that the look of insanity was passing, but his eyes were haggard. "No, I didn't frighten her," he said more quietly. "We understand each other. Do you really think everyone is as obvious as you are? It's all right, I tell you."

He smiled at Tiggie more normally, though his smile was an immense effort. "I shan't do her any harm, man. She's a perfectly willing victim. Hasn't she told you so?"

"I haven't asked her yet," said Tiggie.

"All right. Well, you ask her!" There was a gleam of triumph in Harvey's eyes. "But you needn't be jealous," he added with something like his old derisive grin. "It's only a passing phase. I'm working like hell. It'll soon be finished."

"You'll kill yourself if you don't rest," observed Tiggie.

Harvey put his hand over his eyes with a gesture that was both defensive and pathetic. "Kill myself, shall I?" he said. "I shouldn't wonder. It's a case of do or die, I admit. But you leave me alone, see? Don't come spying on me, or there'll be real trouble. I'll come back to you when it's over—if I'm not burnt right out."

Something in his tone touched Tiggie; it seemed to plead. "My dear chap, I don't want to spy on you," he said. "Only I can't help feeling more or less responsible."

"Oh, stop that!" said Harvey with a flick of the fingers. "You're not. No one is—or could be. Just leave me alone, that's all! Let the old wizard work out his spells in peace!" He put a hand on Tiggie's shoulder for a moment. A queer whimsical light had dawned on his face, as though sanity were slowly recovering sway. "You needn't be jealous," he said again. "She worships you—even in bathing kit. And to anyone with an artistic eye that's a pretty severe test. Now clear out like a dear fellow and leave me alone!"

A Thought

BE STRONG

Be strong!
We are not here to play—to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do and loads to lift.
Shun not the struggle—face it; 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!
Say not the days are evil. Who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!
It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long;
Faint not—fight on! Tomorrow comes the song.

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

CANADIAN V.C.'S IN SOUTH AFRICA

On this date, in 1901 announcement was made in London that the Victoria Cross had been conferred upon Lieutenant H. Z. O. Cockburn of Toronto, Lieut. R. E. Turner of Quebec, and Sergeant Edward J. Holland of Ottawa. All three were decorated with the highest military honor by reason of their bravery in the battle at Komati River on November 7 previously.

Cockburn, a son of G. R. R. Cockburn, M.P., was a former pupil of Upper Canada College, and an officer in the Governor General's Body Guard. Turner returned to Quebec, became O.C. of the Queen's Own Canadian Hussars in 1905, and was one of the first to answer the call in 1914 when he went over as Commander of the 3rd infantry brigade. Within a year he was brigadier general and then major general in command of the second division C.E.F. He was knighted in 1917 and promoted to major general. He had been active in the work of the Canadian Legion. Holland, better known as "Eddie", came back to Canada a major and then became one of the pioneers of mining development in the Cobalt area.

The next day it was announced that the V.C. had been granted to Sergeant A. H. L. Richardson, of the Strathcona Horse for marked bravery at Wolve Spruit on July 5. On this return to Winnipeg Richardson was presented with a handsome money gift by the citizens of Winnipeg. These four were the only Victoria Crosses conferred upon Canadians in the South African war.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

VICTORIA, B.C.

The city of Victoria had its origin in a Hudson's Bay fort. Anticipating that under the Oregon treaty, then being drawn up, the 49th Parallel would be chosen as the international boundary line, the Hudson's Bay Company, in 1843, moved its fort from Vancouver on the Columbia River, to the southern end of Vancouver Island.

It was around this fort, first named Camosack or Camosun, then Albert, for the prince consort, then Victoria, for the reigning queen, that the city grew. But while it was the Hudson's Bay Company that gave the city its impetus, it was the gold rush into the Cariboo in 1858 that started it on its career to the status of a city. From a population of a few hundred, the figure leaped to 20,000 in a few weeks and Victoria's destiny was assured.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

IF YOU'RE NORMAL—

I take out my watch and hold it in my left hand; take the thumb of my right hand and place it firmly on my left wrist, watch the second hand of my watch—and count.

There, beneath my thumb, I feel a movement, a constant beat....I count....one, two, three, four, five. ....How steady the beat is....Six, seven, eight, nine, ten....The throb is so regular.....Eleven twelve, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen....Never a deviation....On it goes....When 30 seconds are over, I shall have reached forty-two,...I know it; I would risk money on it....Wait and see. I count on and on, without hurrying, without cheating, and it's true. As the second hand reaches 30, I say forty-two....And twice forty-two is eighty-four, and there's no use counting any more. My pulse is normal. I knew it was; there was hardly any use counting. I'm glad it's normal. If it were less, if it were more, I'd probably worry.

You feel that way, too. You want your pulse to be normal. You feel safe when you know it is. You'd begin to worry, too, if it weren't You'd think there was something strange and dangerous about it, and you'd ask a doctor, and take pills and change your way of living so you could get it back to normal again.

And yet, strangely enough, you don't want to be "normal" in other respects. You don't want to be just an average man or woman. You don't want to be like everybody else. You want to be different.... You feel that if you are just like everybody else in other ways, then you have just that much less cause for pride. And you regret it.

But even as you are, you are a miracle of wonder and astonishment ....These glands, follicles, cells, ferments, enzymes, tissues, muscles, contrivances, organs, elements, salts, acids structures, complications, organizations, functions the beat and pulse of you are amazing. Here walking around in you—or you walking around in it—is something stupendous, something to which no man with rich curiosity in him, should ever become dully accustomed.

Just to be normal enough—enough for me and enough for you—and no mortal being has need of more than that. The pulse beating strongly in his wrist is sufficient for any man.

PROTESTS STATEMENT

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir.—Will you kindly give me a corner of your valuable paper to voice my protest against a statement made by the Rev. Dr. Rollis last Wednesday at the meeting in St. Paul's Church, speaking on "The Work of the Holy Spirit". He said: 'There are some who maintain that the gift of the Spirit means speaking in tongues. But I hardly think so. John mentions speaking with tongues as given for a sign. But we do not live by signs and nowhere in the New Testament have we warrant for saying that speaking with tongues, is a sign or proof of the possession of the Holy Spirit. Hence such a position is foolish to-day.'

In the light of such a statement as this how can Dr. Rolls explain 1 Cor. 14-39. 'And forbid not to speak with tongues.' Paul certainly was no fool. His cnversion was instantaneous and real. When he received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit three days after his conversion it was an entirely separate experience from conversion.

When he asked the Ephesian believers in Acts 19:2. 'Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed.' They admitted they had not even heard of it and yet they were believers. Acts 19:6 says 'When Paul laid his hands on them' and 'they spake with tongues'. we do not maintain that the gift of the Spirit means speaking with tongues. But we do maintain that you cannot have the Baptism of the Holy Spirit without the speaking in tongues as this is the initial evidence of having received the fullness of the Spirit. He gives utterance "in tongues" as a sign of this indwelling presence. Dr. Rolls says these signs are not intended to be perpetuated, I'd like to know what Scripture he found that statement on. I don't want anyone's own opinion on it. What really matters is, What saith the Lord and Jesus himself says in Mark 16-17. These signs shall follow them that believe. In My name shall they cast out devils. "They shall speak with new tongues," and verse 20 says they sent forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following. I believe these scriptures apply today as surely as John 3:16 applies to-day and Praise God these signs still follow them that believe. 1st John 1-1 That which we have "seen with our eyes" and our hands have handled, concerning the Word of Life, that which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you. That ye also may have fellowship with us and our fellowship is with the Father. Dr. Rolls remarked on the interest that seemed to be taken in his subject judging by the crowd gathered to hear him on this subject. Yes, people to-day are getting tired of shams and shows; of godliness with no power behind it; tired of having a form of godliness and denying the power thereof and I know from personal contact with many dear, hungry souls—real Christians—who are starving their souls on the husks of empty forms that they yearn for reality, as the old chorus says. Reality, reality; my soul demands reality. The Baptism of the Holy Spirit is not like the "Imaginary Banquet" something you have to take by faith or by proxy. No; praise the Lord; It's real. Oh, I know its real. Praise God, my doubts are settled, for I know, I know it's real.

Dr. Rolls may be a D.D., but even a Doctor of Divinity has no right to dissect God's word like that and scatter portions of it around to become stumbling blocks to the weaker brethren who are not so well read as he is. I'm not a D.D. but I am a 'B.A.' (Born Again) according to God's word and I trust this will not be interpreted as being written in bitterness of Spirit or merely for controversy's sake but for the glory of Him who did so much for me.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

Yours for the Full Gospel,
M. Harvey.

FIRMER TREND MARKET CLOSE

Although Gains Only Have Slight Margin Over Losses in Late Trading.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS.

TORONTO, April 23 (C.P.).—Mixed movements prevailed in the industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, although the list exhibited a tendency to establish uniformity on the upside late in the session. International Nickel supplied strong leadership, but there were enough laggards to give the board only a slight margin of gains over losses at the close. Volume was not heavy.

Some late buying pulled the prices of the brewery shares up, registering narrow gains for the Brewing Corporation stocks, Canada Malting, and Walkerville. Distillery shares closed lower, Walkers 7-8. The new Alcohol Common traded at 11⅝, and the Preferred at 16½.

Speeding up of nickel operations was given as the stimulant for the buying of that issue which had a rise of 60 cents to 28.40. Consolidated Smelters was unchanged at 166. Brazilian and C.P.R. closed slightly off and Ford A finished unchanged.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, April 23.—(A.P.)—Irregularity prevailed in to-day's listless stock market. Selling occurred in some motors, rails and alcohols. A number of specialties were higher.

U. S. Steel eased a shade while American Telephone was slightly better. Santa Fe, U.S. Industrial Alcohol and Chrysler were off a point or so but firmness was shown by Union Pacific, U.S. Smelting and Evans Products. Transfers approximated 1,100,000 shares.

DOWNIE STREET FAMILY EVICTS LOCAL BAILIFF

Woman is Charged in Magistrate's Court With Assault on Officer.

JUDGMENT ADJOURNED.

Hair Torn From Bailiff's Head —Family Ordered to Leave House.

A graphic tale of the manner in which an amateur bailiff had been assaulted and forcefully evicted from a Downie street home by a woman, her husband and son was related in Magistrate Langley's court this morning by Edward S. Harding, the bailiff, during the trial of the woman on a charge of assault. In thrusting him out of the house, Harding testified the woman had torn fistfuls of hair from his head and he took from his pocket a handful of hair, which he said he had salvaged from his coat collar after the melee, to prove his statement to the court.

To Seize Furniture

On April 16, Harding said he went to the Downie street address with O. de Laplante to make a seizure upon the woman's furniture on behalf of her landlord for back rent. He had all the official bailiff's papers to make the seizure, but no one answered his knock. He entered the house, made the seizure and remained there until the next afternoon when the woman and her children attacked him, he said, and proceeded to throw him out.

"She caught me by the hair and pulled all she could out," he testified. "She hit me on the side of the head and on the chest twice. I don't know whether her fist was closed or not. By pulling my hair and pushing me they got me out. They nearly tore my coat off my back and I had to get it all repaired. I didn't hit back—just braced my feet against the door."

Cross-examined by W. J. Arthur Fair, the woman's counsel, Harding said he was not a licensed bailiff but was acting in that capacity in this case at the landlord's request through Mr. de Laplante. He went to the house on Downie street in the morning of April 16 to make the seizure, and despite the fact that he told the woman he came to see about painting the interior of the house she would not let him in, he said.

Later in the afternoon he returned to the house with Mr. de Laplante.

Doors Were Locked

"How did you get into the house? The doors were locked and no one answered your knock?" he was asked.

"I went in through the cellar window, which had no glass in it. I let Mr. de Laplante in through the door. We made up the list of things, and then I waited until she came home," Harding explained. "Yes, this was the first time I had ever gone out to make a seizure."

When the woman's children came in from school, he said they went out and telephoned the police. Later the woman came home and there was more said about getting the police. About midnight Sergeant Wigg came up but nothing was done about his being in the house, he related.

He spent the night there and was sitting in the parlor the next afternoon when the attack was made on him and "they tossed me out."

This closed the evidence for the prosecution. The woman's two children told of coming home and finding Harding sitting in their parlor. The also related their efforts to have police make him leave the place.

The woman, testifying, admitted she owed the landlord some rent and had been requested by Mr. de Laplante to move out of the house "peaceably" and the rent she owed would be forgotten. She said she "got mad" when she noticed Harding "snoozing away that afternoon in my parlor." She admitted she had pulled his hair and dragged and pushed him from the house.

This closed the case. Mr. de Laplante told the court that the prosecution was willing to withdraw the case if the woman would move out of the house.

Judgement was adjourned for a week to give the woman time to move.

Claim U.S. Intends Fortify Aluetians

SEATTLE, April 23 (AP).—Belief that the United States is planning to fortify its far flung outposts in the Aluetian Archipelago grew here to-day as a small fleet of naval planes and vessels assembled for a renewal of the intensive survey of the islands begun last year.

Barred by provisions of the five power naval pact of 1922, from establishing military posts in the Aleutians before December 31, 1936, the United States must give notice this year if it intends to terminate the treaty on its expiration.

Demands for protection of Alaska and the Aleutions have been ringing in Congress for years, the latest exponents being Delegate A. J. Dimond of Alaska and Representative William I. Sirovich of New York.

Two Mangled Bodies Found On Railway

COCHRANE, Ont., April 23.— (C P)—The bodies of two youths, found mutilated beside the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway tracks near Holland Sunday morning, were brought here today.

The youths were identified as E. Davis, 22, temporary section man employed by the railway, and Thomas Aubertine, 20, a settler.

Railway officials believe the men were attempting to board a train when they fell under the wheels. There were no blood marks on the engine but the cars behind were stained. This indicated that the two were not struck by the locomotive.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Aged Canadian Constructs Novel Boat

Strange things are seen on the seas these days, including sea serpents and such but perhaps the strangest of all marine craft ever launched in Vancouver is the above 18-foot rowboat. Built by Johnny Davidson old age pensioner of Kamloops this craft will shortly sail for Powell river 60 miles up coast from Vancouver. There Johnny, one of the best lead blowers in Canada, will augment his pension with fruits of the sea and forest. He proposes to live contentedly with a fare which will include clam chowder, salmon, cod and herring, fresh from the sea, venison and game birds from the forest. He will also have a small garden. His little craft, the Agnes, is a flat-bottomed vessel, 18 feet long, 5 feet 6 inches beam, with a six-inch keel extending full length. Propulsion is created by Mr. Davidson's arms turning a windlass, which in turn whirls two six-foot discs of wood. These discs are rigged astern and the lower parts are submerged in the water. On the outer side are galvanized iron wings, which grips the water and thrusts the Agnes forwards. The human engine sits at the point where the bridge would be, permitting the navigator-engineer-engine to keep a sharp lookout for uncharted rocks, "sleepers," floating logs, and any other danger to navigation.

GEN. ROSS RAPS PENSION HEADS

Seem More Interested Sending Out Morality Squads Than Correcting Condtions.

URGES FAITH.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 23 (CP)—Although Canada's pension system is "the best in the world," there are times when Brigadier General A. E. Ross cannot "help getting sore at the treatment handed out to the veterans." The fault, Brigadier-General Ross told the eighth annual dinner of the survivors of Britains "Old Contemptibles" and Canada's First Contingent was not in the legislation, but in the administration of the pensions.

"We never set up a pension department for the purpose of peeking through windows of the home of widows of men who are still holding the line in France," he declared. "The administration is really sometime nauseating and sickening to me. They seem to be more interested in sending out morality squads to investigate the veterans or their widows than in correcting conditions."

He referred to inspectors setn out to investigate "on the dirty suspicion df neighbors." He criticized the cutting off of a pension of "an 80-year-old mother because of a complaint of immorality."

"You must stand firm in two things: firm in the faith of your country and of civilization, and firm in your religion and your God," was the message General Ross left with the veterans.

Attorney General W. H. Price of Ontario urged the veterans to "stand behind law and order and constituted authority."

McBride said his aged partner told him a bush fire had melted the silver and permitted it to drip through the roof of the cave where they were hanging "like icicles as big as your wrist."

JEWISH RESIDENTS AID RELIEF FUND

$120 Contributed Locally in Dominion Wide Campaign.

In line with a Dominion-wide effort to aid Jewish children whose parents have suffered in the recent pogrom conducted in Germany, the Peterborough Jewish residents have made their contribution to this movement, which designs to take Jewish children from Germany and establish them in the Jewish National Home in Palestine. The cost for each child's establishment is placed at $80.

Peterborough's Jewish people contributed $120 in cash, with a further pledge of $80 from the Hadassah, the women's local organization. Thus a total of $200 has been received locally, making a very worth-while contribution to a humanitarian cause. And further efforts are to be made to increase this amount.

Mrs. R. J. Freeman of Ottawa is the president for Canada of the association formed for this purpose. Two recent speakers on the matter who visited Peterborough and were guests of Mr and Mrs. P. Black, Charlotte Street, were Mr. Gester who is a son of the Chief Rabbi of England, and the Rev. Mr. Greengarten.

YOUTH'S NEEDS ARE STRESSED BY BALLANTYNE

Secretary of Y.M.C.A. National Council Discusses Problems Before Local Rotary Club.

OLD MAN SUNSHINE.

Rev. G. W. Tebbs Entertains Service Club With Sample of His Great Supply of Good Cheer.

With Harry Ballantyne, secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., and Rev. G. W. Tebbs of Burlington, "Old Man Sunshine" of Station CKOC, as joint speakers, to-day's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary presented a doubly interesting program. It was further featured by the announcement of the nomination committee of ten members from which the five directors for the ensuing year will be selected. They are as follows: J. F. Reed, C. G. Graham, D. G. Loomis, Jack Gillespie, R. J. Goring, Jack Bell, Elmer Metcalfe, D. G. Melton, A. D. Runions, and S. C. Warne.

Mr. Ballantyne, who is here directing the local Y.M.C.A. campaign, had a bodyguard of local Y.M.C.A. leaders with him, including C. A. Salmonsen, G. F Roper, Rev. C. D. Daniel, Charles F. Shaw, W. G. Richardson, C. E. Cummer, Charles Lacheur, and Dr. H. M. Yelland.

Introduced by Rotarian Ross L. Dobbin, president of the local Y.M.C.A., the national secretary gave an eloquent address upon present day youth and the necessity of assisting him in his problems. There were three characteristics, he said, of youth's lookout upon life at the present time. In the first place he was impatient, in the second he was confused, and in the third he was serious. Modern youth, the speaker said, was impatient at what he saw around him in the world; confused as to the causes of unemployment and unrest, and serious in his consideration of these things. The three problems that had to be solved in connection with youth, were to provde him with the proper education after his school days were over; to find him a job and to furnish him with a proper philosophy of life. This, the speaker said, was the aim of the Y.M.C.A. and other organizations; to get behind the physical needs of adolescent youth to his mental and spiritual needs.

Rev. Mr. Tebbs, the second speaker of the luncheon called attention to the fact that this was a great day of all Englishmen, inasmuch as it was not only the anniversary of the birth of England's patron saint, Saint George, but also the anniversary of the birth and death of England's greatest writer, William Shakespeare. Mr. Tebbs who gives a daily broadcast over Station CKOC and is known to radio audiences as Old Man Sunshine, showed that the name was thoroughly merited, by giving a sparkling talk, bubbling over with good humor and containing a rich store of amusing anecdotes, inimitably told by the speaker.

Rotarian Roy Goring, chairman of the On-to-St. Cathraines Committee, called attention to the wonderful program that is being prepared for visitors to the convention of the Rotarians of the 27th District in the Garden City next month.

Sure Modification Coming On Gold Tax

OTTAWA, April 23 (C.P.).—Announcement of some modification of the 10 per cent. gold tax imposed in the Rhodes budget last week is expected shortly although the change will not be such as to diminish in any way the Government's prospects of securing a revenue of $10,000,000 through a levy on gold.

Over the week-end representatives of leading gold mines held long conferences with Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Mines, and later had an interview with Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance. It is understood a definite plan was laid before the Minister of Finance, which would impose a lesser burden on mines producing from low grade ore and which might not be in operation but for the present high price of the metal.

The plan will be studied by Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance, and a selected committee of the mining representatives.

DENY CHACO INDIANS ATE BOLIVIAN OFFICERS

GENEVA, April 23 (AP).—Reports of cannibalism in the Gran Chaco border region over which Paraguay and Bolivia are at war were denied to-day by members of the League of Nations Chaco commission.

The denials were issued as the commission met to prepare a report on its failure to bring peace between the warring nations.

"I have no knowledge of any cannibalism in the Chaco," said Julio Alverez Dal Vayo, president of the commission.

General Robertson, English member, also denied the reports.

It was said Indians had slain and eaten Bolivian officers attempting to recruit troops among the tribesmen.

CHURCH PARADE OF LEGION HELD TO ST. PETER'S

Stay Close to the Cross is Message of Bishop O'Connor to Legionaires.

ONLY NAME THAT LIVES.

Attendance on Anniversary of Second Battle of Ypres is Large.

"Stay close to the Cross, the symbol of Christ our God and our Redeemer", was the message and the appeal of Right Reverend Denis O'Connor to the members of the Canadian Legion in their annual church parade to St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning, the nineteenth anniversary of the second battle of Ypres.

The attendance of officers and men of the Legion was the largest in recent years, and after the service their parade, led by the band of the 57th Rangers, became a short "route march" in the cool April sunshine down Reid street to Charlotte street and by way of George street to the armouries and the adjoining headquarters of the Legion. There the recessional music ceased, and the men were dismissed in a precise military manner as they closed ranks in two files and stood with bared heads as the band played "God Save the King."

Robert Haddow, president of the Peterborough branch of the Legion, walked with the men at the head of the column, and Capt. Jas. Abraham was marshall of the parade.

Rev. Paul Costello, rector of St. Peter's and chaplain of the Legion, met the procession at the doors of the church, and prior to the sermon extended a cordial welcome to the legionaires on behalf of Bishop O'Connor, himself and the congregation. Father Costello said it was pleasing to see so many members of the Legion attend their annual church parade.

"It is a splendid sign that the members of the Legion recognize Almighty God," he added.

Bishop O'Connor read the prescribed scriptural texts for the third Sunday after Easter, the epistle being from the first epistle of St. Peter II: 11-18, and the Gospel being from the sixteenth chapter of St. John, verses 16 to 22. His Excellency's sermon was textless. It was eloquently simple, with only a few gleams of rhetoric, parenthetic in his presentation of the theme of the significance of the Cross.

The Only Name That Lives.

There is only one name in all the world that lives. Bishop O'Connor said. It was the name of one who was born in a stable, lived the greater part of His life in obscurity, and died the death of a malefactor on a cross. Nineteen hundred years have passed away since that time, and yet His name has taken possession of the world and will maintain possession of it. Even one of His enemies in the day of His mortal life said, "the world has gone after Him."

Heroic deeds have been done in His name, magnificent temples have been raised in His honor, and the symbol of His hour of humiliation is proudly displayed at street corners. He lives on and is the great energizing power in all history, Jesus Christ, true God and true man.

The Symbol of Glory.

"The sign of Christ's humiliation became the symbol of His glory," Bishop O'Connor said. "His church had the courage to assume that sign, as opprobrius as the guillotine and the giblet, and make it the sign of her identity. For the cross is the symbol of Christ our God and our Redeemer. As the uniform which you men wore in the defense of your country was a distinguishing sign of the leadership and authority of the King, so the Cross is a symbol of the King of all individuals, of society, the King of Kings and of the whole world.

"The cross points out the greatest fact in the history of the world, the world's redemption, the fact to which all previous history pointed forward and all subsequent history points back."

Bishop O'Connor said that man had been created for an eternity of happiness, but by transgression had lost that heritage. By Christ's redemption and atonement this heritage was restored to makind.

"This fact of man's redemption is basic in our belief; it is the foundation of all things we hope for in the future."

Symbol of Glory.

"The cross is the symbol of defeat, but it is also the symbol of victory and glory. It is the cross that marks the last resting place of those comrades of yours who came to the end of their journey, and sleep side by side in their last bivouac under the sentinel stars of heaven. On the cenotaph the cross is a sign of peace and victory. It is the cross that has all this meaning for us.

On this day on which we welcome you to this cathedral, when you are celebrating one of the most glorious chapters of Canadian arms my message to you is this—stay close to the Cross. In the stress of these days and the days that are yet to be, when the world has been brought near to ruination through greed, with all the secondary sins to which greed gives birth, we need a deeper realization of spiritual values."

Bishop O'Connor recalled that the men of the Legion had regarded their country as worth dying for. Today it was their desire to make it worth living for, and the attainment of that desire would be brought about by a keener appreciation of the steadying influence of spiritual values in the relationships of men.

In conclusion His Excellency repeated his message: "Stay close to the cross. It is the symbol of a defeat, but of a defeat that was changed to a victory. It is the symbol of death that does not last, but is born again unto life. It is the symbol of sorrow turned to joy, and of sacrifice that is hallowed.

The cross is the sign of God's grace and mercy and forgiveness here and hereafter, the pledge of a glorious resurrection."

His body was removed to a Bowmanville undertaking parlor, where Dr. V. H. Storey, County Coroner, ordered an inquest.

A post-mortem examination was made by Dr. C. W. Sleman of Bowmanville, who was unable to find the cause of death. The young man's stomach is being forwarded to Toronto for laboratory investigation. It had been thought that heart trouble might have been the cause of death, but the post-mortem showed no signs of this.

It was stated by his relatives that the young man left his home in Toronto on Thursday at 1 p.m., and had not been seen or heard from since. How he reached this district, forty miles away, is not known. He is said to have been worrying considerably because of in ability to find work.

The only thing by which police were able to identfy him other than the general description was a belt buckle bearing the letter "G." Over $3 was found in his pockets, together with a package of cigarettes, but no papers of any kind by which he might be identified. His body has been removed to Toronto for burial.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

A queer case recently reported is that of a business executive who has been troubled for a number of years with an eruption on the hands. He had gone to any number of doctors and skin specialists without getting any relief. Suddenly he had a severe eruption on the face, neck, hands and forearms. The physician whom he called felt that this was much like an irritative dermatitis, due to contact with some external object, that he began to inquire into all the things that the man might have touched.

Finally, he asked him about his hobbies, and with a start of recollection the patient said his only hobby was archery, and that on both times when he had had this widespread eruption on the hands, face, etc., he had been scraping his archery bows. When they took the wood scrapings from one of these bows, soaked them with water and put the solution on his skin, the place where it touched immediately began to show an eruption.

The best archery bows are made of yew, and poisoning from this wood is not at all uncommon.

There are a number of woods which cause eruptions. One, well known in Japan, is the lacquer tree, and woodworkers all over the world who work in exotic woods are subject to eruptions of this type.

Another one to which many people are sensitive is the West African boxwood, and as this is used in cleaning jewelry, especially in cleaning gold, it frequently happens that eruptions occur after jewelry has been cleaned, or even attacks of asthma.

Other trees which have the same effect are the eucalyptus, the Brazilian walnut, macassar and blackwood.

Sometime the essences or juices from the wood are the cause of the eruption, and it always is found that eruptions are more likely to occur when the victim is perspiring. The freshly-cut wood is, as a rule, the most toxic, but in some instances the wood becomes worse on seasoning.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

J. T.: "What restrictions should be put on the circulation of books from a public library?"

Answer: The question of the transmission of infection by fomites, such as books, has been agitating public health officials and librarians for years. The opinion at the present time is that the danger is very slight. For instance, library workers are no more susceptible to infections than the general population. However, it is possible that certain diseases, such as scarlet fever and diphtheria, can be transmitted in this way. In some libraries books are fumigated when they are known to have come from houses where infectious diseases have been present. It is not easy to fumigate a book. The best way is to hang the books on strings in a room the atmosphere of which is heavily impregated with formaldehyde vapor. As a matter of fact, children who have infectious diseases, such as scarlet fever, diphtheria, etc., should be given nothing but magazines or old books which can be burned at the end of the illness.

CANADA'S VISITING MOTORISTS

By L. B. Howland

Canada is peculiarly in an advantageous position to attract visitors. Her great natural assets, her picturesque scenery, the wonderful diversity of lake, forest and river, the many vast regions still remaining in their natural, primitive state, her world famed sport for the angler and hunter, her healthful and invigorating climate, her summer and winter sports, all combine to carry a widespread appeal to the millions of travel-minded friends living to the south of us, as well as other continents.

Our modern improved highways provide direct and easy motor travel for thousands of miles, thereby supplying a medium for motor car transportation, seductive to our visitors, enabling them the advantages of Canadian oportunities and hospitality, as good roads are one of the principal faotors in bringing motor visitors, who now comprise upward of 90 per cent of all tourists entering Canada.

Without any concerted effort on her part, Canada in 1931 benefitted to the tune of a quarter of a billion of new found money within her borders by visiting tourists, according to the figures of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Last year despite the increasingly indurate times, the revenue from this source was $165,000,000.

This gigantic tourist traffic, which represents the economic disposition of Canada's scenic wealth, her natural facilities for sport and recreation, joined with her healthful climate, is her greatest invisible export, and in 1931 was less affected than any Canadian industry, save gold mining, and equalled more than forty per cent of the Dominion's entire revenue from regular trade.

Of all our exportable commodities, only wheat and paper have ranked above "tourism" in economic importance during the past few years, and in 1931 and last year, there was no Canadian product sold abroad in equal volume with this new "cash and carry" business, which tourists have brought to us, and none whose returns are as widely distributed among Canada's population.

Canada's wheat and flour exports in 1931 totalled $136,000,000, and newsprint together with all other forest products aggregated $165,000,000 in the export market, while metals and metal products of all kinds totalled less than $93,000,000. Thus revenue from tourism within our borders assumed first place as an economic source of revenue among all Canada's industries.

During 1931 the peak tourist traffic year, a total of 4,909,989 United States licensed motor cars crossed the International border headed Canadaward, of which Ontario's portals admitted 3,691,720. Thus based on the figure used by the Bureau of Statistics of an average of three passengers per car, this means approximately 16 million of visitors, who benefitted us to the tune of some 250 millions, spent by these while within our borders.

The effect of this gigantic sum of new found money spent by these millions of visitors, is very diversified and reaches directly or indirectly hundreds of thousands of Canadian pockets. In short all business in the localities visited by this traffic, is greatly stimulated, and this stimulus percolates to practically every community within the Dominion of Canada.

It is only when this great industry—Tourist Trade—is considered in its position, as a huge national industry or business that its true relation to Canadian economic life can be realized. It is only within the past few years that economists have taken cognizance of its importance, and only recently have our bank presidents and public men stressed it as our greatest "invisible asset." To-day its relative importance is greater than ever, being less affected by business depression than any other great basic source of revenue, excepting gold.

It seems obvious, that since this great "tourist industry" has stood up so well, that it would pay abundant dividends, if added effort were invested to increase its volume. Though possibly an "invisible export" this trade viewed as a leading economic factor in our trade balance is a tangible profit, and the quarter billion of money it produces in a single year, is outside money, almost wholly retained where the visitors spend it.

If you wish to analyze this huge motor car traffic that centers Canadian portals, you will discover it as serving to visualize something of its immensity, that if these 5 million cars that entered Canada in 1931, were arrayed in procession and allowed 30 feet space apiece, they would form a motorcade, that would more than reach around the earth at the equator.

The largest item on the whole list of our commerce with neighbor nations is tourist traffic. It stands in first place among our economic sources of revenue. It stands in first place in relation to our social understanding. Few among our public men even yet show any real appreciation of this great new business, nor any inclination to grasp the opportunity existing to foster or actively seek to supply means to increase it, yet in 1931 it brought into circulation in Canada $112,000,0000 more than our wheat export, of which we hear so much said.

This class of trade means the direct employment of thousands of people in Canada, and gives work to thousands more in our factories and shops, putting immense sums of money into circulation in almost every branch of trade, its diversity of benefit is perhaps one of the principal reasons why so little attention has been given it. It must be kept in mind that goods and services bought by our visitors while in the Dominion, are even more profitable to Canada than will be an equivalent value of goods shipped into other countries. The reason is obvious, as the goods and services sold to our visitors are retailed to them, and all the profit therefrom remaining in Canada.

In the light of these facts, it remains surely apparent that the Federal, Provincial and community authorities of Canada, should cooperate in promoting still greater interest among prospective visitors in a vacation in the Dominion. In these times, it seems doubly important, to not only hold, but bend every effort to increase this leading source of wealth. Mr. E. N. Smith, executive vice president, and administrative head of the American Automobile Association has said from his view point, that our Dominion tourists traffic revenue, can be increased to a billon dollars annually. Yet thus far there has been little or no interprovincial collaboration in the cultivation of this lucrative traffic, let alone any concerted national activity to this end.

Motor Nomading

We do not fully appreciate how lucky we are in this country. Somebody says, Let's go, and we immediately pack up the duffle, decorate the family buss with sausage like bundles, and hit the trail, for parts unknown, like carfree gypsies. It does not even occur to us that this continent is the only land in the world where motor jaunts are as common as three squares a day. In other countries cars are like gold teeth, are evidence of wealth and position, but here a family that cannot take a sizable tour under its own gas, is rare indeed.

A motor vacation is one of the handiest routes to the romance that we all crave, providing you know the right places to go for the kind of thrills you fancy. It is impossible to imagine a vacation in the north country being a disappointment, although one will meet plenty of people whose holiday has left them cold, because their outing has been largely a search for creature comforts and conventionality. But not go with those who seek the great outdoor romance, with its wonderful refreshment, that comes from a change in ones mode of living, with its consequent transformation of personality.

In order to assist in perpetuating this flow of visitors to our borders, good genuine hospitality is accentual, by way of compatible care, courtesy and common sense, not only pertaining to the courtesy attached to those who are behind the wheel on our highways, but all our hostage institutions, merchandising and catering to their various requirements. Individual effort is accentual in supplying the great requisition, and in this respect I beg to tell you I am concentrating every effort towards securing the immediate construction of a highway traffic bridge, to cross the St. Lawrence River, at a point nearest the foot of Lake Ontario and Kingston as possible, in order to facilitate a better communication with our neighbors to the south, thereby supplying a means of augmenting the impetus of visitors, to the benefit of all the counties as contained in the whole of Central Ontario.

Apart from supplying this bridge utility, very much can be done by way of maintaining a liberal supply of fish, natural to these waters, by the process of not only conservation, of our prevailing stocks, but by increasing the supply in the way of isolating suitable waters as a fish sanotuary, where proper feeding, breeding and protection dominates, under special supervision, until the young fish are sufficiently developed to withstand the endurance of the larger waters.

And in order to augment this movement I would suggest inaugurating a well organised fishing club, to function, in not only taking the initiative in instituting the best ways and means of securing the desired results, but this form of hospitality would appeal to our visitors as a formidable, dignified worthy protection, in aiding anglers to enjoy fishing privileges in a true sportsmanship manner, besides acting as a governor restricting compliance with the laws and regulations governing Canadian waters.

By spanning the St. Lawrence River at a point suggested, thereby contributing adequate means of International communication, joined with a conserted effort on the part of an organization to stabalize the fishing resources, will accomplish more than anything else I can suggest towards aiding in maintaining and perpetuating this lucrative traffic, the results of which are so fervently enjoyed by Canadians, specially the populace in the territory included in the Trent, Rideau and Kawartha water aheds.

In conclusion I beg to emphasise the urgent necessity of establishing a co-operative effort by all the influential authorities from the various communities directly interested, beseeching the respective Governments to lend assistance in accomplishing the objectives.

Respectfully,
L. B. Howland.

80-MILE STRETCH OF OPEN SEA NO TERROR FOR VANCOUVER MAN

School Teacher Crosses Storm Tossed Channel in Canoe Four Times.

USES DOUBLE PADDLE

VANCOUVER, April 23.—(Central Press Canadian). — The Gulf of Georgia which separates Vancouver Island from the mainland of British Columbia is a dangerous stretch of water over which Pacific storms often blow their hardest. But it has no terrors for Walter H. Lambert, science teacher at King Edward High School here.

He has made four crossings of the gulf in his canoe and has conquered rollers several feet high and storms which chased many of the small power craft to shelter.

"I get tired of the stuffy classroom and like to feel the wide open spaces of the ocean," he explains. "The first time I paddled across alone I really didn't know what a job I was undertaking, but since then I have learned a lot. I still like it though and will not desist even if my friends think me crazy."

Lambert is a former wireless operator and a strong swimmer. He keeps an ordinary 18-foot canoe at the Point Atkinson lighthouse near Vancouver and two summers ago was enjoying a quiet holiday when he decided to paddle to Victoria, 80 miles away.

"I loaded that canoe down with so much equipment and grub that there was little freeboard," he recalls. "I thought I would take a week for the trip and I am a heavy eater, so I took plenty of supplies."

Fortunately he ran into fine weather and had very little difficulty with his overloaded craft. He didn't carry a compass, however, and had some difficulty with his navigation.

Uses a Double Paddle.

Lambert uses an eight-foot double ended paddle and his toughest experience was on his second voyage across the gulf when he ran into a choppy southeaster. He had to paddle on one side only to keep the canoe's nose into the wind and waves and he was exhausted after several hours of swinging the oversize paddle in the air.

He usually starts his trips at night, when the sea is calm, hoping to conquer most of the 22 miles of open water before the usual daytime rough weather arrives. He has equipped his canoe with a lantern so that he will not be run down by ships which pass in the night.

On his last trip—made during the Easter holidays—Lambert set a new record for a non-stop canoe solo across the gulf, covering the Vancouver-Victoria run in 26½ hours. He was so exhausted that he was barely able to pull the canoe up on the beach at the Willows and fall asleep in the sand.

Lambert remembers with sorrow his first trip, when his canoe was overloaded and he had no compass or riding light; his second trip when he ran into waves which threatened to engulf him so often that he almost gave himself up; his third trip when he ran into a sand bar at the mouth of the Fraser River and didn't know in the darkness how safe it would be to climb out of the canoe and shove clear before the falling tide left him high and dry.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light
No unkind word our lips shall pass.
No envy sour the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal—
The good of all mankind.

MILLBROOK

An Institute branch that boasts a number of young mothers among its membership, with a consequent number of small children in the homes, most of these young folk having to take their lunch to school, decided for its April program to consider the theme, "Those Lunches."

Several of those present declared the complaint most commonly heard in their homes, when 'kiddies' came from school was that of monotony in the contents of the lunch-box—a "deadly tendency for the mother who has to pack one daily," being the speaker's verdict.

As a suggestion to offset the monotony of contents the speaker urged that variety in appearance was a decided help, so put forth the idea of buying the paper serviettes in different designs and using a varied color and pattern each day. Colored cellophane "even if it is a piece you have saved from some parcel," was another 'variety item' mentioned, also using the green paper which comes from florist's shops instead of the ordinary waxed paper on occasion.

"Of course there are the nice boxes in which we buy many of our groceries and other things to-day; some of them are of waxed material and will stand several washings, but I want to add the warning never, never, to use these once they have become the least bit worn or soiled. Then too we may have a variety in the kinds of bread we use for sandwiches, and if a leaf of lettuce or sprig of parsley is included with the filling even that bit of green acts as an appetizer, as I know well from experience with my own children in this matter of lunches."

Varying the sandwich spread from meat, to cheese, peanut butter, or chopped nuts like walnuts or filberts, were suggestions from the audience, the speaker urging the mothers to consider salad dressings as taboo, and "confine yourselves to a nice seasoning of salt; often the highly seasoned dressing is an intestinal irritant, and does not add to the food value, nor the cultivation of a correct and healthy appetite in your child at all. "Meats that are popular for sandwiches were mentioned by the listeners, besides the ham which is always a good standby, included lamb, Hamburg steak, corned beef, tongue and one mother told of putting some cold liver through the food chopper, adding a tiny bit of dressing, a little lettuce leaf, and placing between slices of buttered brown bread. The result was satisfactory, for when her little girl and boy came from school they cried out, "What was in the sandwiches to-day, mother? My, they were good."

As an unusual combination the visiting speaker told of using thin slices of buttered bread rolled round a sardine, fastened with a tooth pick, or round a stick of asparagus nicely seasoned, or a stick of celery filled with cream cheese. "Make the filling generous in your sandwiches," was the comment from the chair; "remember they are the main feature of the lunch, and if skimped in the 'interior' they may be left in the box because they are lacking in the right degree of tastiness."

Varieties of salads that may be used happily in lunch boxes with thin bread and butter, or graham gems well buttered, were mentioned toward the close of the day's study theme, placing these in nice little containers being emphasized as an aid to appetite, opinion varying as to the popularity of the sweet variety of breads such as nut and raisin as against the ordinary white or whole wheat loaf. The speaker urged, however, that when a sweet bread was used that ought to be the sweet course for the lunch-meal—no cake or sweetened gems being then necessary. "On the whole pastry is a thing children are better without, and it is very rarely indeed that I let my small folk have a tart in their lunch-boxes. I would rather give them ginger bread, fruit bread, plain sponge cake, or cookies for the day's sweet."

Naturally the necessity of fruit, preferably an apple or an orange, in the child's lunch was stressed, and the importance of a vacuum bottle of cocoa or soup "nice and hot at the noon hour," while a surprise once in a while in the way of some stuffed dates, or a little fudge, was also included.

A.Y.P.A. To Repeat Its Minstrel Show

By popular request St. John's A.Y.P.A. will repeat their minstrel show in the Parish Hall on Wednesday, April 25th. Under the direction of George Wesley this show met with huge success on two previous occasions, and although it is being slightly varied for this presentation, it will reach the high standard set on the last occasion. Novelty numbers, snappy songs, and jokes, six up-to-the-minute end-men, and a veteran director, in the person of George Wesley, and Dick Lush as interlocutor combine to make an outstanding performance.

ALBURY, Australia.—(CP).—Declaring Australia could not eat all the peaches the canners could can, officials advised fruit growers to ascertain the best type of peach for export to the United Kingdom and strive to develop that class of trade.

BELMONT W.I.

Committee Reports Sum of $17.62 Spent for Relief in Past Month.

HAVELOCK, April 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—The April meeting of Belmont Women's Institute in the town hall of Preneveau on Thursday afternoon, April 19, with fifteen members present. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Anderson who is ill, the chair was occupied by the vice president, Mrs. Tinney.

The roll call "A home made remedy for man or beast" was well responded to, the members giving their favorite remedies, and it was surprising to learn the value of common baking soda in the home remedy department. The correspondence included an invitation from Trent River branch to attend their summer meeting to be held on June 14th, the speaker will be Miss J. E. Robson of Donfield, Ontario, who gives a choice of six different subjects. A letter was read from a member expressing appreciation for sympathy extended in time of bereavement. Another letter from a member, acknowledged the receipt of flowers sent by the branch during a recent illness. A letter was read from Miss Leonard, teacher at S.S. No. 2 thanking the branch for the use of an oil stove which had been loaned the school during the winter months, and on which warm meals were prepared for the scholars who brought their lunches.

The sick and relief committee reported the sum of $17.62 spent for relief purposes during the past month.

After the business had been disposed of a short period of community singing which always features the meeting was enjoyed. A reading by Miss Nellie Tinney "Old memories in the piece box" and a paper on the Institute Ode, prepared and read by Mrs. Joseph Seabrooke were much enjoyed. Hostesses were Mrs. R. Anderson and Misses Iva Smith and Mary Anderson.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

MONTREAL PRODUCE

Butter prices continued to react from recent high peaks during last week's trading on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market, as fine weather again stimulated production. Freshly arriving No. 1 butter from nearby points, in carlots or less, ended the week at 24c a pound, while finest graded No. 1 New Zealands or Westerns brought 24½c a pound, a drop of 1½c to 2½c from the previous Saturday's levels. Receipts totalled 5,911 boxes, against 7,326 the previous week.

The cheese market eased ¼c a pound on current make fresh Ontarios becoming 11c to 11¼c a pound. Summer white and colored Ontarios held unchanged at 11½c to 12½c a pound. A total of 367 boxes was offered for sale during the week, compared with the preceding weeks' total of 504 boxes.

Graded shipments in carlots or less of eggs brought 19½c to 20c a dozen for A-large, 18c to 18½c for A-medium, 17½c for "B," and 16c to 16½c for "C." Arrivals amounted to 15,383 cases. The previous week 13,637 cases were offered for sale.

Quebec potatoes sold at 95c to $1 per 80-lb. bag, with New Brunswick Mountain in similar quantities at $1 to $1.05. Prince Edward Island Mountain in 90-pound bags were $1.20 to $1.25.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Enlarged speculative demand, although chiefly for small lots, lifted prices of all grains Saturday; wheat a maximum of nearly 2c a bushel.

For the most part buying was associated with possibilities that monetary developments at Washington would prove to be of a stimulating character as to grain values. The day's trade in grain, however, was at an end before results of an apparently inconclusive parley between President Roosevelt and Senate advocates of mandatory legislation regarding silver could be ascertained.

Wheat closed nervous at fractional setbacks from the day's top, but 1c to 1½c above Friday's finish; corn, ¾c to 1⅞c up; oats ¼c to ½c advanced, and provisions varying from 5c decline to 5 cents gain.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 23. — Spurred by active buying and a strong Liverpool close, wheat futures registered gains of 1c to 1¼c in the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on Saturday. Trading in the short session was brisk.

Fairly good export demand for Canadian wheat was the main incentive which enabled May delivery to close at 65¾c, July at 66½c, and October at 68¼c.

Some of the outside buying appeared to resemble investment. Size of the export business was hard to determine, but it was estimated between 500,000 and 1,000,000 bushels. Premiums were offered for wheat that could be got to the Atlantic seaboard before May 10, indicating wheat now in store in Eastern positions has been sold.

Liverpool optimism sent prices there up 7/8d to 1⅛d per 100 pounds, Chicago closed nearly 2c higher.

Cash grains held steady while coarse grains trade was sluggish, values climbing in sympathy with wheat.

Bailieboro Farmers Start Work On Land

BAILIEBORO, April 23.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Farmers in the vicinity have commenced activity on the land, and should the weather remain favorable, it is expected that seeding will commence next week.

The soil is still quite moist, but land which has a good drainage is plowing fairly well.

The moisture extends only a short distance into the soil and the ground drinks the rains in very readily. The soil is still showing the effects of the tremendous drought which prevailed last summer.

There has been very little growth in the district as yet, and it is impossible to tell just to what extend the wheat and new seeds have been damaged. Farmers generally are not too optimistic regarding the prospects. The crops look very brown and have been severely weakened. However, it all remains to be seen, and a few warm days which will start the growth will tell the tale as to the damage wrought the crops by the winter ice and severe frosts.

1,315 NEWSPAPERS IN PRESS GROUP

Associated Organization Hears President Speak on Rights of News Bodies.

NEW YORK, April 23. (AP). — The largest membership in its history—1,315 co-operating newspapers—was reported to the annual meeting to-day of the Associated Press.

Members of the organization heard the report of Kent Cooper, general manger, outlining the year's endeavors, voted on five members of the board of directors, and prepared to hear Cordell Hull American secretary of state, the principal speaker at the annual luncheon.

Frank B. Noyes, president, who presided at the luncheon, and who gave the annual toast to the President of the United States, also spoke briefly on the freedom of the press.

"We believe" said Mr. Noyes' prepared address, "not only that the constitutional right of the free press should be guarded, but beyond that, that the collection and distribution of the news should be equally scrupulously guarded that it shall not fall into the hands of special interests, whether capitalistic or Communistic, but shall remain unbiased. That is our trusteeship, and, God permitting, we will honor it."

QUEBEC'S BEARS SINGLE IN MIND

Waken From Winter Sleep at Same Time and Look Around for Medicine.

QUEBEC, April 21 (C.P.).—The fact that the hibernation of animals appears to be regulated by nature was indicated here by the almost simultaneous appearance from their long winter sleep of bears housed at Charlesbourg Zoological Gardens, and some others at Les Saules, just outside this city.

Although miles apart the animals entered into their winter slumber about the same time and at the approach of spring resumed their usual activities within but a few hours of each other.

Apparently the long fast has had no ill-effects on the bears for they showed no signs of abstinence from food and their first move was to get some natural medicine, the bark of trees.

Organization of Dominion Wide Body Inaugurated at Dinner.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Canon Scott Urges Veterans to Carry on in Peace as Did in War.

TORONTO, April 23.—"The first Canadian contingent, the men who sailed in that great convoy of thirty-six ships from a rendezvous at Gaspe Bay on October 3, 1914, to fight for the Motherland in the greatest war the world has ever known, is a closed corporation; its membership cannot be increased. As the years roll on, its numbers are becoming less and less." Major-General Garnet Hughes told 800 veterans of the 1st Canadian Contingent at the re-union dinner held on Saturday night at the Prince George Hotel.

Many Express Regrets.

Nearly 1,200 men from cities, towns and hamlets from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and points in the United States, registered for the convention. Dozens of messages were received from others expressing regret at their inability to be present. Private L. Stewart, an original 13th Battalion veteran, sent a telegram from Clarke City via Father Point saying that owing to ice conditions he could not attend.

Captain F. J. Waters, chairman of the Originals' Club, acted as toastmaster. Among the distinguished guests at the head table were Major-General Sir Richard Turner, V.C.; Major-Gen. V. A. S. Williams, Brig.-Gen. C H. Mitchell; Ven. Archdeacon Colonel F. G. Scott, senior padre of the 1st Canadian Division; Premier George S. Henry; Colonel Hon. T. A. Kidd, Speaker of the Ontario House; Mayor William T. Stewart, Brigadier T. V. Anderson, Major-Gen. Robert Rennie, General A. E. Swift, Colonel J. E. L. Streight, Lieut.-Col. Baptist Johnston, Lieut.-Col. W. H. Scarth, Lieut.-Col. F. E. Birdsall, and Captain J. J. Perry, president of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion.

Old War Tunes

During the evening, the 43-piece band of the Originals' Club, conducted by Musical Director W. J. Holden, played the old-time war tunes, the assembly joining in the choruses. The toast to "Our Fallen Comrades" was given by Venerable Archdeacon Colonel Scott, who recited a poem which he composed overseas. The "Last Post" and "Reveille" was sounded, and the gathering stood in rigid attention for two minutes. Hon. George S. Henry proposed the toast to the first Canadian Contingent. As he rose to speak, the band burst into "How Dry I Am" and the entire assembly lustily sang the words. A broad smile passed over Mr. Henry's countenance. Sir Richard Turner responded. He called the names of the various units which composed the first Canadian Contingent, and the members present arose to the cheers of their comrades.

Major-General Hughes gave the toast to "Our Guests," which was responded to by Mayor W. J. Stewart.

Following the dinner, old-time friendships were renewed, and tales of the stirring days of 1914 in camp trenches were retold.

Organization of a Dominion-wide body of veterans, who went overseas with the first Canadian contingent in 1914, was inaugurated at the reunion with Major-Gen. Hughes as temporary Chairman of the committee. Captain Waters of Toronto was named Vice Chairman. The committee responsible for the inaugural efforts of the "Originals" included: Captain Waters, Colonel Ackerman, Peterborough; W. A. Reid, Petrolia; T. Roy McLeod, M.D., Muncey; A. E. Finly, Sarnia; Colin Clarke, Kirkland Lake; T. Hobbs, Toronto; R. B. Gamble, Niagara Falls; S. Pointer, Belleville; R. J. Ferguson, Belleville; T. Morgan, Toronto; Colonel Chisholm, Halifax; R. R. Whitehead, London; Major Rice, St. Mary's Ont.; Captain Douglas, Chatham; B. Lovett, Guelph, and A. White, Kingston.

Church Service.

"Now, my comrades, you are still the same men. The war does not change us. We sometimes change ourselves. You are the same men; you have the same courage; you have the same aspirations, and the same ideals which led you to volunteer first to enter that great struggle. It is your duty now to carry on in time of peace as you carried on in time of war."

These words wree voced by Ven. Archdeacon Colonel F. G. Scott, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.A. LL.D., when speaking yesterday afternoon at a memorial service of the first Canadian Contingent re-union, commemorating the Second Battle of Ypres. Approximately 1 200 men were marshalled in the University Avenue Armouries for the occasion, while throngs of interested spectators filled every seat in the galleries, and others stood at all vantage points.

Courage Emphasized

Archdeacon Scott declared that it was up to them to stand shoulder to shoulder, as they had done in the war, and "bring our country through these times of anxiety." He recalled the terrible experiences of Ypres and said that he spoke of the past to emphasize the courage of the men——especially those who had no real object in going to war. "When I look at you and think of the gallant deeds you have done, it makes one's heart fill with thankfulness and pride," he said.

"That first bitter experience shaped and moulded the whole course of the Canadian Corps in France and set a high mark which we all strove to live up to," the padre went on. "To-day we are gathered here, and we, especially remember those who laid down their lives in the war. We think of them, not as dead; I can never think of that. If the war did one thing for me, it was to strengthen my faith in the immortality of the soul."

3 AUTO PLANTS SHUT BY STRIKE

Fisher Body, and Chevrolet Workers Totalling 10,000 Walk Out.

RAIL WAGES UNSETTLED.

WASHINGTON, April 23.— (C.P.)—Strike orders affecting 10,000 workers in three automobile plants darkened the industrial picture of the United States to-day.

Calls were issued yesterday for strike at the Fisher body factory at Cleveland, where 7,000 men were employed, and at the Chevrolet Motor and Fisher Body plants at St. Louis, involving 3,100 workers.

A hopeful note appeared in the bituminous coal industry with President Roosevelt and Hugh S. Johnson, N.R.A. chief, striving to end labor troubles. The President asked striking miners, numbering nearly 50,000 to return to work under a new wage structure announced by Johnson.

Both sides in the rail wage controversy fired new statements before the public, each blaming the other for the discord. President Roosevelt has suggested that the 10 per cent. deduction from basic wages be extended six months longer. The present agreement expires June 30.

In the automobile industry, strikes already were in effect at tool and parts factories at Detroit and Toledo. The National Automobile Labor Board meets at Detroit to-day in a renewed effort to settle the difficulties.

Wage and union recognition questions led to the Cleveland strike order, voted at a meeting of metal trades workers. The strike was ordered effective at 7 a.m. to-day.

The St. Louis strike, Union leaders said, resulted from the refusal of the Chevrolet and Fisher Companies to re-employ 118 men, most of whom had been active in Union affairs.

FIRE DAMAGES LINDSAY HOME

One Million Bushels of Grain Pass Through Town Rail Yards During Week.

DISTRICT NEWS.

LINDSAY, April 23 (Special to Examiner).—Fire on Sunday morning caused damage estimated at three hundred dollars at the residence of E. A. McPhee. The blaze broke out in the roof, presumably from the chimney, and had eaten its way into the attic before being subdued. The family had left on a visit to Toronto for the day shortly before the fire was noticed.

The funeral took place to-day from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. James Windrum, Victoria Avenue, of an old resident of the town in the person of Samuel Dayton, in his seventy-ninth year. The deceased was born in Uxbridge, where interment took place, and for nearly half a century the late Mr. Dayton was employed by the Beal Leather Company as engineer both in that town and in Lindsay.

The equilization committee of the County Council met in Lindsay during the week-end, when it was decided to inspect the assessment roll of all the municipalities, (starting May 8th. The committee will meet with the assessors and clerks, and after thorough inspection, make any necessary changes in the assessment rolls. This action is taken as a result of an agreement between Lindsay and the council, made when the town agreed to withdraw their equilization appeal on the stipulation the county investigate the assessment rolls.

During the past week fully one million bushels of grain passed through Lindsay and Peterborough from the head of the lakes to the east. This movement called for seventeen extra trains. A few years ago when the grain movement was heavy three times this amount passed through Lindsay weekly. The passenger business on this division is reported as being forty per cent. better in the first three months of this year.

Alex. Harvey, who is employed by Kelly and Smith Co., of Fenelon Falls, sustained painful injuries on Saturday, when his hand was badly mangled when it came in contact with an electric fan.

The proposal initiated by the Town Council to use the abandoned C.P.R. line from Lindsay to Burketon as a public highway has been abandoned. There has been stiff opposition to the scheme among the residents of the different municipalities, several petitions having been presented to the municipal councils.

The political pot is simmering in real earnest in the new riding of Victoria and Haliburton. The Liberal-Conservatives open the campaign on Monday, April 30th, with a big nomination meeting in Lindsay, at which Hon. Leopold McCauley will be the chief speaker. There is much speculation regarding the choice of the convention as standard-bearer. Clayton Hodgson, lumberman, of Haliburton, will allow his name to go before the convention, but Reeve Joseph Handley of Burnt River and Ernie Windover of Minden, who have been mentioned as candidates, have announced that they have no intention of seeking the nomination. The names of C. G. Frost, K.C., Lindsay, and Alex. McFadyen, of Cameron, have been mentioned, but these gentlemen have made no statement. It is understood that on Saturday several residents of the north country were in town urging the nomination of Col. R. I. Moore, ex-Mayor of Lindsay. The Liberals selected Wm. Newman, former M.L.A. for the old riding of North Victoria, nearly a year ago. They claim they have the new riding pretty well organized. Mr. Newman is an outstanding temperance advocate, and as member of the Legislature strongly opposed government control legislation. He is also opposed to the beer and wine measure and will issue a manifesto to the electors, it is understood, in a few days.

The sudden death took place on Sunday of John Walker, a well-known resident of the town. The deceased, who was in the employ of the Kawartha lumber Company, suffered a heart strain while at work on Saturday. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

This photo shows firemen fighting a fire at the plant of the powerful political newspaper, El Pais, at Havana, an incident in the unrest displayed by Cubans which has threatened another major political upheaval in the island republic, and brought the government of President Carlos Mendieta face to face with a cabinet crisis. The fire, started by incendiaries who disagreed with the paper's policies, came as an aftermath of the suicide of Colonel Roberto Mendez Penate, leader of the Nationalist party, who had been denied an important post in the Mendieta cabinet.

Lace For Bridesmaid

(Courtesy Good Housekeeping)

White satin for the bride is the traditional fabric, and lace for the maid of honor possibly such a gown as the one sketched.

Of course if something else has been planned for the maid of honor—something that is frilly and flower decked—this gown would do for the bride's mother, or for the bride to dance in after the honeymoon. Lace is just such an adaptable and dependable material.

At any rate, this lovely gown has a slip of silk-like crepe, rhinestone clips, U-shaped back and covered shoulders. It comes in French blue, peach or black.

British Ski Party Heads For Mystery Mountain

Here's a 30-mile long ski-run which the British skiing party headed by Sir Norman J. Watson (INSET) hope to traverse on their way past Mount Waddington, the 'mystery' peak of British Columbia. The party has left its base camp at Tatla Lake and by now should be approaching 'Fury Gap', the narrow valley which guards the eastern entrance to the narrow valley area. This photograph of Mount Waddington, unusual because it shows the peak clear of clouds, was taken last summer by the Royal Canadian Air Force. It gives a magnificent view of the famous Franklin Glacier which even in summer time, with all snow gone from the hills on each side, is nearly two miles wide. The glacier ends at the head of Knight Inlet on the B.C. coast. With 20 feet of snow on top it should afford a wonderful glissade for Sir Norman and other members of this party, Wing Commander E. B. Beauman, R.A.F., Clifford White,

Threat Of Icebergs In Atlantic Worst In Years

Just twenty-two years since the awful tragedy of the Titanic, the north Atlantic shipping channels are once again reported infested with dangerous icebergs. This threat to shipping is reported to be the worst in years with some 600 already reported ready to cross the routes of Atlantic vessels. Coastguard cutters have been dispatched to study their movements and keep in touch with shipping. Not since the Titanic has there been a major disaster from icebergs. Since that catastrophe, however, 13 nations have paid into a common fund to protect shipping lanes from such huge bergs as are shown above, any one of which is capable of wrecking the largest vessel. These pictures were taken in Greenland from whence the bergs come.

Happy Moment For British Workers In Shipyards

A photograph of the scene at the gates of the shipyard at Clydebank, England, when more than 600 men restarted work on the unfinished hull of the giant Cunarder, known as No. 534. Work was suspended on the ship more than two years ago because of financial trouble, but it is expected more than 6,000 persons will find employment on it now. When completed in the fall, the Cunarder is expected to be the world's largest, displacing about 73,000 tons, and able to carry 5,000 persons at 30 knots. Part of the vessel may be seen in the background.

Friends in the city of Mrs. A. Murphy of 379 Stewart street and her daughter, Miss Edith Murphy, member of the staff of the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, will be interested in the following article from the Ottawa Journal: Mrs. Isabel Skelton, who has recently completed a biography of Thoms D'Arcy McGee, is the daughter of Mrs. Murphy and sister of Miss Edith Murphy. She is the wife of Dr. O. D. Skelton of Ottawa, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. The article follows: "A memorable and moving tribute to Mrs. Isabel Skelton, gifted biographer of Thomas D'Arcy McGee, was paid on Saturday, when Senator the Hon. Charles Murphy presented her with a gold locket containing a lock of the martyred patriot's hair. The locket, richly and beautifully designed, was the personal gift of Senator Murphy, and the presentation followed a luncheon given by the Senator, at which Mrs. Skelton was guest of honor. Among those present was D'Arcy McGee, K.C., nephew of the famous statesman.

"In making the presentation, Senator Murphy dwelt eloquently upon the insight, understanding and sympathy which marked Mrs. Skelton's biography. While the task of the avearage biographer involved consideration of his or her subject's life and work upon a single stage or in a single country, Thomas D'Arcy McGee had left his mark upon three countries: Ireland, the United States and Canada.

"It was the great distinction of Mrs. Skelton's biography that it dealt faithfully and justly with McGee's contributions to all three lands, an achievement which, necessitating research, scholarship and the highest literary integrity, was the best tribute to the author's ability. Mrs. Skelton had vindicated McGee as the Prophet of Confederation, and because of that, because of her contribution to justice and to historical accuracy, she had earned the affection and gratitude of all who believed in Canadian nationality.

"Senator Murphy made graceful reference to Mrs. Skelton's books dealing with Ontario's pioneer women, coupling them with the "Yellow Briar," the recent and widely-discussed work by "Patrick Slater." The type of Irishwomen they had depicted was epitomized in Mrs. Skelton's own life and character.

"Mrs. Skelton, replying, charmed her hearers with a speech of appealing beauty. Thanking Senator Murphy for his 'precious, historic souvenir,' so full of 'beauty, imagination, delightful fancy and meaning,' she told how she had been impelled to embark upon her biography of McGee.

"Her father had heard the great orator speak 'and something of the resplendent glory of McGee's words always shone in her fathers face when he told us about him.' He had always believed that full justice had not been done to McGee's memory.

"While she realized that it was the height of presumption for her to undertake such a work, she had been fortified by the advice once given by St. Bernard: "Drive out bashfulness by a sense of duty... be prepared to answer for the single talent committed to your charge ...and attend to your work.' This day, the kindness now shown her, would remain a precious memory.

"D'Arcy McGee, K.C., spoke of the deep appreciation of 'the McGee family' for Mrs. Skelton's biography. M. Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of The Journal, also spoke briefly.

"About forty guests of Senator Murphy attended the function, including representatives of Montreal and Toronto. The luncheon was held in the Chateau Laurier."

Miss Pearl McCarthy, writing in the Mail and Empire, says of the production of the Bach B Minor Mass by the Mendelssohn Choir on Saturday night at Massey Hall, as a period to Toronto's Centennial Musical Week, that the Mass was sung magnificently. In speaking of the soloists, she says: "Dorothy Allan Park, taking the role at comparatively short notice, proved once again that she is not only a delightful singer but a musician. And her successive pieces of work show that she is not standing still in self-satisfaction." In speaking of Hubert Eisdell, the writer says: "Perhaps the best tribute to Hubert Eisdell was that paid by a man who knew practically nothing about music and to whom Eisdell's name meant nothing at all. At the conclusion of the performance, this man's first remark was: 'I'd say that man Eisdell knows his Bach; I felt I get all the music meant when he sang.' That must have been a fairly unanimous opinion with regard to the tenor who shuttles across the Atlantic as the musicians' choice for Bach events. Mr. Eisdell's singing of the Benedictus air was exquisite, with all the freedom which only long taste and care can permit."

Bishop White has received in the past ten years twelve decorations from the Government of China for distinguished services to the country in several lines. Although the Toronto press of to-day says that Bishop White was born in Norwood, Ontario, he came there as a young boy with his parents from the Old Country, and lived there for some years, being identified with the mercantile life of the village. He was educated later at Wycliffe College, went to China as a missionary the year after his ordination in 1897, and was Bishop of Honan from 1909 to 1934. He was chaplain overseas with the Canadian expeditionary forces in the Great War.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Bread pudding used to be the bugbear of every family dinner. Small boys hated the sight of it and the older members of the house endured it because it was an "economy dish". With a little thought, any clever cook can transform stale bread or cake into a most interesting dessert. Bread puddings are particularly good with "oven dinners", as they are baked for forty or fifty minutes at a moderate temperature—just the three hundred and fifty degrees that the roast requires to finish.

Chocolate is such a popular flavor that it makes bread pudding a favorite dessert. For best flavor, the best ingredients must be used, so the housewife who wants value turns to chocolate of a brand that has been used for over 150 years. Accurate measurements in rich chocolate is essential and the ounce-marked squares give best results. They are deeply marked and break readily into the required amount.

1½ squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces, 1½ teaspoons vanilla. 1½ cups stale bread cut in ¼ cubes, 3 cups milk, 1 cup sugar, 3 egg, slightly beaten.

• • • • • • •

Add the chocolate to milk in double boiler and heat. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Combine sugar, salt and eggs. Add chocolate mixture gradually, stirring vigorously. Add vanilla. Place bread in greased baking dish. Pour mixture over it. Place dish in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 F.) 50 minutes, or until pudding is firm. This is delicious served hot with butterscotch hard sauce, or cold with cream. Serves 6.

BUTTERSCOTCH HARD SAUCE

½ cup butter; ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 1 egg yolk, well beaten; 4 tablespoons milk. Cream butter thoroughly. Sift sugar and add gradually, creaming together until light and fluffy. Add vanilla, egg yolk, and milk, and beat well. Makes 1¼ cups sauce.

Brushing and Cornstarch Treatment Keep Eyebrows Trained, Says Gladys

Alice Faye darkens her lashes, adding beauty to eyes

"Dear Miss Glad: I have very nicely shaped eyebrows, and always keep them neatly plucked. They are, however, very unruly, and refuse to lie smoothly in place. Can you tell me how I can train my brows to lie in their proper alignment."

"PATTY"

Brushing is usually sufficient to train the eyebrows to lie in their proper alignment. But extremely stubborn eyebrows may be trained by the use of plain cornstarch. Before retiring at night, mix enough cold water with a small amount of cornstarch to form a thick paste. Then brush the brows into shape and apply the paste over them. Allow this paste, which soon hardens, to remain on all night. The next morning, remove it with a soft cloth, and then brush and lubricate your brows with a small brush that has been moistened with plain castor oil or vaseline.

"Dear Miss Glad: My hair has improved so since I've been following the advice in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet, that I simply had to write and thank you. My hair used to be so thin and dandruffy, but it certainly is a clean, thick crowning glory now. However, I've rather large pores on the cheek areas of my face, and a friend claims that it's because I use a dry rouge. She says I should use a liquid rouge instead. Do you think dry rouge really harmful?

"BETSY."

A good brand of dry rouge will not harm your skin if you prepare your face properly for the reception of the rouge, and cleanse it thoroughly after its use. As a matter of fact, I far prefer the dry rouge to liquid rouge. In the first place, rouge in liquid form is difficult to apply so that it looks really natural. The dry rouge is much easier to blend naturally on the cheeks. And in the second place, liquid rouge is generally drying to the skin. If you cleanse your skin properly, lubricate, stimulate and protect it sufficiently, the dry rouge should in no way harm it.

"Dear Miss Glad: I always massage a good hand lotion into my hands before I retire at night. However, despite this fact, my cuticle is always dry and hard, and my nails brittle. I've heard that oil manicures are good to correct such conditions, and I'd like to try them. Could you tell me just what the entire process is? MARGARET."

The hot oil manicure differs from the ordinary manicure only in that in the former, the fingertips are soaked in warmed olive oil, instead of warm, soapy water. To administer such a manicure, cleanse your hands thoroughly and file your nails to the right length and shape. Then dip your fingertips in a bowl of warm olive oil and allow them to soak for about five minutes. After this time, remove them and wipe off the excess oil with a soft cloth or cleansing tissue. Then continue your manicuring in the usual fashion. Hot oil manicures of this type not only help to correct dry, brittle nails, but also soften the cuticle and render cuticle-cutting practically unnecessary.

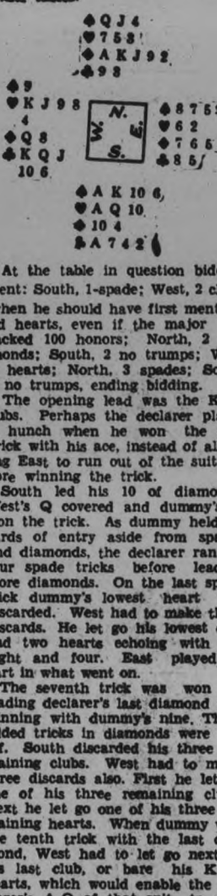
A TOP SCORE

A top score for the hand below was made by a very pretty play, which was missed, either by playing the hand at another make, or through less skillful play, at all other tables.



At the table in question bidding went: South, 1-spade; West, 2 clubs, when he should have first mentioned hearts, even if the major suit lacked 100 honors; North, 2 diamonds; South, 2 no trumps; West, 3 hearts; North, 3 spades; South, 3 no trumps, ending bidding.

The opening lead was the K, of cubs. Perhaps the declarer played a hunch when he won the first trick with his ace, instead of allowing East to run out of the suit before winning the trick.

South led his 10 of diamonds. West's Q covered and dummy's K won the trick. As dummy held no cards of entry aside from spades and diamonds, the declarer ran off four spade tricks before leading more diamonds. On the last spade trick dummy's lowest heart was discarded. West had to make three discards. He let go his lowest club and two hearts echoing with the eight and four. East played no part in what went on.

The seventh trick was won by leading declarer's last diamond and winning with dummy's nine. Three added tricks in diamonds were run off. South discarded his three remaining clubs. West had to make three discards also. First he let go one of his three remaining clubs. Next he let go one of his three remaining hearts. When dummy won the tenth trick with the last diamond, West had to let go next to his last club, or bare his K of hearts, which would enable the declarer's A-Q of that suit to pick up the K and win a second heart trick. West let go a club, retaining only his Q of clubs and his K-J of hearts.

Dummy's nine of clubs was led and West won his first trick. South let go his 10 of hearts, retaining the A-Q of that suit, forcing West to lead from his K-J of hearts up to declarer's A-Q, and giving the latter a small slam at no trumps on a game bid. The way the cards were distributed and South's stripping tactics and end play, left West helpless. What might have happened to the bidding, had West first shown hearts, it is impossible to state. Perhaps the hand might have been played at spades, and suffered as other players discovered.

TABOO PAGEANT.

BRAMSGATE, England, April 23.—(C. P. Cable.)—This popular resort on the Kentish coast which has been celebrating its jubilee of incorporation by a series of pageants has been forbidden by the Lord Chamberlain to depict Queen Victoria and the Prince consort.

The Royal couple lived for a time at Ramsgatae and it was proposed to portray them taking an afternoon drive in the style by Frith, the painter, celebrated for his "Derby Day" and "Railway Station."

Surgeon's Photo Of Loch Ness Seaserpent Convinces Skeptics Monster Really Exists

LONDON, April 21 (CP Cable)—A surgeons' photograph of the Loch Ness monster to-day provided a new puzzle to scientists some of whom had made up their minds the monster was a seal or some other known animal viewed through credulous eyes.

The picture, taken by Dr. R. K. Wilson, London surgeon, who visited the loch during the Easter holidays, and published in The Daily Mail, shows an animal resembling a swan without a bill. It was some distance away when he took the snapshot, the doctor said, and he was too intent on getting the picture to observe the animal which stayed on the surface of the loch for only a short time.

David Seth-Smith, curator of mammals at the London Zoo, said the photograph convinced him his previous conviction the monster was a seal was erroneous. He admitted he did not know what it was but said it was no animal or fish known to British inland waters.

William Calman, keeper of Zoology at the British Museum in South Kensington, said that if Dr. Wilson had made a mistake in the size of the animal he photographed he would be led to believe the picture showed some diving bird, possibly a crested grebe.

The doctors' picture was believed to be the best photograph ever obtained of the monster, although numerous drawings of it have been made.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

I'm still receiving questions about the advantages and disadvantages of whippy shafts. Shafts in all clubs except the niblick and putter should have some whip. When the whip is properly placed in the shaft it helps to overcome much of the tension that exists in every player's swing. It certainly encourages more wrist action, which in turn means more speed in the clubhead. And we all know that the power and accuracy with which the clubhead strikes the ball depends on the speed at which it travels in the bottom of the swing. But, these benefits cannot be had unless the whip is well down the shaft. In fact the closer to the clubhead, the better.

Babe Ruth's Second Homer Fails to Hold Sox Who Win by 9-6 Count.

SATURDAY'S GAMES.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.

The various and sundry baseball "experts" and ordinary fans who predicted Chicago Cubs would have to rely on their tremendous slugging power to get into the National League pennant race evidently overlooked Lonnie Warneke, the tall right hander from Mt. Ida, Ark.

For the past two seasons Lonnie has been regarded as one of the outstanding hurlers of the league. Starting this season he set out to prove he was one of the best. In two games so far he has pitched two victories and has allowed just two hits, one in each contest against Cincinnati and St. Louis. If any flinger ever performed that particular feat before, the record books don't show it, although they record four instances of pitchers who allowed only one hit in two consecutive games.

Some fine relief hurling by Buck Newsom, who granted only two hits in 62-3 innings, and equally effective slugging by George Puccinelli, who hit two homers for four runs, paved the way for the Browns to beat the White Sox 6-5.

The Detroit-Cleveland contest was halted by rain.

Featuring the abbreviated American League program Saturday, in which two games were erased by the weather, was Babe Ruth's homer number two. It could not match the hefty batting of the Red Sox, however, and the Bostonese vanquished the Yankees 9-6. In Philadelphia the A's played neat ball behind "Sugar" Cain's equally neat hurling and Washintgon took a 7-2 defeat.

In the National League, Carl Hubbell twirled the Giants to a 3-0 win over Boston Braves. Chicago chalked up a fourth straight win by whipping St Louis 2-1.

Glen Cunningham Sets One Mile Mark

LAWRENCE, Kas., April 23. The name of Indiana stood beside two of the five new Kansas relay records yesterday—and likely will stay there for a long time—and Glenn Cunningham's was opposite the carnival record for the mile, an event not ordinarily held in this first major west of the Midwestern outdoor season.

The "Hoosier" mile and two-mile relay teams, anchored respectively by Ivan Fuqua and Charley Hornbostel, set impressive new lows for their distances. The mile relay team beat its own 1932 relay mark. Running the four quarters in 3.16.4, with Fuqua retaining, over Cunningham, the 10-yard advantage given him on the last lap by Hornbostel, Indiana's new two-mile record of 7.46 beat the old mark by 6.5 seconds, held jointly by Chicago and Ohio State.

Because the weather was too cool for his best, Cunningham made no effort to beat the world mark in the special mile race. He was content to conquer Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania by 20 yards in 4.12.7.

Dove of Peace Hovers Over Central Ontario Senior Baseball Circuit After Torrid Three-Hour Session at Cobourg —Motor City to Play Games Away From Home on Public Holidays.

HOME AND HOME SERIES TO COUNT IN C.O.B.L.
O.B.A.A. LEAVES SETTLEMENT TO LOOP LEADERS

With Oshawa agreeing to play a series of home-and-home games in the C.O.B.L. this year, the Central League granted them a leave of absence for one year at Saturday's meeting in Cobourg. The session was called to iron out the difficulties existing between Oshawa and the Central Ontario League, and this arrangement was the outcome of a torrid three-hour session. Delegates of the league were present from Cobourg, Oshawa, Belleville, Kingston and Peterborough, while Bill Kay and Ernie Gibbard represented the O.B.A.A.

It was Hugh Campbell's suggestion that brought about some action when all else had failed and the issue still remained deadlocked. Mr. Campbells, president of the Peterborough Club, suggested that suitable arrangements should be made to have Oshawa play two games in each of the other active C.O.B.L. towns, with these teams playing back in Oshawa with a return guarantee. This was when no other understanding could be reached.

Hugh Brown, Oshawa delegate, then brought up the question of what a 'suitable arrangement' would be. They finally agreed that Oshawa should play two games in Peterborough, two in Belleville and two in Kingston, one game counting in the C.O.B.L. schedule, with the Oshawa club being guaranteed twenty-five dollars for the added expense of the second game, and that Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston should play one game each in Oshawa, the games to count in the C. O. B. L. schedule. Oshawa would play in the Central League towns on holidays and at home on Wednesdays. Mr. Brown made the motion Mr. Campbell seconded it, and it carried without a dissenting vote. On these conditions, Oshawa was granted a year's leave of absence to play in the Toronto Ulster League.

Lengthy Secret Session

President Max Swanston called the meeting to order at the start and advised the representatives of the four clubs concerned to retire and confer on the matter, stating they simply had to get together, for the good of baseball. Hugh Campbell of Peterborough, Art Casterson of Kingston, Harry Drew of Belleville and Hugh Brown of Oshawa, retired to discuss all angles of the question. They were out more than two hours, and returned finally to state that no agreement could be reached.

Asked if they were against a three-team Central League, the Peterborough and Belleville delegates stated they were emphatically. The Kingston man said he preferred a four-team league with Oshawa in, but as a last resort would stick to the decision made in Toronto by the C.O.B.L. committee, that is allow Oshawa its release in return for Oshawa playing a doubleheader in each Central League town. Mr. Campbell moved that if Oshawa would play the other C.O.B.L. teams with mutually satisfactory financial terms, the league should operate as a four-team one. It carried, but later was quashed.

They argued back and forth over various angles, Mr. Brown said that Oshawa would not be satisfied to play under any circumstances as a C.O.B.L. team, without a release. A hot dispute arose over the question of whether or not the C.O.B.L. committee to Toronto at the O.B.A.A. convention had the right to release Oshawa, the Belleville and Peterborough clubs stating they had not this right, but were to report back to the league. Mr. Brown said, since they were no further ahead than they were months ago, that they must positively agree on something at this time, though he thought it was too late now to reopen the question of an interlocking schedule with the Ulster League.

Ernie Gibbard expressed the opinion that the O.B.A.A. was satisfied that the C.O.B.L., through its committee, had released Oshawa for the year, and the O.B.A.A. would leave it up to the Central League to settle the question itself. President Swanston laid the blame for the loss of an interlocking schedule at the door of the Belleville and Kingston clubs of the Central League. Harry Drew of Belleville stated flatly that unless arrangements could be made for an interlocking schedule with the Ulster League, Belleville would not vote for Oshawa's release. Mr. Gibbard said they could send club delegates to the Ulster meeting Wednesday and make arrangements for an interlocking schedule, but Hugh Brown felt it was too late now and the Ulster League would not be interested.

Agreement Reached

With the whole question deadlocked and nobody getting anywhere after three hours of discussion, Mr. Campbell finally suggested that they might get together on a home-and-home basis with Oshawa for this year, and this was the turning point that sent the delegates away shortly after, feeling they had accomplished something, though each faction had to give way to the other to some extent. The Oshawa representative also offered to play exhibition games when possible in the other C.O.B.L. towns, if these would further aid these towns. Regarding the two games to be played each in Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston, the first one would be a league contest. The Oshawa team agreed to play in Belleville on May 24th, in Kingston on July 1st, and in Peterborough on Civic Holiday.

Feeling that their action of the previous week was too drastic, the league passed an amendment permitting C.O.B.L. teams to play exhibition games with Napanee this year. They also ruled out the "ten percent travelling expenses" clause and voted to have each home club send thirty-five dollars a game to the league treasurer, with travelling expenses for the various clubs handed out at the end of the schedule. The session then adjourned.

CHIEFS SCORE 6 TO 5 VICTORY OVER TORONTO

Jack Sherlock's Single in Ninth Scores Andy High With Decisive Run.

NEWARK WINS 6-2.

Baltimore Orioles Thump Montreal in Both Ends of Double 4-2 and 11-7.

(By the Associated Press.)

Looked upon as the weakest team in the league before the season started, the Syracuse Chiefs may cause some consternation to other International League outfits this season under Andy High's piloting.

If Andy can dig up a few effective pitchers the club is almost certain to do much better than had been expected for there is not a little batting power concealed in the Chiefs' line-up.

Playing their third game of the season, the Chiefs scored their second victory yesterday as they nosed out Toronto Maple Leafs, 6-5. Jack Sherlock's single with one out in the ninth scored High with the decisive run.

Newark Bears fell on John Berly for five singles in the eighth and, with the aid of a walk and an error, scored four runs to defeat Rochester Redwings, 6-2. Young Jack Larocca gave up only six hits in handing the Redwings their first defeat of the season.

Win Twin Bill.

Recovering fom the disastrous series with Rochester, Baltimore Orioles thumped Montreal Royals in both ends of a double-header, 4-2 and 11-7. Curly Ogden blanked the Orioles in the opener until the eighth when Del Bissonette's homer with one on tied the score at 2-2 and Marvin Olson and Charley Hargreaves followed with two more circuit swats for the winning runs.

The second game was a batting feast which Baltimore won by virtue of six and three-run rallies in the fifth and sixth frames.

Split Double Bill.

Powell's home run and singles by Marshall, Sington, Susko and Fold gave Albany three runs in the 10th inning and a 6-5 victory in the first game of a double header with Buffalo Bisons, but the Bisons came back to take the second contest 6-1, as Johnny Wilson gave up only three hits.

ALBANY, April 23.—Bob Smith, second string catcher of the Toronto Leafs, stepped to the plate in the second inning of the game with Albany Saturday, found two of his mates on the bases, and hit an Al Shealy pitch over the right field wall for a home run. The three runs this prodigious wallop produced enabled the Leafs to win 5 to 3, and grab the series, two games to one.

Smith wasted no time at the plate as he lit on Shealy's first pitch to him. It was a high, fast ball inside, and the Toronto catcher timed it perfectly. He chose a most auspicious moment to become the first man this year to hit over the right field barrier, as it was his first time up this season.

CHICAGO HITS CARDINALS HARD TO GAIN 15-2 VICTORY SUNDAY

Chuck Klein's Third Homer of Year Chalked Up in Cubs' 22 Hits.

GOMEZ HOLDS RED SOX.

Following up his opening game performance when he held the Reds to one hit, Warneke turned in the same feat against the Cardinals yesterday as the Cubs won the weirdly kind of game by a 15-2 score. The only blow Lonnie allowed was a double by Jim Collins in the fifth which led to the two St. Louis runs. It followed a walk to Spud Davis; then a passed ball let Davis score and Collins reached third. Jim the Ripper tallied after Gene Moore's fly. Manwhile the Cubs rappd the brothers, Dean, Dizzy and Paul, and Jim Winford and Clarance Heise, for 22 hits including Chuck Kleains' third homer and one by Gabby Hartnett.

Take League Lead

The victory gave the Cubs the league lead as the champion Giants suffered their season's fire setback at the hands of the Braves. The score was 6-5 as Boston rapped Freddy Fitzsimmons freely and held onto its early lead even after Homer Peel hit a pinch homer in the ninth.

Brooklyn Dodgers handed the Phillies their sixth straight defeat, 7-5, collecting their winning runs on a four-score outburst against George Darrow in the eighth.

A crowd rather than any particular game furnished the American League feature. Boston Red Sox, who have been gunning for attendance records ever since the season started, drew a paid attendance of 44,361 to the new Fenway Park to see them take an 8-1 licking from the Yankees and Lefty Gomez.

PEDEN AND AUDY WIN AT MONTREAL

Desperate Riding in Final Hour Gives Leaders One-lap Margin.

MONTREAL, April 23.—"Torchy" Peden, flaming-haired giant from British Columbia, yesterday was salting away his winners' share of a six-day bicycle race for the 23rd time since he turned professional back in October, 1929.

Peden, aided by a game display by the little blonde, Jules Audy of Montreal, captured first honors in Montreal's 10th international 6-day race which ended here just before midnight on Saturday. It was the sixth time on various tracks of the Continent that the big and little combination had swept home victorious.

Twelve thousand who filled every vantage point in the Forum watched a keen battle during the last hour of continuous sprints between the winners and Alf. Letourner and Henri Lepage, the reconstructed "Red Devil" team, who placed second. Letourner and Lepage held a wide margin in sprint points and only needed to draw level in distance to win the race.

But every time either of the "Red Devils" picked an angle of the track in hope of shaking off opposition, Peden or Audy was right on his rear wheels. Repeatedly the Red team tried to break loose. But it could not be done.

EQUIPOISE SCORES IN HANDY FASHION

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 23.—Champion of the United States handicap division, Equipoise, C. W. Whitney color-bearer, on Saturday had made his 1934 debut a winning one. Racing in the Philadelphia Handicap before a Saturday crowd of 25,000, "Ekky" won handily.

The free-striding son of Pennant and Swinging was unextended to win by a length over S. W. Labrot's Springsteel. Four lengths further back came the Anall Stable's Larranage.

Packing 150 pounds, Equipoise raced the mile and one-sixteenth in 1.44 2-5, and earned $5,800. The victory sent the gallant thoroughbred's total winnings to $328,770, and placed him ahead of Gallant Fox, with only the mighty Australian champion, Phar Lap, and Sun Beau topping him in winnings.

NATIONAL LOOP SLUGGERS HIT 21 HOME RUNS

More Than Four Times Number of Homers Made During First 17 Games in 1933.

AMERICAN ALSO HIGHER.

NEW YORK, April 23. — The amazing wave of home-run hitting in the National League featured the play during opening week of the major league season.

National League sluggers blasted out 21 home runs in the 17 games played during the period ending on Saturday night. This is more than four times the number of homers made in that circuit in the first 17 games of 1933, when only five four-baggers were registered.

This increase unquestionably is due to the carrying power of the uniform "live" ball, because virtually the same big-time pitchers were operating as last year and the number of actual hits shows only slight increase.

The American League, which used a live pellet, somewhat similar to the uniform ball, last season, also showed an increase in home runs, although by no means comparable to that in John Heydler's circuit. In the first 17 American games of 1934 American sluggers drove out exactly the same number of homers as National batsmen, 21, but this was an increase of only five over the first 17 games of 1933

In actual hitting, National players registered 267 safeties in their first 17 contests this season, against 259 for 1933. The American division turned in 284, against 251 for last year.

The Giants Cubs and Dodgers each accounted for four homers, while the Pirates made three, the Cardinals and Reds two each, and the Braves and Phillies one each. Chuck Klein, Joe Medwick, Chick Hafey, and Len Koenecke each made two.

In the American League the Athletics drove out the most homers, six, while the Yanks made five, the Tigers registered three, and the Indians, Red Sox, and White Sox two each. The Senators have only one, and the Browns none. Foxx, Ruth, Dickey, Johnson and Bonura were most active in the home-run business.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By C. J. P.

The senior baseball situation is settled in Central Ontario for this season, we are more than pleased to announce. And no doubt there will be "Amens" heard on all sides. Four meetings inside of a month and reams of press copy on the struggle made it look like another world war or something. Well, while a real peace pact wasn't signed exactly, still an armistice was declared for this summer—a sort of armed neutrality to save baseball this side of Toronto. At a meeting in Cobourg Saturday, with the five C.O.B.L. teams and the O.B.A.A. represented, the matter was ironed out and the loop will continue to operate this year.

• • • • • • •

It's like this: The Central League will not have an interlocking schedule with the Ulster League. But it will have three games per team with Oshawa, that is Oshawa will play here twice with the Petes and the Petes will play in Oshawa this summer, games to count in the C. O. B. L. schedule. Likewise with Oshawa and Belleville, and Oshawa and Kingston. The warring factions simply couldn't agree after three hours of argument on anything else. This was the best arrangement that could be made. It's not perfect, but still it could be worse. At least we have a four-team league.

• • • • • • •

Here's the odd angle: Oshawa is in both leagues this year! Yeah, they'll play their regular schedule in the Ulster League of Toronto, having been granted a year's release to do so, but they'll also play nine games in the Central League! It was a compromise and should suit everyone, under the circumstances. The credit goes to Hugh Campbell, Peterborough delegate, and Hugh Brown of Oshawa, for finally getting the tangle straightened out. Both wanted something and both got it, and still both saved the situation. Peterborough insisted upon a bigger loop than a three-team one, and got it. Oshawa insisted upon a year's release to play in the Ulster League, and got it. Both had to give in to some extent, Peterborough by voting to give Oshawa a release, and Oshawa by agreeing to play home-and-home games at a mighty decent monetary arrangement with the Petes, Nats and Ponies. They wanted something but both men were big enough to give away something, too.

• • • • • • •

Belleville were bull-headed till late in the session, saying they would not vote Oshawa a release unless they got an interlocking schedule with Ulster. Even though Belleville had muffed that interlocking plan in Toronto April 6th! President Swanston laid the blame wholly at the doors of Belleville and Kingston and they had no comeback. But later, Harry Drew of Belleville said his club would be willing to give an extra guarantee for an interlocking schedule. Kingston wouldn't. However, it was too late then. The Ulster League's schedule is drawn up and they aren't interested in interlocking with anyone. They didn't even show up at the meeting. So they'll operate as a four-team league this year, with Oshawa also having permission to play in the Ulster League. No doubt, war will again break out next year, but we won't worry about that now.

• • • • • • •

Well, what was gained Saturday? That's what some will say. Something, though not a great deal, is the answer. At least we gained more than Oshawa. They knew they had their release at the start of the meeting, yet they finally agreed to play three more games in the C.O.B.L. towns, and for only twenty-five bucks. That means they'll come here for a guarantee of, say, seventy-five dollars and play two games in one day. We'll go back there and play one game and get fifty smackers. You can't beat that. They also agreed to play exhibition games when possible with Peterborough, Belleville or Kingston in these places if they were wanted. This chap, Brown, was reasonable enough. But he's a smart bird, too, and figured they were getting what they wanted in the loop's permission to play with the Ulster gang, so he could put the Oshawa club out to some extent to oblige the Central League. It proved fair enough all around.

• • • • • • •

We're satisfied, and most of them seemed to be when they rolled down their sleeves, wiped off the brow and wearily left the hall after the tough three-hour grind. We had a headache built for an elephant! We imagine the Belleville scribe will like the arrangements okay, but undoubtedly the Kingston writer (who wasn't present) will find something to knock—having been born with a hammer in his mitt. As for the Oshawa scribbler, he has several times lately invited us sarcastically to "Come up and see us sometime", meaning we couldn't as the Petes wouldn't play there this summer. Now, we are in a position to accept the invitation and we'll be up sometime this summer.

• • • • • • •

So the C.O.B.L. schedule will open May 24th with Kingston in Peterborough and Oshawa in Belleville. Oh, yes, they raised the ban on playing exhibition games with Napanee, figuring such a ban was too drastic and not in the interests of sportsmanship. The session was plenty heated at times, though nobody was punched in the nose. Oh, yes, we intended to report what that two-man delegation went to Oshawa last week for and re-opened the question of the Dukes coming in as a full-time team. They went to interview employers of players there to see if it was true, as the Oshawa executive said, that the boys wouldn't get off work for trips. They found out that thirteen of the fifteen prospective players worked for General Motors, and the manager of the company assured them that the boys could get off anytime to play in this league! That excuse was wiped out, but Oshawa still wanted to play in the Ulster League—and, we suppose, if we were in the same position we would,

• • • • • • • too.

What the men's softball situation here will be is hard to say yet, but no doubt they'll get squared around shortly. Latest development is the dropping out of Regent Theatre, Dick Cowan getting fed up 'cause some of his prospective players are bashful about jotting down the Jawn Henry. Dunlop Tires may be in yet, and another local men's team is thinking it over about joining. We hear Ross Currie will go out with Brintons who should have a smart squad. The local winner will need to be good when they meet Oshawa as "Da Preem" Whitely—ace speedball hurler there whom three Toronto teams want—will be with an all-star Oshawa outfit, pointing toward the Ontario championship. We understand it's an even better team than their Senior "A" squad last season, but how it can enter Intermdiate "A" competition is another one of these mysteries to us.

MAPLE LEAFS HIT WELL IN EARLY GAMES

Gather 43 Safeties and 25 Runs in First Three Fixtures.

WINGS LEAD LOOP.

NEW YORK, April 23 (AP).—The steady swatting of Rochester Red Wings as they took three straight decisions from Baltimore Orioles, furnished one of the few high spots in a rather inconclusive set of figures set up by the International League clubs in their first week's games.

Since each met only one opponent in the four days from Wednesday's opening contests through Saturday, the results fail to come close to showing the relative strength of the various teams. The Red Wings were the only one of eight to win all the week's games and Baltimore, consequently, was the only loser straight through.

Rochester piled up 29 runs, including four homers, on 41 hits. Toronto Maple Leafs gathered in 43 hits and 26 runs in the actual scoring in three games against Albany's Senators. The first game, however, goes into the records as 9-0 for the Leafs as it was forfeited in the 10th when the count stood 13-11 in Toronto's favor.

Bears Leads in Homers.

Newark Bears bobbed up as the home run leaders with six circuit blows, two of which decided games to give them a 3-1 edge against Buffalo, Rochester and Toronto turned in the best fielding performances, each committing two errors in three games.

All through the week the pitchers had a bad time of it and of the 24 starters in the week's dozen games, only three were still in there at the finish. Ohad Kimsey of Montreal and Fred Fussell of Syracuse waged a nine-inning duel the opening day and Gene Schott of Toronto pitched a full game against Albany on Saturday.

The annual meeting of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association will be held on Tuesday evening, at 8 p.m., in the McDonnel street club rooms of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club.

It is expected that there will be a large number of delegates from out of town as there are several important items to be brought before the meeting The election of officers for the coming year will take place immediately after the meeting.

It is to be hoped that a large number of the Peterborough bowlers will be on hand to welcome the bowlers from the outside clubs. H. Freeman and B. Chesler are the official delegates from the local club.

There will be no carpet bowling at the club house this week.

MOOSE MENACED BY STARVATION

Hundreds of Isle Royale Herd Lost Lives During Winter, Possibly from Disease.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 19 (CP)—Wireless messages from a lonely fisherman at Chippewa Harbor have led authorities to believe the giant moose herd of Isle Royale, southeast of Fort Williams in Lake Superior, is menaced with extinction by disease or starvation.

Sitting in his shack on the ice-bound shores of the harbor, Holger Johnston, the fisherman, tapped out messages to H. D. Ruhl, chief of the game division of the Michigan Conservation Department, which said hundreds of moose had died.

Ruhl, hearing reports that the moose were suffering from a complaint resembling Texas cattle fever, inclined to the theory disease and severe weather, rather than starvation, are depleting the ranks of the animals. Johnston, however, maintained the moose are dying of starvation and that another winter such as that just passing will exterminate them.

Feeting the animals says they become very tame and lose weight. Large patches of hair drop from their bodies, or rubbed off as they scratch themselves against trees in an effort to rid themselves of ticks. Finally they become paralysed and die. Ruhl thinks this description may indicate Texas cattle fever has entered the herd.

Elaborating on his first report Johnston told Ruhl he had found five dead moose in the immediate vicinity of Chippewa Harbor and that the few living animals he had seen were lean and in poor condition.

Ruhl replied by sending the fishermen a list of 12 questions in an effort to learn more about the condition of the dead animals and asked Johnston to protect the carcasses if possible so they might be examined by an expert as soon as possible after navigation opens.

Johnston so far has been disinclined to believe the moose are dying of disease. He said: "I think it is a case of plain starvation as there is no winter feed for moose whatever unless they develop legs like mountain goats and necks like giraffes. I think another winter like this will see the finish of the moose."

PALO ALTO, Calif., April 23 (AP) —John Lyman, Stanford weight star, bettered all existing marks for the shot-put, when he tossed the iron ball 54 feet and seven-eights of an inch in the 41st annual Stanford University of California track meet here Saturday.

Lyman's toss was checked and rechecked by meet officials, several of whom were A.A.U. representatives. It bettered the existing United States record of 53 feet 6 inches, made a few weeks ago by Jack Torrance at the Louisina State relays, and tied here last week by Lyman.

RETAIN U. S. TITLE

PHILADELPHIA, April 23 (AP)— The Philadelphia German-Americans are the first soccer team ever to win the national amateur soccer championship two years straight.

The local booters attained their title Saturday by downing the Heidelberg F.C. team from Pittsburg, 2-1, in a close duel. Eddie Davis and Johnny Laub were the scorers for the Philadelphians. Joe Stenzel counted the Pittsburger's only tally.

Local Volleyballers Make Good Showing

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. volleyball team made an excellent showing Saturday in Toronto in the Ontario Intermediate volleyball tournament. The Peterborough squad, put in with a strong group, finished second and gave the Western Ontario group runners-up a stiff fight before bowing to them. The preliminary group had these teams in: Y.M.H.A. of Toronto; Toronto Central "B"; St. Catharines, Belleville, and Peterborough. The Peterborough entry took its two games from Y.M.H.A., won two more when Central "B" defaulted, and split even with St. Catharines and Belleville. But since St. Catharines twice defeated Belleville, the Saints finished first, one game ahead of the Petes.

The latter then met Kitchener, winners-up, in the Western group, and won the first game, 15-8. But they dropped the next two, after hard battles ,15-11 and 17-15. It was considered a fine showing by the Y.M.C.A. here. Rev. Daniel managed the team and Doug Loomis went along as coach. The team was made up of: J. M. Hardill, Stan Payne, A. E. Dryland, D. T. Crawford, A. B. Rhodes, Cliff Cadd, C. I. Richardson, A. M. Fitzgerald.

LEAFS AND WINGS OF 1934 ERA EQUALLY GREAT AS OLD-TIMERS

"Individual Hockey Stars of To-day Compare Most Favorably With Greatest Players of Any Period," Says "Cyclone" Taylor After Viewing Exhibition Game on Vancouver Ice.

VANCOUVER, April 23 (CP)— Fred W. "Cyclone" Taylor, termed the "greatest hockey player of all time" by Tommy Gorman, Lester Patrick and other sages of puckdom, considered the great players of Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs and says they compared "most favorably" with the hockey greats of his own era.

Taylor, with Ken Paul, formerly of Winnipeg, officiated in the exhibition game Saturday night between the two famous National Hockey League clubs.

"After watching the Red Wings and Maple Leafs in action," commented Cyclone, "any opinions oldtimers might hold that the class of hockey of to-day was not as good as that of yesterday would be dispelled.

"In spite of the fact they played on a water-covered ice surface, the play of these stars was most phenomenal. Their passing showed a complete mastery in this regard, and the way they went in on the goal, especially Lewis, Conacher, Kilrea and Jackson, was marvellous.

"Although the match was an exhibition, one could readily see the style of play that must be produced in the league contests.

Favorable Comparison

"The individual stars of to-day, judging by the Toronto and Detroit players, would compare most favorably wth the greatest players of any period.

"Of course, in the old days only a few could earn a place on a professional team. Twenty years ago there were only eight professional teams: five in the East and three in the West. With nine men on a team, there were only about seventy players who could have places in major company.

Mr. Taylor contended it was impossible to compare the style of play in the N.H.L. with that of his own period. He pointed to the fact substitutes were practically unknown in the early days, whereas players are given relief frequently now.

"The oldtimers went 60 minutes without a rest, and they learned to reserve their strength and energy. While, no doubt, 90 per cent of the present-day players could go 60 minutes if they had to, their whole style of play indicates they go all out for three or four minutes, depending on the relief they know will be given them."

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

William Langly,
R.R. No. 1, Norwood.

You asked for your number, so here it is. Eleven, and it is one of the best as regards vibrations. So often this number is called the spiritual, and should be most inspiring to you. You are born under the sign of Scorpio the Scorpion, and you are ruled by Mars. January and July are your best months. Tuesday is your best day. The question you asked cannot be answered through this column, anyway. I think you should be able to answer it yourself. Your type are inclined to put things off till the last possible minute, and then rush frantically about trying to make up for lost time. Scorpio people, are usually quick tempered, and want others to praise them whether they deserve praise or not. Life mate should be sought under the signs of Gemini, Cancer, Sagittarius or Capricorn. You are best suited to engineering, as regards your writing, but you will have to settle down to definite study if you wish to make a success of your life.

Alfred E. Mills,
75 Park Hill Road, City.

Your writing seems to be that of impetuous youth. You will have to settle down to more definite purpose in life, before your writing really shows the true character which will guide you through the rest of your life. The manner in which your writing leans forward, shows impulsive qualities, but the uniform formation, indicates that you are gifted with a keen intelligent mind, and a good share of initiative, together with rapid thinking and visualization. Now these qualifications should assist you to travel along the pathway towards success, if you make it a point to create sufficient ambition for yourself. At preesnt you are not very careful about detail and so do not accomplish your very best work at all times. That, however, is an attribute of youth, and no doubt you will overcome it as you grow older. Your tall 't's' show that you imagination is of the visionary type. You are quite nervous, and seem to be in need of a great deal of encouragement. Do mechanics interest you?

Cyril Scott,
Pinecrest Farm, Peterborough.

Your writing is quite individual in its formations, and seems to definitely point towards the science of engineering. I do not mean the actual engineering, but rather the scientific side, this might be carried out in aviation. I presume you are on a farm and so you will no doubt think the idea as illustrated above is too far fetched, but I can assure you it is not, in these days of advanced knowledge. You might even have the ability later on to invent something of your own which would help the farmer. Your general character is very good, but I am afraid that you allow yourself to indulge in fits of moodiness. The 't' as you portray it, lends added interest to your inventive mind, because it delineates sensible imaginative powers. I do hope that this will appear in the paper in time for you to see it, because I know that it will help you to make up your mind what you want to be. Your number is five. Your birthsign is Aquarius the Man. You are ruled by Uranus. April and August are your best months. Saturady the lucky day.

Miss Aileen Flett,
266 Westcott St., City.

Your writing is indicative of a very intelligent mind, and it delineates you as energetic and mentally alert. You are frank and progressive, and you have keen insight and you are optimistic. Your type as a rule are very methodical, but I do not think you are inclined to overdo this characteristic, because you are quite moderate in all things. Your type of writing expresses excellent health, but there is a wee bit of nervousness noted on the slant of some of the letters. Your 't' bar crossings are illustrative of a normal willpower, and shows that when you wish to be determined about anything, you can be. The long lower loops attendant to the 'y' and the 'g' reveal interest in out-of-door activities and show grace and poise as in dancing or swimming. Your disposition is usually about the same, and so your friends know what to expect of you. Your birthsign is Sagittarius the Centaur. You are ruled by Jupiter. February and June are your best months, and Thursday is your luck day. Your most important number is eight.

Miss Rita Elizabeth Thornton,
R.R., Peterborough.

Your handwriting delineates you as a clever person, genteel, refined and honest. You are kindhearted, sympathetic and energetic. All your capital letters portray artistic tendencies and excellent taste as regards personal clothing. Work where routine and detail were necessary should appeal to you, but not if under too strict supervision. You have an excellent imagination, a fairly even disposition; normal willpower and a generous characteristic. There is a noteworthy portrayal in the terminals of your letters, which describes the ability to make yourself complete tasks, which have allowed yourself to commence. Your capital 'R' is indicative of a keen interest in out-of-door recreation. There is a slight nervous tendency noted in your writing, but it is typical of you because you cannot domineer.

BRITAIN PUSHES RECOVERY PLAN

Government Goes After Iron and Steel Manufacturers to Clean House.

CHECKING COAL MINES.

By OSCAR LEIDING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Eng., April 23 (A.P.)—With the precision of a chess player, Great Britain is carrying out a recovery program designed to enlarge her export trade and to increase the productivity of her farms.

This "new deal" which started when the National Government abandoned free trade, entered a new phase this week with the adoption of a plan of federation of the iron and steel industry under an authoritative group not unlike an American code authority.

The iron and steel industry is one of the four key groups involved in the program, the others being cotton manufacture, coal mining and agriculture.

The government has taken a hand directly, so far, only in agriculture and coal mining, but a "big stick" hangs over iron and steel manufacturers in the form of a threat to let the protective tariff expire next October unless the industry voluntarily puts its house in order.

Must Reduce Prices

Wages, hours of labor and related matters do not figure in the industrial program. The objective is purely to attain an efficiency which will reduce prices and put the nation in a better competitive position in the world market.

The coal mining regulations—incorporated in an act of parliament in 1930—are not fitting in satisfactorily with the general program, and the government now is seeking a solution.

The Coal Mines Act was designed to bring about a co-ordination of prices and regulation of output on a quota system. Colliery owners have complained that the restrictions interfere with their export trade, and the government now proposes home consumption quotas for various districts and uncontrolled production for export. A general agreement on a measure of this type appears imminent.

WOMEN CAN'T HAVE BOTH

Winning Ways and Sluggish Liver

Clear Complexion and Poisoned System

It seems just bad luck for most women that the times when they want to look and feel their best, something happens. Sick headache, nerves, aches and pains and a feeling of depression. It shows in their complexion too—blotchy skin, yellow eyes and puffy face.

It is for just these occasions that Beecham's have been giving relief and health to millions of women during the past 50 years. Take Beecham's—only 25c a box. Beecham's will clean out your system—clear up your skin blemishes—put sparkle into your eyes and vivacity into your whole being. Beecham's are purely vegetable and quite harmless.

Beecham's PILLS
THE GREAT REGULATOR

TRENT RIVER.

Mr. and Mrs. George Alley attended the funeral of the former's cousin, the late Victor Newell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newell, of Belmont, Thursday afternoon. Deceased met death by drowning in Stoney Lake in company with Tommy Hull of Dummer, who also met the same tragic death. The bodies were recovered Wednesday. Interment the following day in Maple Grove cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Carnrite, who were called to Chicago owing to the critical illness of their son Dorwin, report his condition somewhat improved.

The river is considerably higher. The main wharf is almost submerged, while the wharfs along the shores of the cottages are entirely covered.

Members of the Ladies' Aid are looking forward to a large attendance at the afternoon tea and sale of useful and fancy articles on Wednesday, May 2nd, when Mrs. Thos. J. Brown has generously offered her home for the occasion.

Mrs. Clarence Craddock and children left Friday for Trenton, after spending the past few months with her husband at Cedar Isle.

PROGRESS MADE IN 29 YEARS IN CAR INDUSTRY COMPARED

Ford Car of 1905 and One of 1934 Stand Side by Side.

SAME PRIMARY PRINCIPLE.

The romance of automotive engineering is objectively demonstrated by the contrast of the 1934 model Ford with one of the company's early products of 1905 vintage shown side by side in the display rooms of Hood and Cummings Motors Limited.

A relic roadster that was the envy of a generation which has witnessed the rapid development of the motor car from the days of its crude designs and discomforts in the early years of the century to its flowing, graceful streamlining and multiple refinements of performance and appearance, vividly suggests by obvious comparison the tremendous advantages and values which the buyer of today receives for considerably less money than he proudly purchased his first car.

To appreciate the changes which the industry as a whole, and in this instance Ford engineering ability, has applied to the generic model T, you simply have to see the two cars as they are now on exhibit in the Ford show room. And looking at them you are inclined to stand in wonder at the skill and the imagination of the men who have wrought such a complete transformation in a comparatively short time.

This ancient roadster was little more than the original Ford engine installed on four pneumatic-tired wheels, with scant attention to the comfort of the people who were to ride in what used to be called strange contraptions. The manufacturer was concentrating on the new idea of automobility a vehicle travelling on its own power submitting the new invented internal combustion in the historic place of the horse.

Same Primary Principle

The mechanical principle of the Ford engine essentially the same in the two cars. More than twenty-five million Fords have been manufactured, and the original torque drive with radius rods, also the transverse front springs that absorb most of the shock of the road have been retained in the 1934 model with but slight evidence of change. The steering system is much the same in both models, but you have to turn the microscope on this year's car to find the points of resemblance with the poor and clumsy relation which by 1905 was beginning to lose its novelty on the dirt roads of those days.

Henry Ford began manufacture of his automobile in 1903, and the roadster of 1905 which Ross Hood has rescued from oblivion presented few improvements over the very first products. There were no head lights; just two oil lamps of probably several candle power. The mud guards were so skimpy they seem to have been an after thought, and the running board was just one of the innumerable improvements that had not even been conceived in those days. The first Fords employed the common buggy step, the little square piece of metal that was to be expanded into what has since been called the running board.

Carburetter Is Similar

The carburetor is practically the same on both this year's model and that of 1905, and the four-cylinder engine was in two twin blocks each housing two pistons. The wheel base of the antediluvian roadster was 78 inches as compared with the 112-inch base of this year's car, and their weights were respectively about 700 and 2650 pounds.

The fifteen horse power of thirty years ago is now at least thirty, and the price of around $1,200 is today probably $850. But, when the buyer compares the two cars there is no comparison in dollar value. Those primitive Fords were so bare of embellishments that they lacked even the ordinary windshield. The enclosed car had not been thought of, and the old roadster had no top. Its seats were straight and high, so far removed from the interior refinements of this year's model that scarcely no point of similarity remains.

The public has forgotten that from the turn of the century until 1925 there had been between five and six hundred automobile manufacturing companies come and go, some building up a passing popularity, but most of them disappearing after brief existence. There were twelve motor manufacturers in 1903 when Henry Ford entered the market with his engine. Today about twenty-fivee different makes of cars remain of all the hundreds that sprang up when the field was wide open to the pioneering engineers and inventors who visualized the vast possibilities of the automobile and the world wide market that was waiting for it.

Today's Recipes

Veal and Ham Loaf.—One pound chopped veal, three-fourths pound chopped smoked ham, two eggs, nine tablespoons cracker crumbs, six tablespoons cracker crumbs, six tablespoons milk, one teaspoon salt, pepper. Mix thorough and pack in well greased coffee can and steam one and one-half hours.

Maple Fudge Cake—Two cups cake flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup butter, one cup sugar, three-fourths cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla, three egg whites, stiffly beaten. Sift flour, measure and sift several times with baking powder and salt. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming the while. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a greased pan in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, about one hour. Frost with maple fudge frosting.

Maple Fudge Frosting—Three cups maple syrup, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon vanilla, two tablespoons thick cream. Cook syrup to the soft ball stage, 238 degrees. Remove from fire, add butter and vanilla and cool to lukewarm, 110 degrees. COMBINED FARM AND FISHING INDUSTRIES BRING NEW EPOCH

"Cast Your Eyes Inland," New Commissioner Tells Newfoundlanders.

ASSURES SUCCESS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. April 23 (CP)—The vision of a new race of Newfoundlanders, a breed of farmer-fishermen wresting a living from the soil and from the sea, has been placed before Newfoundland's seafaring people by Hon. Thomas Lodge, member of the governing commission now in control of the island's affairs.

The conception that the country's future is indissolubly bound up with the codfishery is wrong, the Commissioner holds. He says the sea has been a poor provider, will continue to be a poor provider. And in his view it is about time the Newfoundlander was turning his eyes inland.

The ideal occupation, he told the Methodist College Literary Institute, would be a combination of fishing and farming in equal proportions. Fishing would occupy half the year, and in the other six months the fisherman could supplement his livelihood ashore.

The problem of turning the Newfoundlander towards the land would be a difficult one, the Commissioner admitted. There would be financial difficulties. Even greater, perhaps, would be the psychological problem. For the Newfoundlander has been imbued through the centuries with the idea that the sea is means of life.

Time For Change

But the time has come now for the change, Hon. Mr. Lodge declared. "In the last few years," he said, "the codfishery has only been carried on because the men engaged in it and their families have accepted far too low a standard of living." It was a standard, he said, "far below that which any community forming part of the British Empire can reasonably be expected to accept with patience inevitably." He saw no hope of permanent improvement in the codfishery, but rather a relative lowering of the demand from year to year "as the standard of living in the world as a whole rises." For, he said, the "codfish is rather a poo rarticle of food in the scale of absolute values."

"It is," he said, "an article mainly consumed by Latin countries with a relatively poor standard of living, and I should have thought that it is obvious that as the standard of living in the world arises, the relative, if not the absolute, demand for codfish must fall."

The Commissioner said he had agreed with other members of the government that every step possible should be taken to assist the maximum number of fishermen to prosecute the fishery this year. But this step had been decided upon because of necessity of dealing with an "immediate situation." It would foster a "spirit of self-help and independence" and help remove the "devastating moral efects of involuntary idleness."

He did not disclose the government's immediate plans in this respect. He assured his bearers, however, that "stimuli" would be applied, though he added he was not sure in his own mind that their results would not be negative insofar as profitable cash returns were concerned.

But the real solution, he asserted, lay in the exploitation of the country's agricultural possibilities. He quoted figures to substantiate his contention. The estimated 160,000 persons dependent upon the fisheries, directly or indirectly, had produced about $8,000,000 worth of fish.

By comparison, not more than 30,000 persons had produced $5,500,000 worth of agricultural products.

"Is it not indicated," he asked, "that the most hopeful field in which to apply special stimuli is here, rather than in an industry in which 160,000 souls produce at the most $8,000,000 from which we know perfectly well a great deal has to be deducted to arrive at anything like an accurate estimate of the net advantage to the fishermen?"

"I suggest to you, very tentatively," he asserted, "that it is in the direction of the increased cultivation of the land that we must turn in order to find the solution of our immediate difficulties in the island."

Obituary

The pall-bearers were T. E. Potts, W. R. Linn, C. Nayler, R. O'Connor, J. Burns and T. Warren.

ROBERT MORROW

NORWOOD, April 23 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Robert Morrow, whose tragic death was the result of an attack by a bull on Monday, was held from the family residence, Asphodel, Thursday afternoon.

The deceased was in his sixty-fifth year and was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Morrow, Belmont. He has been a lifelong and highly respected resident of this vicinity. He was a valued member of the Baptist Church.

An impressive memorial service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. G. E. Downing. Interment was made in Norwood Cemetery.

Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves a family of five sons and two daughters, Wilbur, Fred, Gideon, Harry, Raymond, June, Eunice (Mrs. Wesley Wildman). Also two sisters, Mrs. S. Barlow of Peterborough, Mrs. Agnes Johnson of Havelock, and three brothers, Fred of Peterborough; William, Belmont; Barber of Toronto.

WALTER JOHN KIDD.

WARSAW, April 23.—(Examiner Correspondence).—After a lingering illness of over four years Walter John Kidd passed peacefully and unexpectedly away at the home of his younger daughter, Mrs. Winton Murray, Toronto, on Monday evening, April 16, in his seventy-eighth year.

The late Mr. Kidd (John Kidd as he was familiarly known throughout this whole district) was the fifth and youngest son of the late James Kidd and his wife, Isabella McNaughton, and was born on the Kidd homestead on the Scotch line. Second line, Dummer, which is now owned by Percy Moore. The old frame house stood until a little over twenty years ago and was occupied by his mother and a sister until after Mrs. Kidd's (Sr.) death. Mr. Kidd and family lived in a brick house on the farm.

Mr. Kidd married Mary Ann Burgess, and to them were born three children—Roland, who died in Toronto about five years ago; Mary (Mrs. James Hawthorne), Warsaw, and Barbara (Mrs. Winton Murray), Toronto.

Mrs. Kidd died about twenty-three years ago, and about three years later Mr. Kidd sold the farm and soon went to Golstie, near Woodstock, where he kept a general store for a few years. However, failing health forced him to give up his business, and for several years he has spent most of his time with one or other of his daughters.

Mr. Kidd was of a kindly and genial disposition, a splendid neighbor, always willing to help, glad to be of use. Stormy weather nor bad roads ever hindered him going where he thought he was needed. He was interested in farm stock, and especially in fruit, and his farm had a bountiful supply of practically all fruits which can be grown in this locality.

Surviving Mr. Kidd are his daughters, Mrs. James Hawthorne and Mrs. Murray; one brother, Dr. Donald Kidd, Atwood; three sisters, Mrs. Williamson of Omemee, Mrs. Kelly of Toronto and Mrs. Campbell of Belleville. Three brothers and two sisters are dead.

The funeral of the late Mr. Walter John Kidd took place from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winton Murray to Warsaw cemetery. There was a funeral service at Mr. Murray's house on Tuesday evening at which the minister of the Presbyterian Church which his daughter and her husband attend officiated, assisted by Rev. Peter W. Currie, at one time minister in Warsaw, and attended by many relatives and old friends, among them Mr. Masters, who came from Golstie.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson officiated at the service in the United Church and at St. Mark's cemetery where interment took place.

The bearers were Messrs. Duncan Kidd, Joseph Tedford, Fred. Hamblin, John Kidd, David Miller and David Fife.

Among those from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Winton Murray, Mrs. Kelly, Mr. Richardson and Mr. McDougall, Toronto; Mr. Walter and Mr. Earl Kidd, Miss Belle Kidd, Mr. Donald McNaughton, son Alec and daughter Miss Vida, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Williamson and Mr. and Mrs. Windrim, Omemee; Mrs. Mabel Elmhirst, Lang; Mrs. Arthur Kidd and son, Roy, Lakefield; Mrs. Garnet, Otonabee, also Mr. David Fife. Mr. Edwin Fife, Mrs. Norman Patterson and Mrs. William Patterson; Mrs. Wellington Burgess, Miss E. Burgess, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. John McNaughton and son, Ross, and Mrs. McMillan, Norwood; and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Belleville.

BILL TO ABOLISH IRISH SENATE HAS 19 MAJORITY

Abolition Bill is Given Second Reading in Dail Eireann.

DE VALERA SPEAKS.

Senate May Block Bill Until It Becomes Law March, 1935.

DUBLIN, April 23—(C.P. Cable Via Reuters.) — The Dail Eireann passed second reading of the bill to abolish the Senate yesterday by a vote of 70 to 51.

Senate Have To Go.

"The Senate will have to go because it is getting in the way, which is detrimental to the best interests of the State," declared President Eamon De Valera.

The bill chops 16 clauses out of the constitution—all those relating to the Senate or to two houses. Apparently there is no intention of forming a substitute body for the Upper House.

President De Valera pointed out the Senate had opposed the Dail in many fundamental matters. (An anti-government majority remained in the Upper House after the accession of the Republicans to power).

He referred to the Senate's blocking of the bill to remove the oath of allegiance and also the bill extending the local government franchise to persons aged 21 or more. He did not mention the Senate's halting of the government bill banning the wearing of political uniforms. A measure aimed at the opposition blue shirts, which action was the cause of the government's sudden attack on the Senate.

Not Hindering Union.

President De Valera during today's debate declared nothing the government was doing would delay the day when the union of the north and south "which we all desire" would be brought about.

The government was not satisfied that any step they might take now to win the north could be effective, he admitted. But in his opinion the day of re-union in Ireland was going to come much more rapidly by the government's policy than by the policy of the Opposition.

The Senate may block the measure to abolish it, just like any other measure, but at the end of the year a measure limiting powers of the second house to delay bills to three months instead of 18 months, as at present, comes into force. The Senate Abolition Bill, therefore, can become law in March, 1935, despite Senate action. The Upper Chamber will then automatically disappear, and automatically all bills passed by the Dail become law.

MORE AIR FORCE FOR SINAGPORE

New Naval Base to be Strengthened in Flying Defences and Have Heavy Guns.

LONDON, April 23 (C.P.)—Plans for the equipment of the British naval base at Singapore, which when completed will make it the world's most formidable stronghold, include a considerable increase in the strength of the Royal Air Force. The base will be protected by the heaviest artillery permanently assembled anywhere at one point.

The air strength at present at Singapore consists of two torpedo bomber squadrons and one squadron of flying boats. While the ultimate air strength has not yet been determined it is thought likely it will amount to at least six squadrons.

One unit likely to go there is the additional flying boat squadron for which provision is made in the Air Estimates for 1934-35. This unit, though it will be formed in home waters, is intended for duties overseas, and it is thought the destination will be Singapore.

MERCER, Wis., April 24.—(AP)— Through the wooded wilds of the north country, freshly white with snow, an army of men hunted big game today—John Dillinger.

Crafty as a fox and ruthless as the wolf that sometimes prowls the brush-snarled timber lands of North Wisconsin, the gunman from Indiana continued to elude one of the most extensive manhunts the northlands ever have known.

"Dillinger luck" was holding; but the feeling was strong among the hunters that John Dillinger — cop - killer, bank robber, highwayman and jail fugitive—was very close to his last stand.

The government had nearly 100 picked men on the job. Some of them were drafted from points as distant as Philadelphia and Washington. Many aeroplanes dropped from the skies, bringing re-inforcements.

The Department of Justice men were under orders to shoot to kill. The sentiment was openly expressed that Dillinger dead would be

TAXI CAB BY-LAW PLACED BEFORE CITY'S TAXI MEN

Owners Ask for Further Time to Study Provisions of By-law.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE

Welcome Legislation That Would Raise Standard of Business.

More details of the Police Commission's proposed by-law governing the operation of taxicabs in the city were revealed last night at a conference on the by-law at the City Hall between members of the commission and taxi men representatives.

Due to the fact that the taxi men had not had an opportunity to study the provisions of the by-law, they were unable to express their views to the commission, but it seemed that they would welcome legislation that would raise the standard of their business. The meeting was adjourned until Friday evening when they will again confer with the commission on the by-law.

R. R. Hall, K.C., apeared on behalf of the taxi men and was provided with one of the two copies of the by-law, which has been draughted up by City Solicitor Corkery. Before Friday's conference, it was said, he would go over the by-law with the taxi men and then be prepared to voice their opinions and suggestions upon it.

Present By-law Out of Date

In opening the conference, Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., chairman of the commission, stressed the fact that the present by-law governing taxis is far outdated and not at all applicable to present-day conditions of the business. "The Commission is endeavoring to have a taxi by-law put in force they will be in the best interests of citizens and satisfactory to the taxi men," he explained. "We want to see that taxi men receive a fair recompense and at the same time be enabled to carry on their business in a creditable manner.

"We propose to have compulsory insurance of taxicabs so that passengers are ensured protection in case of accident. We mean to make it obligatory for taxi men to carry accident insurance.

"We also propose to divide the city in zones as far as taxis are concerned. Area number one, as outlined in the by-law, will comprise that district bounded by Monaghan Road, Armour Road, Park Hill Road and Lansdowne street and there will be a set fare for passengers carried within this district. Area number two, is comprised of Japanese Claims Armament Sold to One Party in China Will be Dangerous.

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY

GENEVA, April 24. (AP). League of Nations circles were dazed today by Japan's warning to the world that she will oppose foreign aid to China "under whatever guise" which she deems may distribute the peace in Eastern Asia.

The warning, issued yesterday in a prepared statement by the Tokyo government through Consul General Yuchiro Yokoyama, was regarded as far from reassuring in the present situation in the Far East.

League representatives say Japan is reaching out to the Asiatic peoples and seeking to inculcate in them Japanese ideas and leadership.

Japan was pictured here as defying the League of Nations in the League's home where she was publicly criticized for her aggression in the Manchurian campaign.

The doctrine of "Asia for Asiatics under the leadership of Japan, acting in close collaboration with other Asiatic powers" was enunci-

Whether the action taken was improper or excessive I am not prepared to say until a complete report has been received. SUCKER FISHING BAN PROTESTED

Meaford Claims No Net Law Will Hurt Jobless Who Catch Thousands.

SCAVENGER FISH.

MEAFORD, Ont., April 24 (C.P.). —For the first time in the history of this town, sucker fishing in the Big Head River was prohibited here to-day by Fish and Game Inspector Albert L. Rolston, of Owen Sound, who paid a visit here and ordered the fishing stopped immediately. Each spring hundreds of suckers are taken out of the river and are about the worst scavenger fish in these waters.

It is claimed by many that they eat the spawn of other fish and are a menace. They come swarming up the river in thousands each spring, and the fishermen, who are mostly all unemployed men, receive a small price for them.

The inspector stated that it was against the law to fish without hooks, and also to sell the fish without a license. As a result, the Meaford Board of Trade will immediately get in touch with the Department at Toronto to see if the fishermen cannot continue and rid the river of these fish.

Two Missing Girls Found In Lakefield

Missing from their homes here since Sunday afternoon two young girls were found this afternoon by Chief Constable D. Webster in Lakefield. He reported to local police, who had been asked last night by distracted parents to aid in the search, that he would hold the girls until called for by their parents or police.

The girls are Pearl Armstrong, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Armstrong, 173½ Simcoe street, and Helen Cooper, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, 318 Burnham street.

Parents had thought that the pair had run away to Toronto, although they could advance no reason for such action, and the finding of the girls in Lakefield to-day came as a distinct surprise.

Chief Webster did not say whether or not the girls had offered any explanation of their absence from home or where they had spent Sunday and last night.

INSULL TELLS OF HIS ESCAPE ON TRAMP SHIP

Fled Hotel by Simply Blackening Hair, Moustache, Removing Glasses.

PASSED GUARDS.

Captain Afraid for 2 Hours to Tell Him Vessel Ordered Back.

(Copyright, 1934, by the A. P.)

ABOARD THE S. S. EXILONA, April 24.—Bit by bit, as the S. S. Exilona bears him homeward to face his accusers, Samuel Insull Sr., has disclosed the story of his dramatic dash for freedom aboard the ancient tramp steamer Majotis from Athens into the Eastern Mediterranean.

The story begins early in the morning of March 14 when the one-time "Little Giant" of the Utilities business sat pondering over orders to leave Greece within a matter of hours.

No one expected a man in his 74th year, who had been described as in a serious condition from a heart ailment, to resort to the methods that Samuel Insull was at that time turning over in his mind. Consequently, none of the sentinels on duty was prepared to penetrate the disguise of the man they watched—a man whom they were about to see appear as 25 years younger.

Perfect Disguise

Procuring a box of blacking such as women use to touch up their eyes he set to work coloring his hair and moustache. He worked patiently, and finally accomplished a remarkable transformation He gazed with interest at the mirror where there started at him eyes shaded by rich black brows and set off by equally black hair and moustaches.

The rest was, he says, "as easy as falling off a log." he simply removed his glasses in order to complete his disguise, then walked boldly out the door, passing the men who were watching for him within a few feet.

He said he was really walking a little unsteadily because it was difficult for him to steer a straight course without his spectacles. However the guards were not unaccustomed to seeing gentlemen who walk unsteadily at that time of morning and no one moved to stop him.

He progressed down the street until he reached a taxi stand, then he merely hired a cab as any ordinary person might do. In it he drove past the pickets and reached Piraeus where the Majotis was waiting.

Hid In Cabin

Once aboard, he went directly to the cabin and remained close inside until the dingy freighter sailed.

When the Greek authorities became aware of his whereabout, late the next day, they ordered the Majotis to put back under the threat of sending a warship in pursuit.

It was hours after they doubled back on their course before Captain Ioannis Mousouris, the master of the ship, for whom Insull professes a great regard, could bring himself to inform his aged passenger of the situation.

Insull recounts the incident with great amusement. He says he was sitting on the deck, fully cognizant of the change of route, when the captain started explaining with profuse apologies and expressions of regret.

Insull interrupted with the demand:

"You see that sun? Now look at the direction we are going. I have known about it for hours. I was just waiting to see how long it would take you to work up the courage to inform me."

SPANISH CRISIS RAPIDLY NEARS BREAKING POINT

Cabinet Threatens to Resign Unless President Zamora Signs Amnesty Bill.

FREE POLITICAL VICTIMS.

All Religious Buildings Guarded After 8 Churches Fired in Night.

(By Rex Smith, A.P. Foreign Staff.)

MADRID, April 24 (A.P.). — In the face of the threatened resignation of the entire Cabinet, President Alcala Zamora to-day signed a bill granting amnesty to several thousand political prisoners.

Much of the unrest of the past three days was attributed to Zamora's reluctance to approve the measure, passed by Congress and favored by most Ministers.

Zamora's action tended to ease a tense situation.

MADRID, April 24 (A.P.). — Events in troubled Spain rapidly approached a crisis to-day. The entire Cabinet threatened to walk out unless President Alcala Zamora signs a political amnesty bill.

The measure, which would grant freedom to thousands of political prisoners in jails the nation over, has been passed by Congress, but Zamora has not affixed his signature.

Premier Alejandro Lerroux told the Associated Press that "naturally the Cabinet must resign if Zamora does not sign the Amnesty Bill."

The Ministry was formed only last March.

A Cabinet meeting was called to draft implementary measures which would lean neither to the right nor to the left and thus be acceptable to the President. He considered certain features of the Amnesty Act unconstitutional.

Fear General Strike.

There were widespread fears in the capital of another general strike such as that on Sunday during which two persons were killed when Extremists battled police and civil guards.

Despite the Premier's insistence that the government was "in control of the situation," last night was one of terror for many parts of Madrid.

Special guards were thrown around all religious buildings after the firing of eight churches during the night. A workers' union proclamation urged laborers to observe May 1 in protest against the "radical Monarchist government." It threatened violence, "if necessary" to enforce its demands.

MIMICO YOUTH GIVEN REMAND

Faces Breaking, Entering Count, Negligently Firing Aylmer Store.

STORY IS DOUBTED.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 24. — C.P.)—The young Mimico reformatory inmate who is said to have confessed to setting fire to the Aylmer Inn on Monday, April 16, appeared before Magistrate C. F. Maxwell in city police court and was remanded until Friday to the county jail on two charges, one of breaking and entering the store of Vera McConnell, where the fire started, the other of negligently setting fire to the store and hotel, thereby causing the deaths of Mrs. Grace Witherall and her two daughters, Stella and Dorothy.

He was not asked to plead to the charge, and was immediately removed to the county jail, where he was being closely examined and re-examined by Inspector Gurnett and other investiagtors all Tuesday morning.

The credibility of his story is doubted and certain angles of it do not appear to dove-tail with known facts.

Up to noon the press was unable to ascertain any further developments with regard to the youth's connection with the fire, investigators being uncommunicative.

The youth has given his age as 15 last July 15. At the school he attended here, his birthday was recorded July 14, 1918.

He told others he was 17 and speaking to a reporter a week ago, just prior to his arrest in Aylmer, where he was found after the fire

Failure to Pay Fine Will Mean an Additional Three Months.

OPERATED STILL.

Havelock Woman Remanded Until Friday on Charge of Vagrancy.

For possessing an illicit still, Harold Allen Casson, 27, Machinist, 586 Water Street, was sentenced by Magistrate Langley to-day to three months in the Ontario Reformatory and to pay a fine of $500. Failure to pay the fine will mean an additional three months' imprisonment for him.

Casson was arrested Friday when R.C.M.P. officers raided his home, finding 17 quart bottles of moonshine concealed beneath the floor in the summer kitchen and a still in the cellar of the house. His record was produced for His Worship to-day, and it disclosed that he had been convicted two years ago of charges of illicit brewing of beer and possession of a still.

Havelock Woman Remanded.

A Havelock woman, charged as a vagrant, explained that the trouble that had brought her to court was all due to her having had 18 teeth extracted by a dentist. She said the dentist gave her "stuff" to pull the teeth and then afterward she had a couple of drinks to stop the pain. "I don't remember anything more," she stated.

Chief Newhall told the court she had been making a "terrible noise" on George Street, and tried to bite the officer who arrested her. She pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Friday. In the meantime her mother will be informed. The Chief said the woman always got into trouble when she got out of her mother's sight.

Italo-Bulgarian Deal Is Under Way

ROME, April 24 (A.P.).—Premier Nicholas Mouschanoff of Rumania is attempting to negotiate directly for an Italo-Bulgarian treaty to safeguard Bulgaria's agricultural interests, it was learned to-day.

His hope, it was said, is to modify certain European economic accords which he thinks militate against Bulgarian agricultural interests.

Premier Mouschanoff came here yesterday for conference with Premier Mussolini and other Italian Government leaders.

CONSERVATIVES PLAN 22 RALLIES NEXT FORTNIGHT

Premier Henry and Seven Ministers to Speak—Candidates be Selected.

GENERAL ACTIVITY.

Hepburn Tells Beamsville He Is Staking His Political Reputation on Coming Vote.

TORONTO, April 24. (CP). While numerous forecasts place the voting date around June 21, political parties to-day welded their ranks for the coming Ontario general elections, with government supporters preparing for more than 20 Conservative meetings within the next two weeks. Premier George S. Henry and seven of his cabinet ministers will address these meetings which will select Conservative candidates for the elections.

Liberals last night placed another standard bearer in the field with Frederick H. Avery, mayor of St. Catharines, chosen to contest Lincoln constituency. He was selected unanimously at a meeting in Beamsville addressed by Mitchel F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, and Harry Nixon, Ontario Progressive leader.

Mr. Hepburn told the 1 000 delegates and Liberal supporters gathered at the Beamsville meeting that he was staking his political reputation on the coming elections. Beer and wine would not be a main issue in the campaign as far as his party was concerned, Mr. Hepburn added, and Liberals would make their bid for power on the "main issues."

If elected, he concluded, his party would give fair trial to the present government's proposed beer and wine legislation.

In an address at Toronto E. F. Singer, Conservative member in the Ontario legislature for St. Andrew's warned the election of Mr. Hepburn's party might result in a dictatorship in Ontario. He feared election of the Liberal party "and its different groups" would mean "a dictatorship or some Socialist administration that is an anathema to us British folks.

Slaght Scores Price

While Mr. Singer levelled his guns at the Liberals, Arthur Slaght, K.C., prominent Liberal, charged in a Toronto address the "Tory Liquor Commission" would allow middlemen to add their commission to the cost of liquor. Mr. Slaght charged the Ontario Attorney General "consummated and approved" sale of public offfice in connection with retirement of Magistrate Daniel McCaughrin of Orillia who claimed he was bought out of office.

Retirement of Rev. A. C. Calder, Conservative member in the legislature for West Kent, was announced last night at Wallaceburgh as the Conservative Association executive prepared for the nomination convention during the first week in May. Burton L. Bedford, former Chatham Mayor, and Dr. S. A. Richardson, present Wallaceburg Mayor, are mentioned as planning to stand for nomination.

MARKETING ACT FIGHT RENEWED TO-DAY IN HOUSE

Ralston Delivers Biting Attack on Govt's New Gold Tax.

Woodsworth Supports It.

Liberal Critic Charges Budget Fails to Give Information on Anticipated Expenditures.

OTTAWA, April 24 (CP)—After one day devoted to debating the Budget, the House of Commons today returns to the controversial "Natural Products Marketing Act" and to the conflict of opinions as to whether the measure is beneficial or otherwise and whether it is Socialist.

In one respect at least the reactions to the Budget and the Marketing Bill were similar. The Liberal Opposition opposed the Marketing Bill and the main provision in the Budget, the 10 per cent. gold tax, while the Left wing of the Opposition, with J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader as spokesman, approved of both.

Hon. J. L. Ralston, Liberal financial critic, directed his severest barbs of criticism at the gold tax yesterday, as he opened the Budget debate, and Mr. Woodsworth followed him with commendation of the levy and the suggestion it should be higher.

Conversion Out at Present

Both Opposition spokesmen also dwelt on debt conversion and dissented from the Governments' stand that no immediate conversion of the national debt to lower rates of interest is possible. Mr. Ralston believed an appeal to the Canadian people on patriotic grounds would ensure success of a great national conversion loan at a very low rate of interest.

The Budget had been framed on class considerations, Mr. Woodsworth claimed. It was designed to make the rich richer, and the poor poorer. Bondholders should be called upon to forego a portion of the returns they now received out of the labors of the Canadian people.

As a representative of the mining country of Northern Manitoba, B. M. Still (Cons., Nelson), said he did not like the gold tax, but had confidence the Government would give careful consideration to the position of new mines and those operating with low grade ore.

Broken Promises

The Government's record had been a series of broken promises, increasing taxation, increasing debt and successive deficits, said Mr. Ralston. Since it came into office it had added $564,406,000 to the national debt, and even now the Minister of Finance was budgeting for a surplus only on ordinary account without venturing to give the House an estimate of the special expenditures likely to be made during the year.

This was another point on which he directed special criticism at the Budget. It was not a Budget at all, as it did not give the information about anticipated expenditures a budget should contain. Each year the Government was departing more and more from the established principles of parliamentary government by abrogating to itself the right to spend money without parliamentary sanction. The Budget made no mention and no financial provision for the proposed public works program for the relief of unemployment which was certain to involve large sums of money.

Budget Levies

W. H. Golding, Lib., South Huron, said the first Budget brought down by the present Government, had brought with it a duty on tea, increases in postal rates, an increased sales tax, a duty on coal, and higher tariffs.

No Robber

TROY, N.Y., April 24.—(C P) —Police Justice Byron "wouldn't rob a child's bank even for the law."

So he told Everett Lawless, whom he fined $2 on a traffic charge.

Lawless dug down and brought $2 in pennies.

"What's the idea," asked the judge.

"I've been out of work for some time," Lawless replied, "and had to take this from the kid's bank."

"Take it back," ordered the court. "I wouldn't rob a child's bank even for the law. Put it back in your child's bank."

Campbellford Roads In Good Condition

CAMPBELLFORD, April 24 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — "From here to Hastings is the best the road has been in the past twenty-five years," was the comment of Joe Anglin of the Peterborough-Campbellford Bus Line, when he pulled into Campbellford yesterday afternoon in a brand new bus which is on the run for the first time this season. He reported that all the road from Peterborough down was in first-class condition, but the stretch between Hastings and Campbellford was exceptionally good. This road is being graded at present by the township power grader.

The road between Campbellford and Stirling is also much improved, the bad spots around Hoards having been fixed up with the grader. No. 30 highway between Campbellford and Brighton is also in first-class shape, and all township and line roads are in good condition.

FISHING IN CANADA

"It is there that we are going with our rods and reels and traces,
To a silent, smoky Indian that we know—
To a couch of new-pulled hemlock with the starlight on our faces,
For the Red Gods call us out and we must go!"

RUDYARD KIPLING'S lines are brought to mind by a booklet entitled "Sport Fishing in Canada" issued by the National Parks of Canada, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. This publication is a timely and welcome handbook on Canadian fishing waters, for with the advent of spring there comes to the angler an irresistible call from the lakes and rivers, the woods, and the trails. In fancy he feels the whip of rod, hears the hum of singing reel, and sees his drifting canoe with a dusky Indian in the stern being propelled slowly to a camp beneath the stars.

For many years thousands of fishermen from all over America have visited old and favoured fishing locations in Canada. More recently the extension of railways and the construction of new motor roads have placed hitherto inaccessible fishing waters within easy reach of the great centres of population. In these unspoiled waters from the Atlantic to the Pacific the angler will find unexcelled sport for many varieties of game fish. There is in Canada game fish for every class of angler. There are the Atlantic, tyee, and coho salmon and the numerous species of the trout family; there is that knight in bronze armour, the bass; that warrior which lurks amidst the lily pads, the maskinonge; the ubiquitous pike; the toothsome pickerel; the mighty tuna and sword fish; and other sporting varieties.

All these species are not found in the same waters, nor even in the same provinces, but each has its range somewhere in Canada. The open seasons on the various species differ according to local conditions, and parties contemplating a trip should secure all available information in advance, as careful planning adds greatly to the success and enjoyment of a holiday.

"Sport Fishing in Canada" is interesting, it is free, and will be found most useful to the fisherman now preparing his "rods and reels and traces" for the coming vacation season.

CATCH SUCKERS WITHOUT NETS

Nets Can No Longer Be Used in the Taking of Suckers.

PROTECT GAME FISH

That call "suckers are running" will no longer cause just the same thrill as in former years to youngsters of this district, as the result of an announcement by Fred Marshall, county fish and game inspector.

Nets can no longer be used in the taking of suckers nor can these fish be snagged, grapped or gaffed, according to Inspector Marshall. This rule regarding the taking of suckers prevails in Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland and Durham counties and the waters of the River Trent, Lake Scugog, Crowe Lake, Crowe River and Beaver creek in Hastings County.

Inspector Marshall pointed out these new rules regarding suckers are not to protect suckers but to prevent the taking of game fish out of season.

"Every spring during the sucker fishing many large bass and maskinonge are caught by the sucker fishermen in nets or by gaffing at the locks," he explained. "It is to protect the game fish that the Government has set down these rules about suckers. The department does not care at all about suckers and how many are caught, as long as they are not taken in a manner prohibited."

A Banquet Lost

HANFORD, Calif., April 24 (C.P.)—It was 12 down and 4 to go for Oscar, the 16-inch Gopher snake, and it might have been a big day for Harry the Hoptoad had not E. J. McIntyre, Principal of the Oakvale School, happened along.

The 12 down were the 12 most important inches of Oscar's anatomy, and they were down Harry's stomach. The four to go were what McIntire grabbed hold of to pull a dazed and thankful Oscar from Harry's protesting jaw.

McIntire reported Harry and Oscar went their ways, neither the worse for wear.

Two Professors Backing Radio Commission Claim Great Public Service Rendered.

Favor Lectures, Debates.

OTTAWA, April 24 (C.P.)—Further defence of the Canadian Radio Commission was laid before the House of Commons Radio Committee yesterday by two university professors and a representative of a Toronto advertising agency which had made wide surveys of Commission and other radio programs.

Dr. W. J. Dunlop, head of the University Extension Department, University of Toronto, and Dr. Edouard Montpetit, University of Montreal, joined with C. M. Passmore of Toronto in declaring the Commission was handicapped by lack of finances but had rendered the best possible service it could under the circumstances.

Mr. Passmore clashed briefly with W. A. Beynon, Cons., Moosejaw, on the subject of wave length changes in Western Canada, with the advertising man declaring the changes had proven "moderately successful." Mr. Beynon objected strenuously. Declaring he drove several thousand miles each week throughout southern Saskatchewan had found the people "up in arms," about the changes of channels, particularly affecting CRJM at Moosejaw, which now operates on 540 kilocycles.

The two professors joined in expressing the opinion the Commission had performed a real service to Canada in carrying university lectures and debates during the past winter, with Dr. Montpetit stressing the point such programs gave students and others a better grasp of problems fellow-students in various parts of the country.

He declared a greater Canada would arise from this mutual understanding, and thought such programs should be continued and elaborated. Prof. Dunlop explained the universities had formed a committee to study the question of putting such broadcasts on the air, and had received cordial co-operation from the Commission.

DR. R. NEWTON POWELL PASSES AWAY IN TORONTO

TORONTO, April 24.—Rev. Dr. R. Newton Powell, since 1925 minister of Centennial United Church, Dovercourt Road and Bloor Street, died last evening at the parsonage, 100 Delaware Avenue, aged 65 years.

He had planned to resign at the end of June. Despite his illness, he was able less than two weeks ago to conduct the marriage, at his bedside, of his only daughter.

SLUM CONDITION DRAGON MUST GO SAYS BENNETT

Premier Urges St. George's Society to Gird on Armor Against Poverty.

POINTS TO ENGLAND.

Goes Back Into History, Traces Hazards Which Built Nation Into Great Empire.

TORONTO, April 24 (C P.). — Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was back in Ottawa tolday, having verbally clothed the members of Toronto's St George's Society in armor and sent thtm out to kill the country's current dragons.

Conditions in the slums, sufferings of mother and child ,and all the evils of poverty were the modern counterpart of the monster slain by St. George, said the Prime Minister, responding to the toast to "St. George and Merrie England" at the Toronto society's 100th anniversary banquet.

He coupled his appeal for present betterment with an oratorical paean of praise for the Norsemen and the Normans and Jutes and Saxons and Angles who were the forefathers of the English race.

To the Englishman's genius for government, his ability to compromise, his respect for an enemy, his sense of justice, above all, his loyalty—he attributed the greatness of the race.

The Englishman's idea of colonization was quite different from that common in other Empires which had failed. England always endeavored to give her colonies self-government at the earliest possible moment.

Loss of the Colonies.

Against the advice of Burke and Pitt she had been tardy in the case of the colonies which became the United States. In this connection it was pleasant to receive the message despatched by the Charleston, S.C., St. George's Society, which had been founded in 1733, for 101 years before Toronto's organization.

"Science, literature, and art have flourished there," he said. "The England of yesterday, the England of Alfred, of Elizabeth, and Victoria and George, and the England of to-morrow—that is the England we celebrate."

The Prime Minister, divorcing himself entirely from current political poblems and controversies, went back into history to talk of the Danes who swept into Kent fifteen hundred years ago, to trace the hazards and difficulties which had built up in the Englishman of to-day the spiritual stamina which enabled the country to face tremendous burdens of taxation and emerge cheerfully with a surplus which was the envy of the modern world.

OUTLAW ELUDES ARMY OF POLICE

more desirable to the forces of law than Dillinger alive.

The memory of the outlaw's latest victim—a Government agent slain as Dillinger blasted his way from a tavern near here Sunday night—was not calculated to encourage the officers to take any chances with the heavily-armed desperado and his gang of criminals.

Hideout Uncertain

Dillinger was believed hiding today either in this northwoods country or to have taken refuge in one of several hideouts he is believed to have prepared in the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The casualty list from Sunday night's two gun fights remained two dead and four wounded, with the condition of one of the wounded men critical.

The belief that Dillinger may be in one of the twin cities arose after the skirmish which three men had yesterday with three deputy sheriffs in St. Paul Park, a suburb of St. Paul. One of the men is believed to have been Dillinger.

The deputies, who had been guarding the roads in the search for the Dillinger mob, exchanged shots when they encountered the trio in a small automobile bearing Wisconsin license plates. Here again fortune smiled on Dillinger —if Dillinger it was.

A lumbering truck, coming in from a side street delayed the deputies' machine just long enough to permit the trio to escape. One of their number, however, was believed to have been wounded. Bloodstains were found in the trio's car when it was found, abandoned.

Body Hidden in Woods

There were also rumors that the Dillinger gang, which apparently spit into two groups after the Sunday night gun fights near Mercer, lost another man in the gunfire in the Wisconsin woods, the rumor had it that the victim's body had been carried away in the woods—in which some investigators believe the Mooresville, Ind., "Bad Boy" had gone into hiding.

If that's the case, even the elements were helping th outlaw, for the roads were covered with snow, handicapping the hundreds of law enforcement officers in the hunt.

Authorities were quick to hem the killers in a gigantic circle that extended from Duluth to St. Paul and Minneapolis, to Chicago and to Milwaukee. Synchronizing their movements, the constabularly of Michigan took up strategic posts along the Wisconsin border to preclude the possibility of the gunmen backtracking through the upper peninsula.

Roads were guarded, and all bridges, too. Officials in the entire district co-operated in forming a cordon of marksmen urged to fire, if necessary, at first sight of Dillinger.

Short of Arms?

The fact that the desperadoes might be hampered by a shortage of armaments was disclosed when Federal agents announced they had confiscated six machine guns, a dozen shotguns and rifles, and five steel vests left behind by the seven men of Dillinger's mob tavern.

The officialdom which had watched the toll of deaths ascribed to Dillinger and his no-quarter nomads grow to an ominous 13 with the slaying of W. C. Baum, a Government operative, and Eugene Boisoneau, a civilian conservation corps employee, in the Sunday night gun engagement, apparently had decided to beat them at their own machine-gunning game.

While four of the desperados had not been located since they burst out of the Mercer tavern, one of their victims, John Morris, another C.C.C. worker, hapiessly caught in the crossfire, remained in a critical condition at an Ironwood hospital. Two other casualties, Constable C. C. Christensen of nearby Spider Lake, and John Hoffman of Mercer, were convalescing, while the fourth of those wounded in the resort battle, Federal Agent J. C. Newman, left the infirmary.

The women the criminals deserted at the inn when they beat their retreat were spirited out of the Eagle River Jail last night under a heavy guard and started for an undisclosed destination.

The girls flippantly declined to yield any information concerning their erstwhile escorts, according to authorities who put them through an extensive questioning.

Assistant United States Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan spurred the marksmen participating in the manhunt with this statement issued in Washington:

"We will get them!"

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, demanded that Congress expedite passage of pending legislation that would greatly strengthen the Government's hand in smashing criminal combines.

LANSDOWNE LODGE SONS OF ENGLAND HONOR PATRON SAINT

Rev. G. Tebbs of Burlington as Guest Speaker Presents Travelogue.

GEORGE BENTON PRESIDES

St. George's Day was fittingly commemorated at a largely attended dinner held at Paragon Hall last evening under the auspices of Landsdowne Lodge of the Sons of England Benevolent Society.

The function attended by over one hundred members of the Order and their guests including a representation from St. Ives Lodge, Millbrook partook of an excellent meal, the menu for which included "the roast beef of old England," and plum pudding and mince pies.

E. A. Peck, K.C., M.P., a member Lodge for fifty years ably proposed a toast to "Canada," during which he reviewed the Dominion's past achievements in the light of which he felt assured, "This country is going to go ahead and assume its former high standing among the nations of the world."

"I can only say it is something to be hoped for," Mr. Peck said speaking of the possibility of new government buildings being erected here and to which reference had previously been made by Alderman Max Sloan in proposing the toast "Our City" in the unavoidable absence of Mayor Roland Denne.

George Benton Presides

George Benton, president of Lansdowne Lodge, presided and extended a warm welcome to the guests after the toast to "The King" had been duly honored. He called upon Charles Shaw to propose the toast "St. George's Day."

Mr. Shaw in the course of his remarks expressed his pleasure at entering into such a celebration with "the sons and daughter of my own clan." He recalled the trip which he had made to his native England two years ago after an absence of thirty years in this country, and proceeded to speak of the inborn love that dwelt in the heart of every British subject that had inspired them to rise to great sacrifices. Particular reference was made by the speaker to the contribution given by such societies as the Sons of England.

"There are many St. George's within the Empire to-day, and many dragons within the Empire to be killed," Mr. Shaw said in urging the need of jealously guarding the noble traditions as represented by the Union Jack.

"Your teachings," he stated, addressing his remarks to the members of the Lodge, "are based on Bible truths. Put them into practice and you need never fear. The flag will fly forever."

Lantern Lecture

Nothing could have been more appropriate to the occasion than the delightful illustrated lecture skillfully presented by the Rev. G. Tebbs of Burlington, in the course of which he transported his audience, as it were, on a trip to England.

In a series of lantern slides, prepared by himself during his frequent visits to his native land, the lecturer a man of apparently inexhaustible humor, showed pictures of London in many of its phases. As the slides were screened in succession, he kept up a rapid fire of interesting comment, which was for the most part well seasoned with sparkling wit and cockney humor, which was not without special appeal to a larger part of the gathering.

Not only did the series of slides include the chief points of historic interest well known to the average tourist, but they also embraced lesser known points of charm and appeal.

One of the slides very appropriately showed an interior view of St. George's Chapel at Windsor where St. George's Day celebrations were held yesterday in honor of England's patron saint.

The Unknown Soldier

Other slides of particular interest were those of the Unknown Soldiers' Tomb in Westminster Abbey, and the Cenotaph in Whitehall. The speaker said that on several occasions he had stood watching the Cenotaph from a short distance, and had observed that every hat as he passed the nation's memorial to her war dead. It was a gesture of reverence and respect which he contrasted with that accorded to war memorials in Canada.

The Rev. Mr. Tebbs' slides took the audience to Princess Landing Stage at Liverpool and aboard the C.P.R. Liner Duchess of York for the return trip to Canada. Aboard the boat, the lecturer was shown with Sir John Martin Harvey with whom he claims to have had an acquaintance extending over a number of years.

In the course of his lecture, the speaker frequently referred to Peterborough, the historic city in which he was born, and where as a boy he sang in the choir of the ancient and beautiful cathedral.

Others who contributed to a very enjoyable program included the Misses Phyllis Starr and Phyllis Rome, vocal solos; and George Coleman, vocalist. Miss Lily Bacon, A.D.C.M., A.T.C.M., played the piano accompaniments.

Harry L. Beal and S. T. Harris ably proposed the vote of thanks to the speakers and to the guest artists, and the program concluded with the National Anthem.

The record number of six candidates may be entered in the rectorial election of Glasgow University, Glasgow, Scotland, when Compton Mackenzie retires next October.

MARMORA HEARS DR. JOHN INKSTER

Village Pastor of 34 Years Ago Speaks Ably on "Palestine and Its People."

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, April 24.—An intensely interesting illustrated lecture 'Palestine and Its Peoples' was delivered at the Town Hall on Monday even by Dr. John Gibson Inkster, minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto.

Though thirty-four years have passed since this noted Toronto preacher was minister of the local Presbyterian Church there were many in the audience whom he readily recognized as fellow residents of 1899. Dr. Inkster at the commencement of his remarks jocularly referred to the occasion some years ago when one of his successors in Marmora upon receipt of a false report of his death, conducted a memorial service.

Throughout the lecture, Dr. Inkster in dealing in his own especial manner with the cities and towns and peoples of the Holy Land emphasised a statement in his introductory remarks "The Jew is the Greatest Sign of the Times."

Assisting in the program was the Deloro String Quartette, Messrs S. B. Wright, W. L. Regg and A. V. Yates and Mrs. S. B. Wright. Their appropriate selections were well received.

At request of Dr. Inkster, a scripture reading was given, John 20: 1-14. Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell opened the program with prayer and W. R. Reynolds, president of St. Paul's Men's' Club under whose auspices the lecture was given acted as chairman.

all the rest of the city and there will be a set fare for carrying passengers within it. The by-law will also fix rates within an area of three miles of the city's limits, we have no jurisdiction beyond this, and there to the rate for passengers will be fixed."

Protect Taxi Men

Mayor Denne reiterated his previous warning that the by-law would prohibit men in other walks of life from doing taxi work as a sideline. "We want to protect the men who are in the business 24 hours each day," he said. "The legitimate taxi man needs some protection and is going to have it."

The bus company, which he praised highly for the manner in which it had carried on its business here, needs some protection too, Mayor Denne said, and ten cent taxi fare was not fair to the bus company and no longer will be permitted here.

"We are not out to legislate any legitimate taxi man out of business but we want to protect him," added the mayor. "Some men in the city are operating taxi services and have not taken out permits. Others hire their cars on Sunday and do the real taxi man out of this business. We want to raise the standards of the business, a standard which you can live up to and which will benefit you financially and give you greater security in your business."

Mayor Denne asked, "Do you think we are on the right track?"

Mr. Hall said that it was the opinion of the taxi men that the commission was endeavouring to be fair. He said that compulsory insurance was a serious question that should be given much consideration. He asked that the meeting be adjourned to permit the taxi men to consider the provisions of the by-law closely, before expressing their opinion.

The meeting was adjourned until Friday evening at 7 o'clock in the Council Chamber.

MARKETING ACT FIGHT RENEWED

The second Budget brought a deficit and an increase in the public debt of $114,000,000. The following year, there were additional burdens of taxation, another dificit and another increase in the public debt of $220,000,000.

In 1933, there were addition taxes, and in 1934 there was another deficit and $135,000,000 added to the public debt. Notwithstanding the promises and predictions of the government, said Mr. Goding, every Budget had brought increased taxes, higher tariffs and deficits all along the line. Canada was being "governed and legislated to death," Mr. Golding declared, and he urged the setting up of a committee by the Dominion and Provinces, "with politicians excluded" to determine how efficiency and economy in government might be achieved.

As a climax to a many-sided indictment against the Bennett Government and its record, Mr. Ralston, former Minister of National Defence, moved a straight want-of-confidence motion. It would place the House on record as disapproving of the "politicies of economic nationalism which have proved so disastrous to Canada's trade" and of favoring "policies which will promote export trade throughout the world."

"Debts, deficits and taxes" was the phrase used by the Liberal critic to describe the record of the Bennett Government. "They have sown the wind and reaped the whirlwind," regarding tariffs and trade, awakening "to find that Canada is not the only country which can restrict imports. They find as a result Canada's former customers refuse to buy."

Apparently the government's one policy to clear depression from the land was to stand by, watch developments, "counselling the troops to have courage and patience."

Suggest Conversion

To lift the burden of $145,000,000 in annual interest charges, Col. Ralston urged conversion of the national debt to lower rates. "What I deplore is the rather dogmatic attitude taken by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance in assuming this matter of debt conversion is completely out of the picture and that we are absolutely obliged to continue paying $145,000,000 in interest every year whether we like it or not."

Because the gold tax was the taxation feature of the Rhodes Budget, the Liberal financial critic turned his biggest guns on it. "It is discrimination against a particular industry and secondly it is discrimination against a particular section of Canada."

The tax would bankrupt some mines which were operating in low-grade ore, Col. Ralston predicted and it would hinder development in many parts of the country such as the Maritimes. Special consideration should be given low grade mines which operated on a small percentage of profit.

"I do not suggest," continued Col. Ralston, "this tax is wholly bad by any means but I am suggesting there seems to be a lack of appreciation of the fact there are other industries in this country which have been able to increase artificially their prices because of government action. These industries have not been placed in the same category as the gold mines."

Generaly speaking, the bulk of the gold tax would be paid by two or three sections of the country, said the financial critic, criticising the government for taxing production, not profits.

Turning to trade policies, Col. Ralston told the government that, through economic nationalism, attempting to live behind prohibitive tariff walls, "they have constructed a Frankenstein which threatens to destroy them."

Election In Sight?

Once or twice, Col. Ralston referred to possibilities of an election this year. "Judging by the results of five by-elections, climaxed by South Oxford, the country, at the earliest opportunity, will remove this government from power and register unmistakably its opinion these policies have proved a disastrous and costly failure for the people of this Dominion."

There were three problems facing Canada on each of which the government had failed, Col. Ralston said—trade development, debt conversion and a balanced budget.

All through his budget speech, the Finance Minister had attempted to "extract sunshine from cucumbers" but the fact remained the administration's trade record was dismal. Since it assumed office, the Bennett government had added $594,405,000 to the national debt, $26,000,000 to the yearly interest burden or $2.50 for every man, woman and child in the country. And on the third point, debt reduction, the gov-

EASTER PROGRAM GIVEN AT MADOC

Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church Meets at Parsonage.

MADOC, April 24 (Examiner Correspondence)—The W.M.S. of Trinity United Church held one of the most interesting meetings of the year at the parsonage when the Easter program was given. Mrs. Hamm led the worship service with suitable hymns and responsive readings on "Loving and Giving." Mrs. R. Burnside gave the story of the first Easter and the roll call was answered by passages on "Risen." The meeting was followed by a social half hour.

The postponed bridge and euchre of the Easter Star Lodge was held on Thursday in the hall with a splendid attendance. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. R. Belshaw and P. Gunn while the euchre prize went to Miss Bronson.

Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, rector of St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc was able to take the morning services on Sunday following his recent illness. He was accompanied to Madoc by Mrs. Swayne and children.

BENSFORT Y.P.S. PRESENTED PLAY

"There Goes the Bridge" Presented for Bailieboro Young People.

BAILIEBORO, April 24 (Examiner Correspondence)—"There Goes the Bride," the three act comedy drama prepared by the "Once A Week Club" of Bensfort United Church Young Peoples' Society, was presented in the Bailieboro hall under the auspices of the local young peoples group on Friday evening. The play was exceptionally well put on, each member filling their individual role in a most true to life form.

The cast included Mrs. E. Emberson, an Irish Maid employed in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Curtis (Clifford Emberson and Mrs. Judson Pue). Miss Mildred Hall and Miss Jean Stinson, daughters of Dr. Curtis and their brother Alf Dawson. Gomer Robertson a friend of the Curtis family and Misses Isobel Dawson and Jean Thompson, friends of the Curtis sisters. The role of an Irish traffic officer was played by Jack Moncrief, while Billie Howson acted the part of the hero of the cast and with his boxing trainer Bob Dawson added to the drama throughout. Minor roles were played in the concluding scene which was in the form of a mock marriage scene which added the complete ending to the splendid program, when Herbert Perrin, Kenneth Patton, and little Norma Pue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pue appeared in the wedding procession.

Musical numbers provided by the cast included choruses "Easter Parade," and "Honeymoon Hotel," and a vocal duet "Let the rest of the World Go By," by Miss J. Stinson and C. Emberson and comic readings by Misses Willa Watt and Isobel Dawson, Mrs. C. Barnard presided at the piano during the musical numbers.

The play was trained by Mrs. H. Howson and the manner in which it was presented reflected great credit upon the instructress.

The hall was filled to capacity and the applause which greeted each number was sufficient to approve the real enjoyment the audience received from the entertainment.

MR. HEPBURN'S MANIFESTO.

M. F. Hepburn, the Ontario provincial Liberal leader, has finally broken his silence on the wine and beer question, and in a manifesto issued over the week-end considerably clarifies the official position of the Liberal party.

If his party is returned to power at the coming election, Mr. Hepburn declares that it will put the Henry wine and beer measure into force unchanged.

The Government and the Liberal party are thus espousing identically the same policy in regard to relaxation of the liquor control regulations. Mr. Hepburn's manifesto clearing the air of all uncertainty in this regard.

Where this declaration leaves dry members of the Liberal and Progressive parties, especially those members of the Legislature who voted against the wine and beer by-the-glass bill when it was before the House, remains to be seen.

One of these members has already been eliminated by a party convention; on the other hand, W. E. N. Sinclair, a life-long temperance advocate, has been nominated in Ontario, and it would take a decidedly vivid imagination to visualize Mr. Sinclair taking the platform to support the policy that has just been announced by Mr. Hepburn.

Other members from dry constituencies and with a record of consistent opposition to any loosening up of liquor laws are obviously placed in a difficult position, and just how they will fit their views and their record into the Hepburn program of adopting the Government's legislation without a single change should be one of the most interesting features of the campaign.

A FROZEN ASSET DECREASES.

According to Ottawa reports, the ice cream business is one Canadian industry that has been particularly hard hit by the depression.

With family incomes in many cases wiped out or greatly reduced, this country has not had as much loose change to spend for ice cream cones and other frozen delicacies, and there has been a very substantial falling off, although Canadians still managed to dispose of a very large quantity.

The figures for 1932—and undoubtedly last year would show about the same conditions—reveal the fact that commercial ice cream production sustained a heavy drop during the year.

The total decreased to 6,175,000 gallons, which was a loss of 25 per cent., while the value declined to $8,166,000, which represented a decrease of 26 per cent. from the previous year.

Every province in Canada, by the way, reported a decline in ice cream production during 1932.

While it cannot be claimed that a nation of a little over ten million people that can spend over eight million dollars in a depression year on a delicacy that earlier generations never heard of is giving very convincing evidence of hard times, yet the fact remains that a 25 per cent. decline must have hit the industry very severely.

However, those engaged therein have the satisfaction of knowing that their business will be among the first to reflect an improvement in economic conditions.

THE WRONG COURSE.

Up in Stratford a May Day labor demonstration is planned for next Tuesday by newly organized unions, and according to advices from that city, promoters of the affair are going to unusual lengths in demanding a holiday for school pupils and by urging parents to keep their children out of school on that day, if the authorities do not declare a holiday.

The president of the Furniture and Woodworkers' Union has incidentally threatened that if children should be punished in any way for remaining away from their lessons on May Day to "send back a delegation to the Board of Education which they will not forget for a long time."

It seems to The Examiner that the zeal of the leaders of this United Front movement are showing a spirit and adopting a course that sooner or later will cause trouble.

If they want to hold a demonstration on May Day that is their own affair, but they surely have no right to demand that school schedules should be disarranged or to incite school children to ignore school rules.

There must be a certain amount of discipline in the management of our school system, and if pupils are to be encouraged to treat with contempt the rulings of their teachers and of the board of education whose duty it is to supervise education, seeds are being sown that may develop into a disagreeable harvest later on.

Surely the United Fronters can stage their May Day affair without trying to intimidate the school management.

"—COFFEE FOR ONE."

It happened in Rumania. General Cantacuzeno fought a duel with M. Mavrogordato. The correspondent says the reason is unknown to the public, so there may have been a woman in the background or perhaps the gallant general didn't like the way Mr. Mavrogordato parted his hair. In any event they agreed that nothing but a private battle could meet the demands of their mutual hostility and a duel was arranged.

The correspondent does not tell us what weapons were used. Possibly there is a rigid etiquette about Rumanian duels with which he assumes we are familiar, and for all we know it is the custom to pepper at one another with machine guns or clout one's opponent over the head with a poker. Nor are we enlightened as to the time of day of this encounter. Every reader of romantic fiction will want to think it was at dawn, in a secluded park just outside the city, and that the order was "pistols for two and coffee for one."

But out of all this vague atmosphere the fact does emerge that there was a duel and we get the definite statement that Mr. Mavrogordato was wounded on the face by General Cantacuzeno, despite which evidence of affection "they did not become reconciled." This is most surprising, and apparently contrary to all the laws of duelling. With a bullet through his ear, or possibly a sword slash across his cheek, one should have expected Mr. Mavrogordato to forgive and forget, to embrace the valorous soldier in token of lifelong amity.

What is the duel coming to, one wonders, if the duellist with a wounded face isn't prepared to acknowledge his opponent as the better man and his opponent's cause as approved by Providence! If tradition thus is to be upset the Rumanians might as well settle their differences through the law courts. —Ottawa Journal.

WHAT IT MEANS.

The public is a bit funny and on the whole hard to please. When it thought the Senate was not worked sufficiently hard, it kept nosing in at every opportunity on the platform and in the press belittling the Upper House for not being more active. Now that it has been shown that they had little or no grounds for a lot of the blather and that really the Senate accomplished much wor k in camparatively short space of time, and in addition was avaricious for more work, fun is poked by the press at the Upper House just the same. Nevertheless, in these days particularly, history of Canada will give the work of the Senate a pretty creditable place on its pages.

The present leader of the Government, the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, and the leader of the Liberals, the Honorable Raoul Dandurand, are both anxious that the House in which they sit shall be marked not only by dignity but by really useful activity and their wishes appear to be on the verge of being realized.

It has been the general custom, although not a necessary one, that private bills, always accompanied by a fee, have been introduced to Parliament by way of the Commons, and, of course, no matter how important or how essential speed in the discussion of them was, the Upper House, that is the Senate, with its membership composed largely of men of wide business experience, was not permitted to deal with them till very late in the session and sometimes within a few hours of its close.

As the latest move towards discouraging the introduction of these bills in the Commons and encouraging their introduction in the Senate, the Prime Minister and Mr. Meighen have arranged to introduce changes in the rules of both Houses by which it will be made more convenient for private bills to be introduced in the Senate and less convenient for them to be introduced in the Commons.

It is said the fee in the Commons will be increased to $500, while the fee in the Senate will remain at $200. It is also said that the time for the introduction in the Commons will be shortened. This would make it more convenient and cheaper for bills to be introduced in the Upper House, and unless of very vital import to some member interested, there is no doubt in the world that the Senate and its committee are most competent to deal with any such bill. The quality of the work done by the Senate committees is admitted by both Houses to be very superior and once a private bill gets through its two readings and then through the committee in the Senate it can be taken for granted that, so far as legislation is concerned, there is not much left to be done.

The reader can see in advance that if this new scheme of initiation of legislation in the Senate be pretty universally accepted, the length of the session might be materially shortened. In the Commons, the private bills are given a certain time for consideration in the House, and the time now so used could be devoted to government business if the Senate had charge of private bills. Then, too, with some bills of this nature, the committee of the Commons in some cases occupies many days in discussing and passing or remodelling them. The Senate has plenty of time to do this, and do it very effectively, so that the probabilities are that under the new method very little time will be occupied in the Commons in dealing with private bills.

It looks like a practical move, and, unless the members of the Commons strenuously object, it probably will become a reality even before this session is closed.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Now that Mr. Hepburn has cleared up his position on the beer bill it is surely time for Premier Henry to announce the date of the election.

The C.C.F. has decided to nominate four candidates in the Hamilton ridings, and the left wing Labor party also proposes to enter the fray in at least one constituency there. It looks like a merry fight, especially if the "drys" should also throw their hat into the ring.

Most of the old-timers having admitted that they do not remember longer or colder winter, it is not unreasonable to hope that summer's advent may not be unduly delayed.

According to opponents of the Marketing Bill, that legislation makes the consumer the forgotten man. He has always been that when farm prices start to climb.

The gold tax may be modified, but the industry will still have to contribute $10,000,000 in revenue to the Federal Government, according to Ottawa advices. Mr. Rhodes needs the money and seems determined to get it.

STORM DRIFT

By ETHEL M. DELL

CHAPTER 46

Harvey turned and sat down with an air of finality on the edge of the cliff with his face to the sea, his long arms clasped around his knees.

It was so hermit-like an attitude that Tiggie had no choice but to pass on. He did so with distinct reluctance, pursuing his way up the narrow path with a dogged acceptance of the situation that was not without a tinge of fatalism, since neither by remaining nor by departing did he feel that he could avert any threatened disaster. Harvey stood alone, just as he had always stood. Between him and the rest of humanity there was a great gulf which, in stormy weather at least, it was impossible to cross. He could only go his way, and leave the wizard to his spells.

But the last words that the wizard had uttered went with him in cheerful contrast to the uneasiness which otherwise might have occupied him exclusively. Harvey was an extraordinary person, but he had never known him to lie deliberately even in his maddest moments. So, allowing for the natural exaggeration of an artistic temperament, it seemed that there might possibly be a germ of truth even in that last statement of his.

Tiggie turned it this way and that in his mind, wondering, incredulous, half afraid to examine it too closely lest some practical explanation should occur to him to deprive it of its gossamer-like possibilities, yet too strongly attracted by it to let it float away. He was a fool of course, always had been, always would be. Yet Harvey had expressed himself in terms which certainly seemed to admit of but one interpretation. And he had spoken with confidence, as one who knew. Any but a fool would have stopped and questioned him, though from what he knew of Harvey he doubted if any satisfaction would have been extracted from the process. It was unlikely that there was any concrete evidence obtainable. Harvey had probably spoken more or less at random, from intuition rather than observation. But even so, his intuition was no despicable quality. His sight was keen and usually unerring. And it was the sane part of him that had spoken.

Should he turn back even now and ask him what he had meant? Would he regret it if he did? Or would it be the dawning of another epoch for him—the rising of a new sun scarcely dreamed of.

He paused in his tracks and looked back. But only the parched grass and the grim, stacked boulders met his eyes, and beyond them a sea that looked strangely arid, like a badly painted picture.

Something like a shiver went through him. He was conscious of a shadow between him and the sky—creeping mist or approaching storm—or gray, intangible foreboding!

But the miniature headland on which Harvey had sat was empty. The wizard had disappeared.

There was no point in turning back. Tiggie lighted his pipe again and walked on.

The ominous lowering of the sky continued throughout the afternoon, but no rain fell.

"It'll take a day or two to break," said Joe Penny the prophet when Tiggie returned parched from his walk over the cliffs. "Then there'll be rain in plenty and likely some landslides. Yer see, the sun does the cracking and the rain does the widening till them fissures can't bear the weight of the water no longer, and then down they goes. That bit of track you been along today, well, it gets eaten away in mouthfuls every storm, just as if someone was a-biting at it."

"Yes. I saw some pretty wide cracks," said Tiggie. "But it looks fairly safe at present."

"Oh, safe enough till the rain comes," said old Joe. "Then, yer see, it runs down from the hills and turns 'em into cravats and down they goes. Never noticed the rocks along this shore, sir? They all come from the top, every one of 'em. What with the water below and the water above, there ain't no stopping it, sir, believe me. It's perpetual, as you might say. Like life," added Joe irrelevantly, dusting a cup with his apron: "All alone for tea, sir? Not expecting your friend to join you?"

"Who? Mr. Gilmore? No," said Tiggie. "He's out somewhere—sketching."

"Ah!" said Joe Penny darkly. "No doubt he has good reason so to be. But it's a funny profession to my mind. Don't give a man much rest, sir, do it? Up afore daylight and out until dark and after. Worsen farming to my mind. 'Spose there's money in it, sir."

"Some people do it for love," said Tiggie, pouring himself out some tea.

"Ah!" The landlord nodded comprehension. "It be a bit like that, bain't it? No rest nohow—not when you got it proper. Yes, love and genius—they're like a fever—make you downright loopy sometimes." He paused to chuckle. "Yes, I seen 'em before, these artists. Downright loopy they be."

Tiggie grunted, feeling that to agree openly would be disloyal, but finding no ground for disagreement.

"Get many of them here?" he asked after a pause, as Joe Penny still lingered.

"Oh, moderate, sir, moderate. They comes and goes—comes and goes." Joe chuckled again. "They're what I call a random lot, yer know, sir. They don't belong to no particular season."

"Well, I suppose Farne's worth painting all the year round," said Tiggie.

"There ain't nothing but the sea and cliffs to paint," objected Joe. "But they don't see the same as we do. They sees all sorts o' things as ain't there. Regular loopy they be—regular loopy."

He seemed to enjoy this conclusion and chuckled over it at great length, while Tiggie solemnly munched bread and butter and wondered where the joke was. He did not privately think that all artists were as eccentric as Harvey, but he could not say so to this simple critic of genius, so he ate his meal in silence while Joe Penny finally talked himself to a standstill and withdrew.

He always paid Viola an evening visit, and he went up to his room to make himself presentable after his tramp. He passed the door of Harvey's on his way and glanced in, discovering to his surprise the wildest disorder, as though every drawer and corner had been ransacked in search of something. But there was no sign of Harvey himself and he went on, reflecting that the artist must have dashed in and out again in the course of the afternoon without the landlord's knowledge.

A few minutes later he went out into the brooding airlessness of the evening, and followed the path by the side of the gully that led to the shore.

There was very little water flowing over the stones, and such as there was made a tinkling sound that was somehow secret as the sea had been in the caves that afternoon.

"What the dickens is going to happen?" said Tiggie with his face to the sky.

But even Joe Penny could not have told him that.

He reached the shore. The tide had gone out, and the sand looked lonely, the gray rocks grim. Overhead was a swirl of seagulls swooping round and round in endless procession with weird cries like the wails of hungry children. There was a desolation in the scene that pierced his heart.

He crossed the stream by its primitive stone bridge and raised his eyes, as was his invariable custom, to that sheltered nook which was to him the most precious corner of the whole earth. She was there again as usual, but for the first time she was not lying down, but propped nearly upright on the couch. And before her—a few feet away, with his easel—sat Harvey, crouched, intent, eager, the personification of fanatical enthusiasm, working feverishly, ceaselessly.

Tiggie stood still for a moment or two, stood and stared. Neither artist nor model was looking in his direction. He was as it were completely outside the picture, and with a queer stab of pain it came to him that his presence would be as definitely unwelcome to one as it was unneeded by the other. For Viola was smiling and her attitude was by no means that of the lethargic invalid, while Harvey—Harvey was somehow like a starved animal with a kill. He was as it were gorging himself with his art. It was his hour—the rare event of his life; the mad sweet ecstasy of creation was upon him, and it would have been literally cruel to interrupt.

A sensation of coldness succeeded that quick pang at Tiggie's heart, and he turned slowly from the sight and walked in the other direction along the shore. It would be selfish to push in where he was not wanted, and to his straightforward mind his own superfluity was abundantly obvious. No one would miss him—not even the children; for he had always been at Viola's disposal at this hour. So, rather blindly, all his dreams of the afternoon gone like a wreath of vapor before the east wind, he tramped away from the scene, leaving Harvey in possession, since it was evident that she found Harvey infinitely more entertaining than he himself could ever hope to be.

He had already walked some miles that day, and he had not the slightest desire to test his physical powers any further, but an inexorable Fate seemed to have decreed that he should pursue his weary way until the last measure of his strength ran out. For to have sat down to rest would have been an even greater trial to him just then. So, drearily forcing himself to fresh effort, he started upon the venture which was to be as it were the turning point in the race he had set out so resolutely to win.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

QUEBEC, QUEBEC

This city is steeped in more Canadian history than any other place in the dominion. Strangely enough, its name is not of French origin, as is popularly supposed, but owes its derivation to an Indian word.

The city and the province in which it is located, was named by the Indians "Kepeck," which translated means "a narrowing point of the river." It is at this point that the majestic St. Lawrence narrows slightly. Down through the years the pronunciation and the names of those responsible until we have the present form of Quebec. The reason for the change and the name of those responsible are not available.

A Thought

AN IDEALIST

The Idealist stands with feet planted in the original clay from which he sprang. Above him is his dream. In his heart is a desire more or less strong to bring the actual into some likeness of the dream. The tool that is to shape out in this intractable earth the ideal conscience at the root of him, and thus connect the two, is nothing but his will and his right hand. As a man fashions a garden out of rough ground, so must the idealist seize upon the material of life that is nearest to him; so that at long last his eyes may look on what the eyes of his soul have beheld from the beginning. This is creator's work, tremendous work, for the raw material of life is stubborn and rude and hard—rude and hard enough to have broken many and many a great heart. Magnificent as they are, the laws that bind and shape this raw material of life are rude and hard also.—Grace Rhys.

One-Minute Pulpit

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

GOVERNOR BURNED IN EFFIGY

On this date, in 1872 Winnipeg was the scene of a demonstration without parallel in modern Canadian history. An effigy labelled "Archibald" was carried by a mob through the streets right to the gate of old Fort Garry, then Government House. I have been unable to ascertain what was the cause of this outburst against the representative of the sovereign—perhaps some western old timer can tell me—but it was apparently the result of a public meeting of protest against something done by the legislature which the governor sanctioned.

There was considerable sensation over the incident; the more solid citizenry volubly protested against the "insult by a drunken rabble" and it was not long before it was determined that a counter agitation was necessary. The result was that within a few days (on the 27th) a deputation of "leading citizens" waited on his honor (who by the way insisted upon being called "His Excellency" until a ruling by Sir John A. Macdonald forbade the using of the designation applicable only to the governor general) and presented him with an address of confidence, thanks for his public services, and inferentially, regretting the street disturbance, which was, of course, not mentioned.

Governor Archibald graciously accepted the address, "thanked the loyal subjects," and the incident was ended. The governor left Winnipeg the following December 1, and returned to Halifax, where on July 5, 1873, he became the lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia, an office he held for 10 years, retiring in 1883 but living until December 14, 1892.

The only precedent for the incident is to be found in Upper Canada in the early days when an effigy of the then governor was burned at Hamilton and although a reward was offered no one was ever arrested for the "insult to the Crown."

IGNORES BIBLE PASSAGES

The Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.

To the Editor,—Having had occasion to spend a day or two in your city while passing through, I dropped in on Rev. Mr. Rolls' illustrated lecture on Zionism on Friday evening, which appeared to have for its object an attempt to discredit the Anglo-Israel theory—a theory no longer, by the way—which as I believe most people now know, seeks to prove that the Anglo-Saxon race is descended from the lost tribes of Israel.

A little history is not out of place just here. Early in the 10th century B.C. the nation of Israel was split into two parts—the kingdom of Israel, comprising ten tribes, and the kingdom of Judah, comprising two tribes. Two hundred and sixty years later the northern kingdom of Israel was conquered by the powerful Assyrian Empire, and deported into captivity to the number of several millions. There is no evidence that they ever returned to Palestine. There is evidence that during the following ten or twelve centuries they lived in central Europe, gradually migrating to the shores of the North and Baltic seas, and to the British Isles.

The kingdom of Judah was conquered by Babylon under Nebuchadnezzar, and deported to Babylon from 604 B.C. to 584 B.C. Here they remained, as prophesied, for 70 years, when remnant estimated at 70,000 returned to Jerusalem, and set up the Jewish nation. The word Jew is not used in the Bible till after the return of Judah from Babylon and is never used to describe ten-tribed Israel.

Rev. Mr. Rolls stated there are 20 passages in the Bible to prove the Anglo-Saxons are not ten-tribed Israel, but ignores ten times twenty and more that prove they are. He quoted Jeremiah 24:9 and 29:18, saying these art not true of The British Commonwealth and America. Certainly not, because both passages deal with the House of Judah. No where in either chapter is the House of Israel mentioned. Is this the best refutation opponents of Anglo-Israel can advance?

Regarding the wonderful progress being made by the Zionists in reclaiming Palestine we might ask, under whose protection and with whose assistance are they doing it? Was it coincidence that the armies of the British Empire alone delivered Jerusalem from the Turk in 1917? Was it coincidence that Palestine was mandated to Britain after the war? If it had been mandated to Japan or Italy would the Jews have secured it for a national homeland? Or even France, as witness the result of French mandate over Syria. In this connection read Jeremiah 3. It concerns both Judah and Israel and note verse 18, "In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers. Interesting is it not?

Anglo-Israel critics profess to believe that the ten tribes disappeared from the earth. Then how explain Ezekiel's prophesy of the vision of the valley of dry bones. Hundreds of years later James commenced his epistle to "the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad."

Christ said to the Jews "The kingdom shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." What nation is now bringing forth the fruits thereof." What nation is now bringing forth the fruits? Ninety-five per cent of the missionaries are British and American. Who has translated the Bible into 700 languages and dialects, and given it to the whole world? How explain God's seven-fold promise to Abraham that his seed should become a nation and a company of nations. This promise is not fulfilled in the Jews, and if they are to fulfill it, it must be soon, for Rev. Rolls admits we are living in the last days.

How also explain the stone kingdom of Daniel 2, and Isaiah 19:19. How also explain God's solemn, unconditional promise to David that his throne should be established forever, and in Jeremiah 33: 20-21 says, "If ye can break my covenant of the day and my covenant of the night; and that there should not be day and night in their season, then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne?" How long is it since the Jews have had a king? The British throne however, has endured through the ages, and when thrones have been toppling every year it is more secure than ever.

It is impossible in short space to treat a subject so vast as to require years to master it. But in conclusion, read the Bible. It is a book for the common people and contains all the requisites for national and personal salvation. Read the prophesies and apply those concerning Israel to Anglo-Saxondom, and a comprehensive plan is revealed from Genesis to Revelation. Read it any other way and it remains an enigma.

Rev. Rolls remedy for the depression is correct. Judah should be assisted to walk to Israel.

THE MULBERRY TREES

I forget much, but I remember much of that neighborhood we lived in when we were very little....I remember the fresh little girl who stuck out her tongue and said "yah" to us when we moved in and stuck out her tongue and said I remember the policeman across the way who'd offer me my choice of a dime or a nickel and how he'd laugh when I took the nickel (much to my brother's disgust) because it was bigger....I remember the big haystack where we played circus in the summer....I remember the Gordon setter who could climb a ladder and pulled us around in a little cart....I remember that pale-faced kid who lived down the alley, and I wonder what became of him....I remember the flock of hissing geese which chased me into a mud puddle when I was wearing my nice new sailor suit....I remember the time my mother put us outside the front gate and told us to go away because we had been bad—and how we yelled....I remember the humming bird in the garden; remember the two white rabbits who became parents and grandparents and great-great grandparents in less than a year; but mostly, it seems, I remember trees.

There were the umbrella trees with their glossy green leaves. And the pink and white locusts and how honey-sweet their flowers were to suck. And the cork elms so easy to climb, with their rough bark. And the two great sycamores and how we'd string a long rope between them and put a pulley on the rope and have thrilling, dangerous rides. And how through all the neighborhood in the springtime the cottonwood trees would send their wisps of stuff on every passing breeze.... But most persistently, I think, I remember the mulberry trees. Feeding on these the silk worms of the East spin a shimmering lovely fabric. Out of my memories of the mulberry, I weave another fabric of childhood pleasure—and of how sweet it was on a warm summer's day to loiter beneath the mulberry tree and touch the sweet fruit and let it fall, almost, into our waiting mouths....And eat and eat and eat of the fruit until our small, extensible stomachs were full as full could be and we'd lie on the grass and plan great dreams of the future and be utterly content....And to those friendly mulberries I am forever grateful.

International Nickel added 50 cents net to close at $28.75 on good volume and Consolidated Smelters closed a point lower at 165. Ford "A" dropped ¼ and Brazilian and C.P.R. closed unchanged. Offerings were rather heavy in Distillers Seagrams and Walkers common, and both closed down ½ to a full point and Canadian Industrial Alcohol at 13¼ was off ¼.

BANKER OUSTS THREE BANDITS IN GUN BATTLE

Illinois Town Vigilantes Turn Out and Lend Assistance.

ONE WOUNDED, TAKEN.

Second Escapes in Car, Third Cornered in Lumber Yard.

ROUND LAKE, Ill., April 24.—(A. P.)—A quick shooting bank president and alert vigilantes fought it out with three bandits today and thwarted an attempted robbery of the First State Bank of Round Lake.

One robber was wounded and captured. One got away in his automobile and the third was believed to be cornered in a lumberyard.

The trio walked into the bank at 9:30 a.m. and started firing at random.

E. C. Weber, the president, with his wife and Miss Vilah Hart, a clerk, were in the bank. Bullet proof glass saved them.

Weber grabbed his own gun at the first shot, poked it through an opening of the protected cage and gave the robbers a battle. The sound of firing brought the organized vigilantes from the neighborhod shops on the doublequick, and as the bandits ran out without a cent of loot they met a rain of bullets.

One robber dropped, suffering from bullet wounds. Without attempting to gather up his comrade another of the trio started the car and raced away. The third took to his heels and reached cover in the lumberyard with a posse on his trail.

Round Lake is a small town in the lake region of Northeastern Illinois, west of Waukegan and 10 miles south of the Wisconsin line.

SILVER ISSUES SHOW SETBACKS

Close Finds Monday's Price Levels Broken, Although Losses Not Heavy.

BIG GOLDS DOWN.

TORONTO, April 24 (C.P.).—The mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange was unable to get going to-day and the close found Monday's final price level broken though losses were not heavy in any department. Silver issues were depressed by the drop in the price of spot silver and buying of small proportions in the base metals. Recessions in the big golds ranged up to 75 cents.

Teck Hughes was sold quite actively in the early session and weakened to $6.60, but it recovered partly to close off 10 cents net at $6.70. Wright Hargreaves worked down 15 cents to $9.50 and a similar loss was taken by Hollinger, while Dome, Lake Shore and McIntyre eased down 25 to 50 cents.

Losses predominated in the base metals with Noranda taking the main drop by easing 35 cents to $42.40.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, April 24 (C.P.). — Spotty prices prevailed in quiet stock trading to-day. Selling appeared in some of the oils and metals. Industrials and rail leaders were narrowly mixed. Some specialties were firm. Coca-Cola rose more than 2. General Motors was fractionally higher and Consolidated Gas ruled unchanged. U.S. Smelting lost 3 points. American Telephone, U.S. Steel, and Socony Vacuum eased moderately.

Transfers approximated 1 250,000 shares.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 24 (C.P.). —Completing 40 years on the staff of the Kingston Penitentiary, Deputy Warden George Sullivan was last night presented with a gold wrist watch by fellow members of the staff of the institution. The presentation was made by Warden W. B. Megloughlin. Incidentally yesterday was the deputy warden's birthday also.

Deputy Warden Sullivan, 30 years ago, was regarded as one of the greatest pitchers in Ontario, going up to the Toronto Leafs and pitching some sensational ball until he permanently injured his throwing arm.

ALLOW MEMBERS BOTH CABINETS ON BANK BOARDS

Motion to Bar Ministers is Voted Down in Overwhelming Ballot.

REFLECT ON HONESTY.

Chartered Accountants Urge Lifting of Restrictions Against Profession.

OTTAWA, April 24 (C.P.)—The House Banking Committee turned thumbs down to-day on a suggestion to prohibit Federal and Provincial Cabinet Ministers from sitting on the directorates of banks. Actually, the proposal would have affected only one man, Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec.

By an overwhelming vote, the committee turned down this motion proposed by Henry Spencer, U.F.A., Battle River; only six members supporting it. Chairman R. B. Hanson, Cons., York-Sunbury, and Hon. W. D. Euler, Lib., North Waterloo, embraced the occasion to "let off steam" on the popular opinion of politicians.

The chairman said he would hesitate to place additional reflection on the honesty and integrity of Provincial and Federal members, and to add strength to the popular opinion politicians were disreputable characters. In agreeing with these sentiments, Mr. Euler said it seemed to be the popular opinion that politicians were "out to get something for themselves" and legislators should not support this belief by placing restrictions in the laws of the country. If a man transgressed the proprieties of office, his constituents would look after him at the next election.

Supporting the Spencer motion were the following: Gagnon, Cons., Dorchester; Dorion, Cons., Quebec-Montmorency; Coote, U.F.A., MacLeod; Spencer, U.F.A., Battle River, Morand, Cons., Essex East, and Willis, Cons., Souris.

Accountants Ask Changes

The committee to-day heard evidence from chartered accountants against restrictions contained in the Bank Act against their profession.

The Bank Act, as amended ten years ago, prohibited chartered accountants from acting both for the shareholders and management of banks.

Colonel Lockhart Gordon, Toronto, President of the Ontario Society of Chartered Accountants, claimed the present Bank Act was "a direct reflection on the integrity and honesty" of charatered accountants. Under it, an accountant who examined accounts for shareholders could not accept work from the bank itself. If he worked for the bank, he could take no retainer from the shareholders.

The restriction against chartered accountants was not in any other Canadian or English law, Col. Gordon submitted. "We quite appreciate an auditor of a bank should not act for a customer of a bank where conflicting interests might arise, but after all, chartered accountants are members of a profession which has a high ethical standard. It seems unreasonable to say to them if they are auditors of a bank they cannot render other professional services to that bank which would have the result of helping the auditor to do his work as auditor of the bank through the knowledge which he thus obtained.'

Department Open Minded

Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Finance Minister, intimated the department had an open mind on the suggested amendment.

David Young of Montreal, representing the Quebec Association of accountants, said the section restricted the usefulness of the auditors for bank shareholders. Coversely, it restricted the usefulness of bank auditors.

C. S. Thompkins, Dominion Inspector-General of Banks, approved the banks being able to employ their shareholders 'auditors for special work. He could see no reason why the section should not be eliminated.

The section, interjected Chairman R. B. Hanson, was included in the Act by Hon. W. S. Fielding when Finance Minister, as an additional protection to shareholders.

William Duff, Lib., Antigonish-Guysboro, gave notice he would move to delete the section on the ground no restriction should be placed against shareholders' auditors.

NIPPON WARNING ON AID TO CHINA

ated in the statement and Yokoyama gave the impression here that Japan is sure of herself in carrying out that doctrine.

Dangerous Practice.

"If armaments are sold to one party in China it will be dangerous," Yokoyama said in replying to questions concerning the declaration. He added:

"Japan does not object to aid from the League of Nations if it is well employed, but we will warn the league we do not want it used against the policy of Japan, which is a policy of peace."

Thus, with Japan openly suspicious of the new plan for re-organization in China, which Dr. Ludwig Rajchman, the league's envoy, is bringing back to Geneva via Vancouver, great interest has been aroused in the meeting of the League of Nations Council to which the plan will be submitted on May 14.

Yokoyama, listing the countries with which Japan would collaborate in maintaining peace, included India and the Dutch East Indies, as well as the Philippines and Siam, but he explained he refrred to them as geographical divisions.

He was asked if he regarded Russia as Asiatic.

"It is half and half," Yokoyama replied. "We wish to collaborate with Russia."

BRITAIN CABLES STAND ON CHINA TO JAP CABINET

Ambassador in Tokyo Ordered to Clarify Verbally, England's Position.

PRESENT NO NOTE.

Nippon Ministry Deepens Anxiety by Approving Hands Off China Policy.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Eng., April 24. (C. P. Cable).—The British ambassador in Tokyo received cabled instructions from the foreign office today to present to the Japanese government the British views on its recent declaration against foreign intervention in China.

No note will be presented to the Japanese government itself, nor, it is understood, are explanations to be asked of Japan.

The instructions to Sir Francis Lindley, the British ambassador in Tokyo, are to make a verbal communication clarifying the British position on China. This does not necessitate a reply from the Japanese government, although Sir Francis is expected to report back shortly the nature of the conversation.

The British position on China rests on the Washington Nine-Power Treaty of 1922 and other agreements.

The British View

Britain, it is understood, contends that the treaty under which the signatories accepted joint responsibility for maintaining the independence of China cannot be affected by a unilateral declaration of any one signatory—such as the Japanese statement circulated last week.

The nine signatory powers are the United States, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal. Signed Feb. 6, 1922, the treaty is operative until Jan. 31, 1936.

Under it the signatory powers briefly obligate themselves to respect the sovereignty and independence of China. They pledge themselves to the "open door," equality of opportunity, and agree to set themselves against any spheres of influence or mutually exclusive privileges that might be sought by any one or any combination of the signatories.

Four Courses Open.

Four possible courses lay before Britain. She might have asked Japan for an explanation; she might have formally protested against the declaration; she might have taken the view the question was properly one for discussion between the signatories of the nine-power treaty, or she might merely have stated her own position.

The actual nature of the instructions to Sir Francis Lindley are not likely to be made public for a few days. But in authoritative circles they are understood to follow the last-mentioned course. Either of the other three, it was felt, would probably mean unsatisfactory delays.

None the less, Tokyo's next step is anxiously awaited in political circles. The anxiety is further deepened by reports that the Japanese cabinet to-day officially approved the "hands off China" policy, as it is generally construed here.

In the House of Commons to-morrow Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, will face another shower of questions. Three members have already given notice of their intention to seek further information on the situation.

TOBACCO MEN APPEAR BEFORE STEVENS PROBE

Minister Reads Extracts From Sutherland Report to Clear Situation.

COMBINE CHARGED.

Witness Claims Growers Invested $20,000,000 Against Firms $11,000,000.

OTTAWA, April 24.—(CP)—Tobacco growers from all parts of Canada appeared before the Stevens committee on mass buying and price spreads today to give evidence in the own behalf.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, chairman declared before the first witness was called it might be advisable to read extracts from the report of Donald Sutherland, who conducted an inquiry into the tobacco situation. On the extracts he said, might be based evidence of witnesses today.

Mr. Sutherland's report said there had been 51,300,000 pounds of tobacco grown in Canada in 1931, of which 44,750,000 was grown in Ontario. A marked increase was noted in flue-cured tobacco used in manufacturing cigarettes. This crop increased from 10,500,000 pounds in 1929 to 24,500,000 in 1931.

The British market had increased its imports of the tobacco from 500,000 pounds to 5,500,000 pounds because of the reduced prices and protection given.

Malpractices

The investigation was due to a "feeling of suspicion" held by growers, the report continued. There had been antiquated marketing systems, and 'barn buying' had led to malpractices.

The grower was offered a price for his entire crop, under this system, with a lower price for inferior tobacco, which was determined by the company's own buyers.

In 1930 the Imperial Tobacco Company opened the market at 40 cents a pound and at 30 cents in the following year. If an offer was refused, it 'invariably happened' later offers were lower.

One Price Offered

Because of short crops in 1932, Canadian growers felt elated and awaited the opening of the market, the report continued. About 30 buyers were registered at Tillsonburg, Ont. In late October, after a long wait, the market opened at 24 cents, and in no case were higher prices offered. In a few days the price dropped to perhaps half these figures. The market was opened by Imperial Tobacco. Charges of a combine were numerous and finally led to an appeal for the investigation.

The Imperial was blamed by Mr. Sutherland for holding off the market and causing the demoralization. The concern, a month previously had large orders from England awaiting fulfillment. The company had instructions to fill these orders, the commissioner reported, and yet the market opening was delayed.

There were clear indications, Mr. Sutherland said, the Imperial Tobacco Company wielded the 'big stick' with regard to prices paid and amounts purchased.

The First Witness

First witness called was E. C. Scythes, head of the Victoria plantations at Simcoe, Ont., and an executive of several tobacco organizations. He appeared before the Ontario Legislature's sub-committee on tobacco a short time ago.

Tobacco growers, he said were in a deplorable condition. About $20,000,000 was invested in Ontario by the growers, while tobacco companies had around $11,000,000 invested as fixed capital.

Many Forced to Quit

Many of the growers, he said, had been forced out of business by the low prices paid for tobacco, and, in fact, the major tobacco companies in Canada had received more money in profits than the growers had received for their products.

Referring to the tobacco "panic" of 1932, he said the Imperial Tobacco Company "opened the market" at 24 cents after a lengthy delay, and then within a few day the price dropped to as low as 11 cents for tobacco equally as good as that which commanded the top price.

He suggested legislation to set up a marketing board which would make statistics available as to the amount of tobacco on hand, grading, and prices existing, so the growers would have something on which to operate.

The only reduction in prices to the consumer, he maintained, had come through a 33 per cent reduction in the excise tax; but, as it worked out, the reduction had amounted to only 25 per cent, so the manufacturer, not the grower or consumer, had actually benefitted by the reduction.

Growers Warned.

The growers, continued Mr. Scythes, were constantly told they were producing too much, but they were in the dark as to what quantities were on hand. Efforts to obtain this information were fruitless

Continuing, the witness declared the use of the word "Virginia" in describing tobacco should be allowed. At present, the term is permitted only in connection with tobacco coming from Virginia, Georgia, and the Carolinas, although an exactly similar type of leaf is grown in Canada. British manufacturers, he claimed, sometimes refused to accept the Canadian type because of this prohibition.

Questioned as to what would be a fair price for the growers, he thought around 40 cents a pound should be paid although "we were not too prosperous at around 40 cents."

At present, the tobacco-growing organizations in South-western Ontario had a marketing board which made appraisals of crops and gave the growers some idea of what prices could be expected, he said.

The buyers operated under competitive conditions "sometimes," he said, but last year when the Imperial Company stopped buying in December, no one else bought any tobacco. For years this firm had opened the markets, and he declared he had never known of anyone exceeding the top price paid by the firm.

Questioned concerning the recent agreement whereby the production would be curtailed by 25 per cent., he said the Imperial concern was co-operating with the growers in effecting the reduction of acreage, and 85 per cent. of the growers had agreed to comply

NEW GOLD TAX STIRS ATTACK BY TASCHEREAU

Quebec Premier Charges Levy is Infringement on Rights of Provinces.

HARM INDUSTRY.

Ralston Claims Burden Will be Borne by Two or Three Sections of Country.

(By The Canadian Press)

Two powerful voices from the Liberal side of the political barrier had risen to-day in condemnation of the 10-percent tax on gold production forecast in the budget speech last week of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance.

The newcomers to the ranks of protestants against the tax were Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec, who declared the levy was an infringement upon the rights of the provinces; and Hon. J. L. Ralston, K.C., financial critic for the opposition.

The province of Quebec, Mr. Taschereau said, exacted but a small royalty on gold mines so that development would not be retarded; this spring it had been considered the royalty might be increased so the province could share in prosperity in the mining industry but the idea had been dropped when "we were shown an increase in taxation would cause irreparable harm to the industry."

Mr. Ralston devoted a large part of his lengthy speech in the House of Commons yesterday to the subject of the gold tax. "Unfair, unequitable and unjustifiable" he branded it.

Unsound Policies

It was the inevitable result of unsound fiscal policies. "It is discrimination against a particular industry and secondly it is discrimination against a particular section of Canada". Generally speaking it would be paid by two or three sections of the country. Confidence in the industry would be undetermined, he added.

Belief the government would modify the tax has been expressed in several quarters since the budget was brought down last Wednesday. On Friday Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines stated he had every reason to believe "that in the reconsideration of the picture a solution will be found that will be vastly different from the tax as announced from Ottawa." Mr. McCrea hoped for changes that would differentiate between various grades or ores so as not to put low-grade mines out of business. Premier George S. Henry of Ontario spoke similarly.

Protests were made by many mining companies last week and a delegation of Ontario mining men hastened to Ottawa to interview government officials.

CHICAGO COURTS PREPARE TO TRY INSULLS ON HOME-COMING

Samuel and Martin, Founders of Great Utilities Empire, Nearing Another Chapter in the Story of Their Eventful Lives.

CHICAGO, April 24.—(CP)—Two men who headed a once-great Empire must join again in common cause, not to wield their lost authority, but to face the law's probing of their rule. Day by day the legal mechanism of Cook County's courts nears completion of its preparation for the pressing of charges against the chieftains of the Insull utilities, once valued at $4,000,000.

As the steamer Exilona neared United States shores bearing Samuel Insull to face the accusation of fraud, his brother, Martin Joseph, extradited from Canada prepared to put up fight for acquittal on charges of embezzlement and theft.

The two brothers, born in England, together built up in the United States the wide-spread Insull companies. They fled at the same time when the towering financial structure was doomed to crumble, and at practically the same hour they were forced to return—Samuel from Balkan waters and Martin from his Ontario refuge in Orillia. Both retained their freedom for 17 months while United States authorities made relentless efforts to have them returned to the United States.

Samuel, 74 years old and one-time president of 11 companies and director of 87 other large concerns, faces charges of mail fraud. His 62-year-old brother, brought back to Chicago from Orillia, Ont., is named in charges involving $300,000.

With the fall of the Insull utilities empire, the law began to process and in October, 1932, while Samuel was in Athens, Martin was held in Barrie, Ont. Athenian courts found no reason to extradite Samuel when he came before them.

But subsequently the Greek government reversed the judicial decision and ordered him to leave. No country would open its frontiers to the aged fugitive. Finally he slipped through a watchful cordon and turned up on a charted tramp steamer. It was the Turkish government that finally turned him over to United States authorities after the steamer reached Istanbul, to be brought back to the country where he had reared his vast companies. On Friday, April 13, he was placed aboard the steamer Exilona at Smyrna, bound for Boston.

Martin Insull, brought before Mr. Justice A. C. Kingstone, in Toronto was ordered extradited for trial. He fought the extradition order in the Ontario courts for several months, being brought to Toronto from his temporary home in Orillia on several occasions when his appeal was carried to various tribunals. In his final appeal, to the appellate division of the High Court, the judgment delivered by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock reduced the amount named in the indictments presented against him, but the order of extradition to the United States was upheld. He was taken to Chicago March 27.

The trial will write another chapter in the story of the lives of two brothers who rose from practical obscurity to a pinnacle position in the financial world of the North American continent.

SOCIAL SERVICE WORK OUTLINED

Dr. J. P. Jones Believes Church Has Great Part to Play in Bettering Human Life.

RAISE STANDARDS.

LONDON, Ont., April 24 (C.P.)—Rev. Dr. J. Phillips Jones, general secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, outlined the development and accomplishments of the council which was founded more than 25 years ago to express the voice of the churches of Canada on social and moral questions, when the Dominion conference opened here yesterday.

"What is the use of making converts to the church if conditions in the world make Christian living impossible?" asked Rev. Dr. Jones while reviewing the work.

He declared that while the council does not believe that the world is to be saved by soup kitchens at least the church has a great part to play in the moulding and betterment of human life.

Dr. Jones told of the achievements of the council in improving slum conditions, in mental welfare work and the raising of the standard of immigrants coming into Canada.

"We cannot grow a better race while slum conditions exist," said Dr. Jones and told of the crowded tenements in Toronto and other cities. He commented on the shack towns and jungles that are a part of even our newest cities.

Shack Town Evils

"Shack town homes are flimsy boxes built of old board, tin and tarpaper. Two and three of these are crowded on a single tiny lot, in many cases." They are usually filthy inside and out and what of the children who are born and raised in such homes. As some one has said:

"They are born in boxes, live in little boxes and are put in smaller boxes when they die."

Dr. Jones touched briefly on the many activities of the council both in research and educational work, which covers economic, industrial and moral problems affecting Canada.

Following the secretary's report the council decided to make no change in its constitution but to carry on along the original lines laid down by the founders of which Dean F. N. Tucker of this city was one.

The treasurer's report showed receipts of $11,487.71 in 1933 with expenditures totalling $10,862.70 for the year.

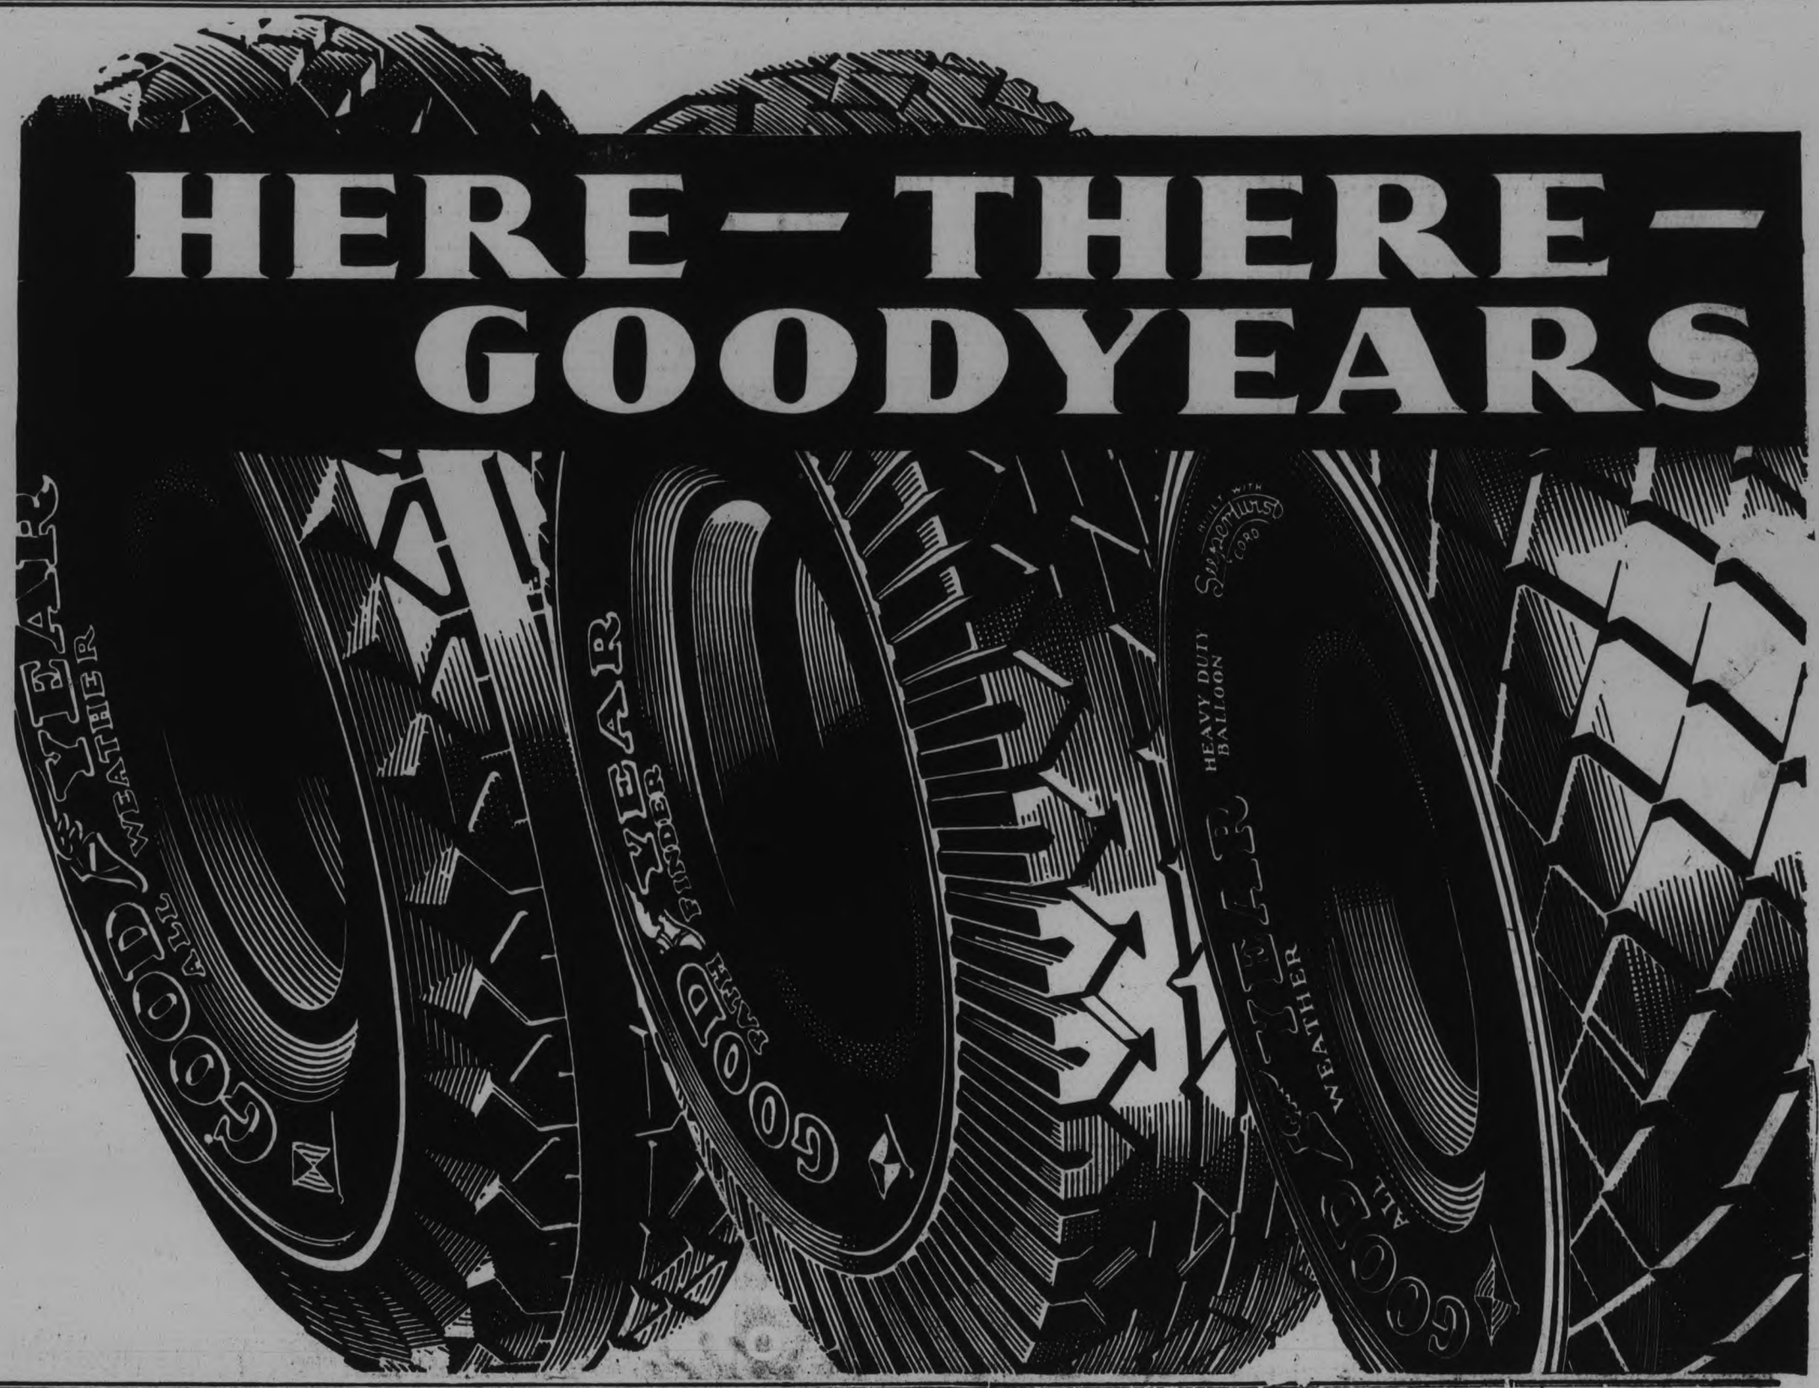
Miss Rose Macnamara was one of the winners of the 'lucky dip,' in the book contest sponsored by Herbert Strange, who broadcasts the "Liberty Shelf" each Sunday afternoon over radio station CFRB. Mr. Strange is from the book department of the Robert Simpson Company, and in order to test the size of his audience decided to offer prizes of books to the first two or three persons whose letters were drawn in what he styled the 'lucky dip.' Entrants could make choice of any book reviewed on the Sunday when the contest was announced, and Miss Macnamara asked for "The Sycamore Tree."

Easter communion service was observed in St. Andrew's church on Sunday morning, with the pastor officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Allen Preston and their daughters, Misses Margaret and Olga were received into membership by letter, transfer being from Trinity United Church, Peterborough. Mr. Preston and family are now living on the Seventh Line, Cavan, purchase having been made of the former Offa Williamson farm.

Mr. J. D. Armstrong was in Toronto last week attending the funeral of his niece, Mrs. Dingman. Previous to her marriage Mrs. Dingman was Mary I. Kerr, a former Millbrook girl, born and brought up in this community. Mrs. Dingman's husband passed away from a sudden attack of heart failure, while driving his automobile in Toronto, a little over one year ago.

Piercey Pitt, who recently underwent an operation for spendicitis at Dr. H. A. Turner's private hospital, was able to be taken to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pitt on Sunday.

New hours arranged for the public library at a recent meeting of the Board, are as follows: Monday, 4 to 5 p.m.; Wednesday, 7 to 9 p.m.; Saturday, 3.30 to 5.30 p.m., and 7 to 9 p.m. A plan is under consideration for recataloguing all books in the library, and the Board is appealing for any overdue books to be returned not later than May 1. A shipment of new books, valued at $45 has been received and these have been placed on the shelves for circulation.



WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright.
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light
No unkind word our lips shall pass
No envy sour the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal—
The good of all mankind

At a recent Institute gathering Miss Rita McMurray gave a talk on agriculture somewhat out of the usual runs and most interesting and instructive. Miss McMurray told her story in a fascinating manner as follows:

There is a story from the long ago which tells of the dying father who called his sons about him and whispered feebly: "There is great treasure hidden in the garden."

The sons could hardly wait to bury their dead father before the thud of their picks were going in the garden. Day after day they dug deep and wide as they feverishly searched for the treasure. But no treasure was found. Then the eldest said: "Let us not lose every whit of our labor; let us plant this pick-scarred garden." So the garden was planted. In the Fall it yielded a harvest so bountiful that the meaning of their father's words dawned upon them —"Truly" they said, "a treasure was hidden there; let us seek it in all our fields."

This treasure was the result of agriculture and was, if this story is true, the first realization of the value of that great industry. Years ago a great man said that the greatest asset to a nation is its soil and a nation will perish when the soil can no longer yield its harvest.

To-day we realize the truth of that statement as never before for grim spectres as unemployment, hunger and discord which have come to haunt us day and night can be traced to the "lean days upon the farm." So closely is agriculture allied to every other industry that the governments of those countries which are striving to rise out of this sea of depression are first restoring agriculture to its proper basis. This they have come to realize is the only means of bringing back to the world peace and prosperity. What great importance has been attached to this industry since the day the brothers planted the pick-scarred garden.

The first farming or agriculture that was done in this fair Dominion of ours was around the year 1606 by a Frenchman, Louis Hebert. In Paris he had been a half-druggist. The healing art in those days was concerned chiefly with the making of medicine from herbs. Hebert came to be interested in farming. He had been with Champlain at Port Royal where he had experimented successfully with a garden, but he returned to France and it was only after much persuasion that Champlain induced him to cast in his lot with the new world.

On the heights of Cape Diamond Hebert cleared a farm and here he settled for the rest of his life. His children inter-married with the children of other colonists and to-day his blood flows in the veins of many of the Quebec inhabitants. This was the beginning of agriculture in Canada over three hundred years ago.

Agriculture is with truth the first of all the arts, not only because it feeds mankind, but because the tillers of the soil are almost always producers and not destroyers. With its varied branches it affords problems that call forth the very best ability of man, and upon his ability and intelligence the success of agriculture depends.

These are days of keen competition, and reasearch and education are being employed to their full effect for the improvement of every occupation. In no business is this more important than in agriculture. Knowledge of farming is based upon experiences and experiments and it is a labor in which there is always something to learn. Our youth of to-day are amazing their fathers with their knowledge of soil fertilizers and increased egg production just as the youth of to-morrow will in turn amaze them.

The study of nature is really the first step in agriculture, and agriculture is an addition to Nature Study. In this industry man and Nature are at work. Despite man's keen intelligence and tireless labors, without Nature's co-operation his efforts are fruitless. A drought may come at any time in the growth of the grain and bring total ruin. Early frosts may destroy the fruit orchards after the labor and expense of the Summer. We read in the West where beautiful fields of wheat have been lashed to the ground after a few hours of devastating hail storm. These are some of the failures which the farmer has to meet. In addition there are weeds—those thieves in the field—that so persistently endeavor to rob the crops.

Yet the farmer's occupation tends to make him opimistic, for it brings him closer to his Creator as in every bud and leaf we can see proof of His love for us.

"Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
Believes in God.

"Whoever sees 'neath Winter's fields of snow,
The silent harvest of the future
grow,
God's power must know."

Farming is considered the most peaceful of occupations and yet the farmer in raising his cattle, grain, fruit and vegetables is at war and his enemies are insect pests. But a kind Providence has provided him with an host of allies who are in his service from daylight until dark and who in this struggle for an existence enable the farmers to feed and clothe a hungry world. These humble little servants are our birds who delight the ear and eye and prove our most practical friends. When naturalists and farmers found it would be impossible to raise the crops or grow fruit without their help it became necessary to encourage them to live on our farms. Who could realize that the great industry of agriculture depends so much on the tireless little feathered songsters who flit about from tree to tree in our orchards and gardens!

An agriculturist in addressing a boys' club in the United States said: "We may be wasteful and careless of everything else, but the land belongs to the ages—it is ours but for the brief period which makes the passing generation. We are trustees holding this land a sacred trust for generations yet unborn, and the happiness, the comfort—yes the very existence of our children's children and the millions who will follow is dependent upon the conscientious farseeing wisdom with which we discharge the solemn trust."

In London there are at present Police barracks, 3,000 years old, 210,000 Jews.

DIVORCE IN CANADA INCREASED IN 1933

1913 Saw Only 60 Divorces Granted—1933 There Were 923.

Divorces have increased rapidly in Canada as in other countries since before the war. In 1913, there were only 60 divorces granted in Canada, while in 1933 there were 923. The increase is partly accounted for by the extension of facilities for securing divorces through the courts instead of by private Acts of Parliament. It is noteworthy that the 1933 figure shows a decline of 72 from the revised figure for the record year of 1932. A decline was also noted in the United States between 1930 and 1932, there being 160,329 divorces in that country in 1932 as compared with 191,591 in 1930. In both countries it is probable that the depression is a factor in this connection.

Wherees formerly most of the divorces granted in Canada were granted to husbands, since the passage of the Divorce Act of 1925 removing certain inequalities which formerly operated to the prejudice of wives, the majority of divorces have been granted to wives, 58.9 per cent of the divorces being granted to wives in 1933. In the United States, over 70 per cent of divorces have been granted to wives in recent years.

The remarriage of divorced persons would appear from the available statistics to be the rule rather than the exception, the aggregate number of divorced males marrying in the seven years from 1926 to 1932 inclusive being 4,664 as compared with 5,519 divorces in the same period, indicating that about 5 out of every 6 males remarry. The correspondence between these figures, however, is only very approximate, because persons divorced in previous years may have remarried during this period, while other persons divorced in previous years may have remarried during this period, while other persons divorced outside of Canada are doubtless included in these marriages. Nevertheless, there is a general correspondence. Divorced women to the number of 4,311 were remarried in the same seven year period, or about 78 per cent of the number who were divorced in these seven years, though, as previously stated, these were not necessarily the same persons.

Public preference for Goodyears was proved 44 times in 1933. Investigators recorded the makes of tires on thousands of cars gathered at hockey games, race meets, golf tournaments, the Canadian National Exhibition and other important events.

Every tire—back, front and spare—on every car was carefully tabulated, and in every survey Goodyear Tires far outnumbered every other make. The public could not speak its preference for Goodyear Tires more emphatically, more clearly!

Next time you see a lot of parked cars, glance along the rows of tires. Goodyear! Goodyear!! Goodyear!!! You'll see for yourself that Goodyears are obviously first choice—the leading tire.

WARBES SAD, FARMERS GLAD, AS WORM TURNS

Boring Ways of Larvae Cause Millions of Dollars' Damages.

MEETING WATERLOO

FREDERICTON, N.B., April 2 (CP) — Music-lovers may enjoy warbles, but to cattle a warble is a pain in the neck, back, spinal cord and other selected spots. Warbles also give pains to Canadians dealing in hides. Annual losses due to these warbles have been estimated by the entomological branch of the Dominion department of agriculture at $7,000,000 to $14,000,000 or more. Warbles in this district, however, are warbling a death song.

Larvae of the warble fly are peculiarly boring to cattle. In fact, they bore almost completely through the animals. Nevertheless, cattle in this vicinity are less bored these days owing to establishment of a warble-free area including all cattle within two miles of the Dominion Experimental Station here.

Increasing casualties among the flies are gratifying agriculturists, now enthusiastically spreading an oriental death in the form of derris root, a vegetable from the Far East. A solution containing this root is applied to the backs of cattle and although the warbles don't like it no complaints have been heard because the normal life span of these flies never exceeds ten days and a few days more or less can't discourage the persistent efforts of self-respecting warbles.

Perhaps they are proud of their accomplishments. In 1930, for instance, 50 per cent of all hides taken from Canadian cattle were damaged by open or healed grub scores, according to an extensive survey by the Dominion Research Council. The loss in finished leather that year was $700,000. Poor gains, reduced milk flow and unprofitable production are other accounts for which the flies must answer, because warbled cattle rarely feel like going places or doing things.

The warble fly is afraid to fight in the open. It sneaks around and takes a mean advantage by laying its eggs on the cattle when the animals are lying down. The heel fly, another variety whose effects are the same, has more sporting blood and strikes the cattle when upright. Both types of fly perish for the cause, however, and die as soon as their eggs are laid.

The eggs hatch in three days, the larva or worm enters the skin and then starts an amazing migration. Travelling through tissue toward the animal's throat, the worm finds its way to the gullet. Then it comes backward and upward, burrows into the spinal canal and plays around the spinal cord for 10 or 12 days before feeling the need of coming up for fresh air and emerging at the same spot where it entered. At this stage a slight mound appears on the animal's hide, a well-developed grub falls to the ground, pupates and eventually becomes a warble fly or heel fly. Then it mates, lays its eggs, and the boring story starts again.

Denmark was the first country to take steps toward exterminating the pest. In 1926, after three years of warble law enforcement, the fly had practically disappeared from that country.

Canadian farmers generally have become aware of the serious losses due to warbles. Two islands in Ontario will be almost free of the pest this year and several counties are planning vigorous campaigns of extermination this spring. The Oxford County Council, in one instance, has purchased sufficient "poison" to wash the backs of 80,000 cattle. Ontario, according to one authority, probably will be "warble free" within a few years.

DEATH IN 89TH YEAR ENDS LINK WITH FAMOUS FEVER YEAR

Infant Who Survived Horror of 1847 Had Long Life.

A NATION'S TRAGEDY

(By John Mosher, C.P. Staff Writer.)

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 24 (C.P.).—Looking eastward over the Atlantic from the mouth of St. John Harbor, a gleaming Celtic cross on Partridge Island marks the burial ground for hundreds of immigrants whose tragic deaths formed one of the darkest chapters in Ireland's history. After a lapse of nearly 87 years since the dread period of "ship fever," the death of Robert Tyner in his 89th year has snapped a link with the plague of 1847. Tyner, who died here this month, was believed to be the last survivor of those fever-stricken passengers who sought healt hand homes in a new world.

More fortunate than scores of infants who died aboard ship, Tyner came safely through the gauntlet of disease and destitution when he was a year old. In 1927 he took a prominent part at the unveiling of the memorial on Partridge Island, where harrowing scenes reminiscent of London's great plague had been daily occurrences 80 years previously. A fund collected by public subscription from people of Irish descent in St John enabled erection of the white cross commemorating a kinfolk catastrophe.

Although the thin soil of Partridge Island claimed many victims of the "fever year" countless others filled graves at widely separated points in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces in addition to a multitude of unfortunates whose bones are scattered on the ocean bed along the seaway from Ireland.

Death and emigration depleted the population of the Emerald Isle by more than two million in 1847. Successive disastrous crop failures prompted a wholesale exodus from the impoverished homeland, and out of the throngs bound for St. John alone more than two thousand men, women and children starved amid squalid conditions on overcrowded ships, were committed to the deep, or buried on Partridge Island.

A food shortage steadily increasing the tide of emigration in the early forties reached its climax in 1847 following almost complete failure of the previous year's potato crop. Widespread destitution, famine, typhus and death were the result. The famine extended even into the Highlands of Scotland. Coupled with fever, it spread more quickly than aid could be received from the outside world, and the stricken people saw no other alternative than fleeing the land of their birth.

Fever and Famine Take Toll.

The numbers of Irish immigrants arriving at St. John in the first years of stress were: 2 000 in 1844, 6.000 in 1845, and 9,000 in 1846. The overflow from Ireland in the latter year rose to 130,000 of whom 33,000 went to British North America. During the following year, when fever and famine took their huge toll, 16,000 landed at the Partridge Island quarantine station. Some 800 had died at sea. 601 died in the quarantine hospital, many others succumbed aboard vessels in quarantine, and hundreds of fatalities occurred after the typhus spread to the mainland.

BEHIND the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., APR. 24.—Most fantastic story going around the boulevards is that Diana Wynyard may help her

Diana Wynyard

Saran Humbert and her family dates back far into British history.

The question is, can she prove that she is a direct descendant and a legal heir of Sir Richard Cardiss, eighteenth century peer, whose great fortune has been in chancellory for more than 125 years.

There is a missing link in the history of the family. And here is where Diana Wynward comes in. After numerous talks with her stand-in, and after correspondence with England, she believes that one of her cousins, several times removed, came of the same line as Lynn Cardiss. This cousin has a complicated chart of the family tree and Diana believes she may be able to trace the lineage.

When the star goes to England, one of her first acts will be to look up the cousin and try to solve the long-standing mystery.

NEWEST SOCIETY girl to try a film career is Helene Elisabeth Anne Nesbit McAdoo (imagine that name in electric lights), who has just been signed by Warner Brothers to act a stand-in for Ann Dvorak in 'Housewife.'

The pretty red-headed cousin of William Gibbs McAdoo has studied dancing but has never done any professional work before. She got her present job through Ann Dvorak, whom she has known for a long time.

Working in the movies is no sky-lark for this young socialite. She's going to make a serious try for film stardom, and while she'll do no acting for the camera in the capacity of stand-in, she hopes to get valuable experience in the job.

Later on, Warners have promised to give her a part in a picture.

RETURNING FROM a location hunt in northern Africa, Douglas Fairbanks recently ran into a snag at the French - Spanish border near Fez. Doug, who has been known to start out on trips without any money, left his passport at Madrid. He and Tom Geraghty argued with the border officials but couldn't quite convince the man in charge.

As the situation appeared to be deadlocked Doug suddenly put his hands on top of the white fence and vaulted over the barrier into France.

The customs official beamed. "I guess you are Douglas Fairbanks, all right," he said and okayed the party through.

HERE IS A BER-LUD! A picture full of suspense and surprise—"The Ghoul' is showing at the Capitol theatre starting Wednesday.

This Gaumont-British picture marks a tremendous advance in the ability of British studios to provide screen thrills and one can safely predict that you will feel some shivers down the spine when you see it.

Boris Karloff plays his part in true Frankenstein manner, and his make-up, as a fanatical Egyptologist, is nothing short of blood-chilling.

Yes! It is thrilling and you will enjoy it!

Boris Karloff is supported by a well-chosen cast including delightful Dorothy Hyson, Anthony Bushell, Ernest Thesiger Ralph Richardson, excellent as a visiting vicar, Harold Huth and Cedric Hardwicke.

THE WARNER Brothers studio broke out into a cold sweat when it discovered that Jean Muir was taking up polo. Before the day was out the actress got a communication ordering her to not to wield another mallet. Seems as there is some distinction here between men and women players. Several of the male stars on the lot play polo without studio interference. At heart, however, most of the producers wish the game had never been invented. Will Rogers' heavy fall the other day might easily have resulted in serious injury. And Barbara Fritchie was in bed for several days as the result of an injury received just knocking the ball around on a practice field.

THE FREDERIC MARCHES will be married seven years on Decoration Day and are celebrating the anniversary by moving into their 24 room French Provincial house in Beverly Hills. The old world style has been carried out even to the playroom of their 2 year old adopted daughter, Penelope, and to a whitewashed slab fence around the estate.

FOX FARMS GROW IN FUR VARIETY

Industry Now Carried on in All Provinces and Several Species Raised.

OTTAWA, April 24.—(C.P.)—Fox farming is now carried on in all the provinces of the Dominion and the number of farms has steadily increased, according to the Department of Trade and Commerce reports.

Latest statistics available, those for the year 1932, show 5,231 fox farms in Canada with a total of 99,109 foxes, of which 92,703 are silver foxes. In addition to the silver fox, the patch or cross fox, the red and the blue fox are also raised on Canadian fox farms.

Attempts to raise the blue fox in captivity were made in the Maritime provinces in 1912, a number of the foxes having been imported from Alaska, where blue fox farming had been carried on for some years. These early attemtps were unsuccessful, but about the year 1921 fox farmers in British Columbia found that the blue fox could be raised in that province, climatic conditions proving more suitable.

There are now in Canadian fox farms 858 blue foxes, 293 of these being recorded by British Columbia and the remaining 565 distributed through Quebec, Ontario and the Prairie Provinces.

DEMAND FOR HORSES REVIVES COLORFUL FEATURE OF WEST

Thrilling Wild Horse Hunts as Prices Commence to Soar.

WATCH FOR DUST

By JACK HOWELL
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

DENVER, Colo., April 24.—The new demand for horses, unequalled since the World War, has revived the most colorful and romantic feature of the West since the days of the pony express—the wild horse hunt.

With horse dealers crying for more and more horses, and the prices soaring, dozens of hunting outfits have again taken to the saddle out in the lonely stretches of the West.

Once again, the big stallions, with tawny manes streaming in the wind, race for safety, followed by bands of frightened mares and colts. Close behind, the earth thunders under the flying hoofs of the hard-riding hunters' mounts.

Market Jumps.

A year ago a spanking good cayuse wouldn't bring $3 at a glue or canning factory. To-day almost any kind of bangtail will bring $40 and up.

When the demand for horses fell off a few years ago, the hunting outfits left the field. Unharassed, the number of wild horses increased by leaps and bounds. To-day the open range and hidden mountain meadows abound with wild horses.

Wild horse hunting as an industry was dead. It was kept alive, for sport, by the dude ranchers. The horses caught, however, were turned loose again after the hunt.

Now the rough and leathery commercial hunters are on the prod again, and the bronc busters are calling for more liniment.

There are three general methods of hunting horses — open hunting, trapping and creasing.

In open hunting a large corral is built. Spreading out, funnel-like, from the corral gate are two large fences a mile or so long. These fences form a large V with the apex at the corral opening. The ends of the V are extended two miles by a single strand of wire strung on posts. Numerous strips of cloth are tied to the wire.

Watch for Dust.

In the hunt the riders scout the surrounding country until a cloud of dust is sighted in the distance.

"There goes a bunch!" an excited hunter yells, and the hunt is on.

A half dozen riders gallop off to circle the band betrayed by the dust kicked up by their running feet. The other riders form a relay string by taking stands about a mile apart.

If lucky, the first group of riders gets the wild horses started toward the drift fence, and the relay riders, who take up the chase with fresh mounts as the wild band is driven their way, haze them toward the interior of the funnel-like fence leading to the corral.

Once inside the drift fence, the stallion will not lead his mares through it, although they could snap it in two at a single dash. Those rags fluttering from the wire smell of man, and that is enough to keep the wild ones away from it.

The riders close in on the quarry, keeping behind and to the side away from the fence. Thus the horses are driven to within the confines of the wooden fence, and on down the line to the corral.

On the last hunt this writer attended, a big black stallion who saw that he was trapped in the corral, chose death to captivity.

Death Preferred.

He let out a hideous, mad squel, and ran full speed for the corral timbers. With fire in his eyes, he hit the wall head first. There was a sickening crunch of broken and crushed bones. With his beautiful head snapped back over his withers, and his chest bones splintered, he fell over dead.

In trapping, the commercial hunter builds a corral surrounding a water hole. After a few days of thirst, the wild horses conquer their fear and enter the corral. A hunter hidden in the brush near the gate, springs up and closes it.

He must be quick. For if alarmed the entire band will wheel about and dash through the opening, crushing the trapper to death under the unshod hoofs.

Creasing, the third, and least used method, is perhaps the quickest way of hunting a horse down. It is also cruel. To crease a horse one must be an expert rifle shot, able to shoot true from a racing horse's back.

Creasing is done by placing a well-aimed shot in the top of the fleeing animal's neck just forward of the withers, and an inch or so from the spine. A misplaced shot means a dead horse.

Before the stunned horse regains his senses, after being knocked over by a creasing shot, his wound is doctored and he is hobbled to a tame horse.

ROCKET SHIP IS READY FOR HOP

Preliminary Tests Will Be Made Before Proposed Mail Flight.

GUIDED BY RADIO.

(By JACK VINCENT)
Central Press Canadian Writer.

CLEVELAND, April 24. — A rocket 15 feet high, which it is hoped, will ascend 15 miles into the stratosphere will be touched off from an isolated proving grounds here soon.

Backers of what would have been described as a Jules Verne dream a decade ago are Ted Hanna, scion of a wealthy Cleveland family, and Ernest Loebell, a young German engineer.

Ready for Tests

Actual tests of the motor for the rocket are to be conducted within three weeks, according to Loebell. A small-scale engine has already passed every test to which it was subjected to the complete satisfaction of the experimenters.

The motor is ingeniously simple. It has no moving parts. It is fed by three tanks, one containing liquid nitrogen and a third propane, a new fuel somewhat similar to a high-powered gasoline.

Released into the motor through heavy piping, the oxygen will ignite the propane under the tremendous pressure of liquid nitrogne Acceleration in future craft could be easily controlled by manipulation of valves but there will be no attempt to control the speed in the first test.

The rocket will be bedded down in a shaft 30 feet high and not unlike that of an elevator. The tower is necessary in order to give the rocket direction.

Parachute Attached

The gases will shoot out of the rocket in the form of liquid fire and will propel the craft forward or upward. When the rocket reaches the peak of the arc and starts falling, a delicate "trip" trigger will release a parachute to lower the rocket gently to earth.

In the shell of the rocket there will be a compartment for mail cargo. Instead of letters, however, it will carry scientific instruments of the Smithsonian Institution, and the Guggenheim Aeronautical foundation. The instruments will automatically record the altitude the rocket reaches, information on the cosmic ray and other data of a scientific nature.

Young Hanna predicts that the perfection of a rocket ship will be a tremendous boon to air travel and result in hundreds of jobs in specialized steel and radio lines in future years. He points out that a major change in transportation always brought with it a new era of prosperity.

Loebell explains that he believes that the present aeroplane motor has reached the zenith of perfection and that its top speed could not be boosted to any great extent. The young German said a docket ship theoretically could travel more than 900 miles an hour, and carry mail from Los Angeles to New York in three or four hours.

Controlled by Radio

It could easily be controlled by radio, he says, and the first one may be equipped with a radio finder which will send out signals at regular intervals after it lands in order that it may be recovered and to prevent its loss.

There will be no passengers on the rocket. The backers recall the experience of Otto Fischer, passenger on a German rocket that went six miles into the air. So tremendous was the acceleration that Fischer lost consciousness and barely escaped with his life.

Both Hanna and Loebell believe it would be foolhardy to risk life and allow a passenger in the rocket on the first flight, when information can be recorded just as well with automatic devices. Not that there are not candidates for the pilot's job—hundreds of persons have written to Hanna asking him to allow them to man this latest type of air craft.

Plan Use Of Radio To Guide Missile

STANLEY NEALE HEADS ROTARY

Elected President of Campbellford Club—Edge Dolman Re-elected Secretary.

ASSUME OFFICES IN JUNE

CAMPBELLFORD, April 24 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent) — By an almost unanimous vote Rotarian Stanley Neale was yesterday elected president of the Campbellford Rotary Club for the year 1934-1935, at the weekly luncheon of the club held in the St. Lawrence Hotel.

Rotarian Edge Dolman, the one and only secretary-treasurer of the club since its inception, was re-elected to that office, one that he has filled with efficiency and good will. The two members, who with the officers form the executive, were elected, these being Rotarians Dwight Bennett and Carman Windrim. The present president, Clarence Williams will be the vice-president for the coming Rotary year. The newly elected members will assume their offices in June.

It was brought to the attention of the club members that the annual conference of the 27th Rotary District will be held in St. Catharines on May 13, 14, 15. Rotarian Stanley Neale being the chairman of the committee on the matter. Dr. Bruce Longmore urged upon all members the importance of attending this function, at which he said a wonderful spirit of good fellowship prevailed.

Dr. Longmore and Rotarian Earle Greig acted as scrutineers for the election. In the secretary's report it was revealed that the Campbellford Club was one of two clubs in the 27th District that had a one hundred per cent attendance for the month of March.

Recall Is Asked For Of British Consul

WASHINGTON, April 24 (A.P.)—Representative Fred Britten (R. Ill.) claims the denial of Gerald Campbell, British Consul General in New York, that he had spoken against American national defence legislation did not mean anything because Campbell improperly attended a meeting called solely for that purpose.

The ranking Republican member of the United States Naval Affairs committee, who Friday said he was requesting Secretary of State Cordell Hull to ask Campbell's recall, reiterated Saturday he was going to press the matter.

"I expect the Secretary of State to do his duty, and I expect he will do it," Britten told newspapermen. "Let this British Consul General tell what he was doing at this meeting of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in New York last month for the sole purpose of collecting money to defeat the Vinson Treaty Navy Bill then pending in Congress."

PLAY PRESENTED IN HASTINGS HALL

Trinity United Church Choir Scores Second Hit in "Headstrong Joan."

HASTINGS, April 24 (Examiner Correspondence)—The members of Trinity United Church choir scored their second hit on Wednesday evening last when they presented the three act comedy drama "Headstrong Joan." Last year "George in a Jam" was their first attempt and made such a success they decided to put on a second entertainment, and were again greeted with a packed house, and several people had to stand during the performance. The majority of the cast need no introduction to local audiences some having appeared on several occasions, and it seems no matter what role they are called up on to fill they do so with satisfaction, and are real favorites. The stage setting for the play was a garden scene and members of the cast are to be congratulated on its splendid appearance, being decorated with evergreens, flowers and furniture (the latter being generously donated by Mr. C. B. Plan).

The cast were: Richard Randal, (Jim Day's foster son), Gordon Fairman; Aura Vernon, a school teacher, Meryle Seabrook; Granny Day, Jim Day's aged mother, Irene Oliver; Honora, the Irish housekeeper, Grace Orr; Rose, one of Aura's pupils, Dorothy Turner; Jim Day, (a prosperous merchant), Marvyn Preston; Abie, a peddler, Wilfred Knight; Ikie, his son, Hayden Kelley; Jack Day, Jim Day's son, a black sheep, Martin Rusaw; Joan Van Pelt, (sailing under false colors), Helen Collins.

As in previous appearances here Miss Orr again demonstrated as an amateur, she can handle any part assigned to her, and her Irish dialect was almost perfect, and in her speeches, with her humor made a hit with her audience. Miss Seabrook and Miss Collins, the latter playing the title role, also gave a splendid performance and proved themselves high class amateurs. Miss Oliver though young in years and experience, handled the role of Granny Day to perfection and Miss Turner as a 14 year old school girl, and Ikie's girl friend also gave notice that before long she will be another star. In the male role, Marvyn Preston handled the role of Daddy Day in a high class manner and was closely followed by Gordon Fairman and Martin Rusaw. The comedy was furnished by Wilfred King and Hayden Kelley and no doubt the above cast would be well received at a future date.

The training duties were handled by Miss C. Doxsee and Wilfred Knight and also received some valuable assistance from Mrs. G. Sine.

IS ACTIVE AND WELL

CAMPBELLFORD, April 24 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Hale and hearty and still possessing all her faculties, Mrs. Benjamin Moir of Campbellford is to-day celebrating her eighty-fifth birthday, and is receiving the best wishes and congratulations of her family and many friends. A motherly lady with a quiet dignity that belongs to an age when speedmania was not known, she is young in spirit and active in body, performing all her housework and doing her own cooking with a perfection that befits one much younger And her house is a picture of neatness and hte is a picture of neatness, and the presiding genius of this home is this lovely hostess who welcomes her visitors with a hospitality that is charming.

Ann Buchanan was born on the English Line, Seymour Township, on April 24, 1849, where as a girl she spent her life In 1863, on December 10, she married Benjamin Moir at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Burnbrae, the officiating minister being the Rev. Dr. Robert Neill. Then started a happy wedded life on the farm in Percy Township, where this happy couple became the centre of a very large circle of friends. Eighteen years ago they retired from the farm and came to Campbellford to live, where they have always held open house to their old friends.

Of this union there were two daughters, Mrs. M. White of Bruce Mines, Algoma, and Mrs. George Herriott of Percy, and three sons, John of Percy and James of Brighton, Samuel B., the third son, having passed away suddenly some weeks ago, making the first break in the family.

SWEDISH PIGS FOR CANADA

LONDON, April 24 (C.P. Cable). —The question of a shipment of 70 pedigreed pigs from Sweden to Canada came up again in the House of Commons to-day when a questioner pointed out they would be transshipped at London, and asked if this was not a contravention of the "Diseases of Animals' Act, which prohibits entry of live animals from the Continent. A Government spokesman replied the Ministry of Agriculture had already provisionally authorized this particular shipment, subject to conditions prescribed by the Ministry.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter.

G. E. Burt-Gerrans, an old Peterborough boy and former member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church choir, has forwarded to The Examiner a copy of his paper, The Carnduff Gazette-Post-News, in which he offers his personal congratulations to Miss Elizabeth Walker, newly designated deaconess to St. Paul's Church. Miss Walker comes from the town in Saskatchewan where Mr. Burt-Gerrans publishes his paper.

THE MEANEST CHILD.

She was an old lady, poor, and just recovering from an illness. She came out of a Hunter Street doorway to make her way to the store to buy a loaf of bread for breakfast. The bitter wind made her cough.

A little boy, passing by, asked what she wanted, so she gave him the dime in her hand and he promised to bring back the bread.

He didn't come back.

FRETWORK EXHIBIT

An exhibit of intricately and very beautiful fretwork is on view in the window of Roy Rome's Down Town Music Shoppe and library on Charlotte street. It is the work of Harold Reddick, son of the Rev. C. S. Reddick of Omemee, and is done entirely by hand, a saw and file being the only tools used.

BAZAAR IN AID OF ST. JOHN'S MOST COLORFUL AFFAIR IN 1851

Old Handbill Announcing Affair Sent to Archdeacon Blagrave.

FREE TRANSPORTATION.

Advertising a bazaar and fancy fair in aid of St. John's Church which took place on the grounds of James Wallis, Esq., Merino Farm eighty-three years ago, a quaintly interesting handbill reflecting the dignity and charm of a past generation has recently come into the possession of Venerable Archdeacon R. C. Blagrave, D.D., rector of St. Johns' Church.

Printed in hand-set type, and couched in flowery dignified phraseology, the handbill—dated 1851—was sent to the present rector of St. John's by the Rev. A. G. Emmett, rector of St. John's Church, Port Hope, who had presumably obtained the document from some member of his congregation who formerly lived in Peterborough. It is in a very good state of preservation, and is to be kept afong the historical records of the church.

The handbill is worded as follows:

"The Committee of Management having made the necessary previous arrangements, desire to announce to the public that the Bazaar and Fancy Fair, in aid of St. John's Church, will be held on Tuesday and Wedndesday the 29th and 30th of July.

"As bazaars by becoming general have lost their navelty, and in some degree their interest also, the committee have resolved upon an innovation on the usual style of conducting such affairs and will endeavour to combine with the bazaar the attractions of a rustic fete champetre.

"In furtherance of this design they have availed themselves of the kindness of James Wallis, Esq., who offers for the occasion the use of his grounds.

Free Transportation

"Omnibuses, carriages and cars will be provided, free of charge, and will ply continuously throughout the day for the convenience and accommodation of visitors.

"Commodious tents, spacious marquees decorated with flowers and foliage, and surmounted by flags and banners, national and explanatory, will give variety to the scene, and afford ample accommodation for the varied assortment of useful and ornamental articles with which the tables will be amply furnished. An objection commonly made to bazaars, by those who like to obtain full value for their money, will on this occasion at least be fully obviated, as considerable pains have been taken to provide articles of such a nature, so useful, necessary and durable that the public will find it their interest as well as pleasure to attend and purchase.

"Among the articles offered for sale will be found beautiful and substantial specimens of ladies', gentleman's and children's clothing. Braided work in great profusion, and vast variety of fancy and ornamental work, a choice collection of books, German toys, etc.

The advertisement goes on to state that a band will be in attendance, and that the event is also to include "an extensive show of agricultural implements, including ploughs, harrows, seed sowers, and a thrashing machine of one horse power, besides many specimens of improved stock."

Ploughing Match

"To add to the general interest" it is stated, "a grand ploughing match will take place on the second day, open to all competitors, the prizes to be awarded by judges chosen by the competitors and contributors."

A fireworks display and the flight of a large Mongolfier balloon were also features of the occasion.

In the concluding paragraph the handbill states: "The price of admission to the bazaar will be the same as on former occasions, notwithstanding the gratuitous conveyance of visitors, viz: Admission 7½d. Children half price."

ANNUAL BANQUET MURRAY STREET

Rev. E. K. Smith of Port Hope Speaker at B. Y. P. U. Banquet.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Members of Murray Street B.Y.P.U. were again honored at the annual banquet held last evening in the dining-room of the church, for the past few months an attendance contest was held and the losing team were responsible for the arrangements.

The guest speaker was the Rev. E. K. Smith, pastor of First Baptist Church, Port Hope, who recently arrived from Manitoba to become associated with the church at Port Hope, formerly in charge of the Rev. Mr. Meldrum.

Preceding the banquet and also during the program which followed the guests were delightfully entertained by St. John's Sunday School Orchestra, under the direction of Reg. Dyer, with Jack Marshall at the piano.

Guests included the Rev. E. K. and Mrs. Smith, the Rev. J. H. and Mrs. Sutcliffe, Dr. A. J. and Mrs. Madill, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. Matthews, L. J. Pettit, and Walter Fitzgerald.

Miss Marion Armstrong presided and after a short sing-song conducted by Mr. Sutcliffe, welcomed the guests and proposed the toast to the King. Dr. Madill replied to the welcome to the guests and greetings were brought from the Board of Deacons by L. J. Pettit, and from the Board of Trustees, by Gordon Matthews.

Walter Fitzgerald, who for a number of seasons has directed the annual play put on by the members of the B.Y.P.U., was also a guest last evening and was presented by the president on behalf of the society with a Parker pencil.

Miss Pearl Smith contributed to the program was a delightful piano solo, as did the selections by the orchestra.

Rev. E. K. Smith was introduced by the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe and welcomed to Murray Street Church on behalf of the B.Y.P.U.

Taking as his thought, "A Chirp or a Song—Which," Mr. Smith used as an illustration the sparrow, which bird, it is said, does not live up to its fullest possibility—is too utterly lazy to burst into song, and is content to chirp. Were it to do its utmost it would undoubtedly be equal to the canary.

"So many of us are like the sparrow, living below our possibilities in other things as well as in the Christian life. We are as the people of whom James writes, 'Hearers of the Word, but not doers.'" William Carey was referred to as a person who sang in Christian life rather than being contented to chirp.

Miss Freda Rickey expressed the thanks of the Society to Mr. Smith and to the losing team, the ladies who assisted with the banquet, and all those who had helped in any way. The tables were prettily decked with blue and white streamers, with blue and yellow candles in silver holders, and centred with a pretty basket of daffodils.

JOSEPH LEE OLD RESIDENT DIES

Came From England 25 Years Ago—Worked at C. G. E.

63 YEARS MARRIED.

Trotsky Organizer In U.S.

While the leader of the party, Leon Trotsky, inset, exiled Russian Communist, is casting about for a place to live in safety, Arne Swabeck, organizer for Trotsky's Fourt Internationale, is pictured following his arrival in New York city to carry on organization work in the United States. Ordered to leave France after he was discovered living secretly near Paris—plotting new "world revolutions", Trotsky is reported to have telegraphed the Turkish government, asking permission to return to Turkey. The Trotsky group differs from the Communist party chiefly in its policy of international rather than national socialism.

Coastguard Wars On Ice Peril In Ship Lanes

An important job of the U.S. Coast Guard which receives little publicity is that of keeping the ship lanes of the North Atlantic free of icebergs. This year reports from the liner skippers indicate the ice peril is greater than it has been in many years. Coast Guard cutters of the ice patrol have been ordered on duty. Above (LEFT) one may compare size of huge iberg with patrol craft which later destroyed it by gunfire as shown at right. Photos were made off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

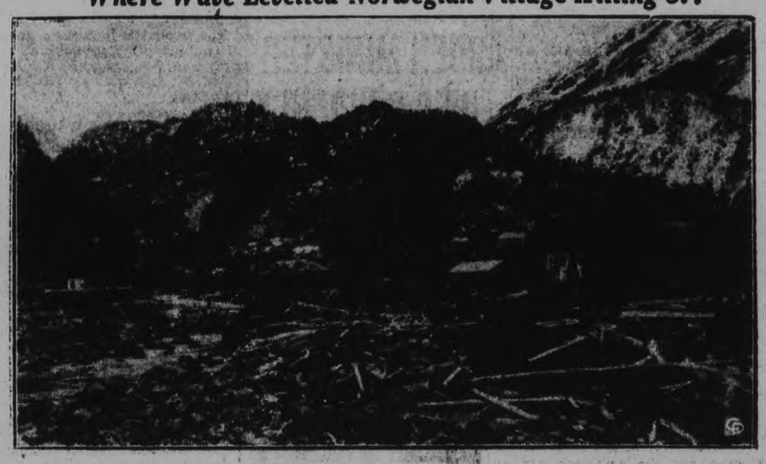
Where Wave Levelled Norwegian Village Killing 57.



A scene of utter desolation on the site of the village of Tafjord, Norway, where fifty-seven persons were drowned when a huge crag, weighing thousands of tons fell into the sea on April 7th, and caussd gigantic waves that trapped sleeping residents of Tafjord and Fjoraa, on opposite sides of the Korsnaes Fjord. The splintered ruins shown in the picture represents all that remained of six homes in Tafjord. Note the boat (LEFT) washed up by the huge waves.

Youngest British Fliers Astound Experts

Ovid Victor Ottley, 14, and Jean Hughes, 15, both of London, who have been revealed as the youngest boy and girl airplane pilots in England. Young Ottley recently astonished the aviation world by his feat of flying an airplane, after only five hours' instruction. The story of the boy's flight revealed that there is no English law prohibiting children of five or six from attempting to pilot a plane, provided they have given notice to the director of the airport and do not fly further than three miles from the starting point. A law is expected to be passed shortly, covering this point.

Meet Ae-Ma-Na, "Great Chief" Of a Fighting Tribe

The visit of the Governor-General and Lady Bessborough to Southern Alberta brought a number of interesting experiences. First, they were shown through the great, billion-dollar Mormon temple at Cardston—a rare privilege granted only to non-communicants by the head of the church, President Heber J. Grant of Salt Lake City—and second, His Excellency was made a chief of the Blood tribe of Indians, the famous fighting tribe of the once-powerful Blackweet Confederacy. The picture shows His Excellency and Lady Bessborough with High Chief Shot-Both-Sides standing between them. The photo was taken following the traditional and colorful ceremonies at St. Paul's Indian residential school (Anglican) the principal of which, Rev. Canon Middleton, stands just behind Chief Shot-Both-Sides. His Excellency's tribal name is Ae-Ma-Na, meaning "The Great Chief". The headdress is a gorgeous creation made by the best artists of the tribe.

Raid Jail For Confessed Murderer

In the upper photo are seen Louisiana State militia guarding Caddo Parrish courthouse at Shreveport, La., after a mob of 3,000 persons battled local authorities on the steps of the courthouse in a vain effort to seize Fred Lockhart, manufacturer of paper butterflies, who has confessed the murder of Mae Giffin, 16-year-old Shreveport girl. Lower photo, a portion of a mob of three thousand persons which stormed the Caddo Parish courthouse as it broke through the main entrance of the building and swarmed into the first floor lobby.

M. R. MARRANOFF
M. R. Marranoff, known as California's "Grand Duke Michael Romanoff," is shown in his cell at the Los Angeles city jail where he is being held on charges of suspicion of treason and grand theft. It is charged that Marranoff, posing as the grand duke, solicited various sums from Los Angeles residents to finance a suit against a San Francisco bank for the recovery of $43,000,000, which he claims was deposited there by the late czar of Russia, and which he, as an alleged blood relative, says he has a right to claim.

Butter, and use instead of the usual shortcake, by putting one slice of the hot buttered toast below and one above a thick layer of the fruit sweetened to taste. Moisten the toast with fruit juice. BAKED APPLE SURPRISE

Wash and core as many apples as there are persons to be served. Mix white of egg with very fine cracker crumbs to consistency of a thin paste. Put apples in buttered baking dish and press the egg-cracker down to fill bottom of apple centres to the depth of one-half inch. Mix egg yolk, slightly beaten, with chopped nuts, dates and maraschino cherries and just enough of the cracker crumbs to form a paste. It should be rich with fruit and nuts. Fill apples. Sprinkle tops of apples well with brown sugar, and put in oven to bake. After 5 minutes put 2 tablespoons or a little more boiling water into pan to cover bottom of it, and continue baking until apples are tender but not so that skins break. Serve hot with cream and sugar.

WISE WOMAN FACES AGE, OPINES FAMOUS BEAUTY

Kay Francis

By GLADYS GLAD

The famous poet, Keats, once included in one of his beautiful odes the line, "Beauty is truth, truth beauty." There are some modern women today who seem to think differently, however. They figure that "Beauty is YOUTH, YOUTH beauty." And they refuse to admit, even to themselves, that 60 can't possibly look like 16.

Everyone must eventually grow old. That's as inevitable as time itself. And in my opinon, the wisest woman is the one who faces this fact—and tries to grow old gracefully. Many of the famous beauties of history did it. Helen of Troy was 46 when she caused the Trojan war. Diana de Poitiers was still playing the vamp at 50. And Julie Recamier was still receiving marriage proposals at 60.

Gray hair, to most women, is one of the most positive signs of age. But it isn't. Gray hair really can be beautiful, and certainly is much more youthful than hair dyed a harsh black or a flaming titian. Such hair tends to harden an aging face, and emphasize any lines or shadows that have appeared. If you wish to grow old gracefully, and your hair is graying, don't reach for the dye pot of the bleach bottle. A streak of gray in the hair really is very pretty, and today some women are even having such streaks put artificially in their locks.

If your hair is entirely gray, don't try to be a brunette, a brassy blonde or a redhead. Instead, try to bring out the full loveliness of your snowy locks. The chief unattractive feature of gray hair is that it so easily tends to become streaked or to acquire a yellowish tinge. And to really be beautiful, gray hair must be a halo of shining silver or snowy whiteness.

When gray hair has become streaked or tinged with yellow, however, bluing rinses are excellent for correcting the condition. It is best first to give the hair a hot oil treatment and a thorough shampoo, as outlined in my "Beauty Culture" booklet. Then a rather deep solution of hair bluing should be made and used as the last rinse. If the bluing rinse alone proves insufficient to remove all yellow streaks, peroxide and salt may be used on the streaks first, and then a bluing rinse administered as the final step.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Eyes

Betty: To soothe and rest your eyes, make little pads of cotton, moisten them with cold water or witch hazel, and lay them over your eyes. Permit the pads to remain on for about 10 minutes, and rest.

Shampoo

Ann D.: The castor oil shampoo are excellent for promoting the growth of thin, dry, dandruffy hair. The method of administering these shampoos is fully described in my "Beauty Culture" booklet.

Feet

Mrs. Davis: An excellent remedy for perspiring feet consists of a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Apply for three successive nights, and then use once a week.

EDITOR'S NOTE: To obtain Miss Glad's pamphlets on 'The New Figure' and 'Beauty Culture' write, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

My old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, said, "When we do a certain thing, do we ask ourselves if the deed is actuated by reason and logic or by an emotional impulse?"

To analyze the acts of man on this basis brings out the answer to many peculiar behaviorisms.

The problem is a very important one, because so much illness is not organic in the sense that some part of the body actually is diseased, but because the individual is highly emotional or imaginative, and develops a firm conviction that some part of the anatomy is deranged. Thus we see numerous examples of nervous indigestion, nervous headache, nervous backache, weakness, loss of appetite, insomnia, numbness, and many other quite familiar and common symptoms, develop to such a state of importance that the individual becomes completely incapacitated.

A very careful study of the symptoms and a painstaking examination fails to reveal any abnormality whatever, yet the patient continues to complain and goes from one doctor to another in search of health.

After being told that nothing organic has been found to account for the symptoms, and that they are caused by a nervous state of anxiety or fear, the patient is still unconvinced and asks, "Well, what causes my nervousness? There must be something wrong with me somewhere to make me so nervous."

Of course, there is something wrong, somewhere, but the proof is extremely difficult to present to the patient in an understandable manner. The wise, experienced physician understands quite well that nervousness is simply an abnormal emotional state, and not caused by organic disease at all. He knows, too, that most sufferers from organic disease complain very little unless the disease is accompanied by actual pain. In other words, the wise physician knows that the seriousness of the disease is often manifested din indirect ratio to the multiplicity and vociferousness of the complaints.

For example, if a person of the extreme nervous type suddenly becomes numb over one-half of the body; has a very rapid heart; extreme difficulty in breathing; presents a very anxious appearance and cries out vociferously for help because of a fear of impending death, it would impress everyone, except the initiated, that something terrible had really happened.

Yet this sort of picture is not infrequent, and may be induced entirely by a functional disorder of the nervous system, or more correctly, by a disorder of the emotional centers.

Again, if a person of the same type loses desire for food, refuses to eat enough to maintain body weight and as a result of this becomes greatly emaciated, weakened, anemic, and presents a clinical picture of some very grave organic disease, it would require considerable medical knowledge and experience to believe the entire matter could possibly be caused by a simple physiological disturbance of the emotional centers.

Yet these things are true. The pictures are not overdrawn; in fact, a physician encounters them frequently, and is often accused of indifference, callousness or inefficiency when he refuses to become excited and stampede into doing something which might make the poor nervous patient worse.

SUPPLEMENTARY AGENCY TO HOME, SCHOOL, CHURCH

The Y.M.C.A. is a great supplementary agency to home, school and church.

To the Home:

In modern cities there is no adequate outlet in the home for expenditure of energy formerly supplied in earlier days in the wood pile and many other chores. Boys and young men simply must have an outlet for the restless energy stored up in growing bodies and minds. The "Y" provides an adequate outlet in many directions in its active program and also provides a wholesome environment for the growing social contacts of youth.

To the School:

After school hours and after school days are over boys and young men find in the "Y" opportunities for mental growth in the cultivation of hobbies, in clubs and meetings of various kinds where the planning and direction of activities is placed to a great extent in their hands.

To the Church:

The leaders of the church recognize that it is not enough to confine their attention to the brief services of Sunday, and in the planning of mid-week activities of all kinds the "Y" proves to be a great factor in providing leadership and leadership training.

THE LEAD BOTHERS MOST PLAYERS

Readers of my articles in many places (Argentina, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Cuba, Panama, Chili, Peru, Mexico, Canada and the Philippine Islands) most frequently ask information about modern leads. The question of which system of bidding to follow appears to have been settled by realizing that the best system to follow is the one best understood by yourself and your partner.

When understood, natural laws are very simple. The old method of teaching leads was to give long tables of arbitrary leads against no trumps, which we will consider first, whereas we require only three simple rules to cover the entire subject, when making opening leads from suits of four, five or six cards. These original rules of my own are given below.

1. If headed by A-K-Q, either with or without re-entry, lead the K.

2. If headed by four cards higher than the 8, but not containing A-K-Q, lead the top of a sequence of four cards (K from K-Q-J--10; the Q from Q-J-10-9). Lead the top of an intermediate sequence (Q from A-Q-J-10; the J from A-K-J-10, A-J-10-9 or K-J-10-9; the 10 from A-K-10-9, A-Q-10-9 or K-Q-10 9).

3. Lead the fourth best card from any combination not specified above.

The 9 will be the fourth best lead from A-K-J-9, K-Q-J-9 or A-Q-J-9. Otherwise no plain card higher than 8 can be led as a fourth best card.

Some players lead the ace from A-K-Q, to show that the suit contains more than five cards, while the K is led from A-K-Q to show a suit of either four or five cards. This is a refinement which is optional.

Months of calculations plainly disclosed that the old habit of leading one of only three honors lower than the A-K-Q was unsound costing needless loss of tricks. Against no-trump makes, do not lead an honor from only three, unless the suit contains more than six cards.

Against no-trump makes do not lead short suits, regardless of who says so. Do not hesitate to open a suit just because you hold tenaces. Get your ong suit going as quickly as possible. Who will lead it for you? The whole principleof efficient defence is to establish a long suit against the declarer, to win tricks with its low cards. Use high cards in other suits as means of entry to your hand, to enable you to establish your long suit, and to finally run off its low cards that you have established.

In nearly every instance it is best to lead your long suit, provided it is your only long one, even if that suit has been adversely bid, or if no trumps have been bid over your call of the suit. If you cannot defeat the no trumps by employing your strongest weapon, with what do you expect to defeat it? You can cease leading a long suit, and lead partner's long suit, when you discover it.

Hat Trade Squabble Before Tariff Board

OTTAWA, April 23 (C.P.).—Hats, the dainty creations for feminine heads, and sober felts for masculine brows, apparently have a significance in the economic life of the country, for the Tariff Board is today engrossed in a study of the cost of their production, the wages the hat makers get and the weaknesses, if any, in the present tariff levied on hats coming to Canada from abroad.

The case is an application of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association on behalf of 10 hat manufacturers for an upward revision of the tariff on hats, caps, hoods and bonnets, crowns and shapes. It developed yesterday into a three-cornered battle between the hat manufacturers, the millinery manufacturers and importers. The hat people pressed for higher rates on hats in various stages of manufacture, the millinery interests wanted increases on finished hats, but decreases on shapes or bodies and the importers were opposed to any higher rates.

Cubs Confident They Will Win National Circuit Pennant

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Recently I found a pupil holding his right side rigid as he swung down toward the ball. I asked him why, and he told me that he was trying to keep his right shoulder from dropping. Many players worry about this same thing. The right shoulder should drop, but in the proper way. The line about not letting this shoulder drop applies to having it drop forward toward the ball. This, of course, is incorrect. Study action pictures of the leading players at the moment of impact and you'll find that they all lower the right shoulder. The shoulder lowers as a result of relaxing the entire right side. If the right side dominates the swing, this shoulder will be locked.

C.G.E. Girls' Team Workout Wednesday

The C.G.E. girls' softball team will hold the frist work-out of the season on Wednesday night at King Edward Park, when a large turnout of girls is expected from among the employees, and also any other outside players.

Ev. Thomas has been secured to manage the team, and brings considerable experience to bear on the job. He has twice piloted winning teams in the inter-faculty league at the University of Toronto and two years ag assisted in managing the C.G.E. men's team in the local city league.

The first practice is slated to start at five-thirty and the manager expects to have at least two girls fighting for every position. Girls who have never played in organized ball will be given every chance to make a place on the team and are invited to attend the practice.

PILOT GRIMM BELIEVES ROAD JINX OVERCOME

Triumphant Displays at Cincinnati and St. Louis Gives Cubs Confidence.

HERMAN LEADS TEAM.

CHICAGO, April 24. — Charlie Grimm and his high-riding Cubs, baseball's prodigal sons of the road, came back home yesterday bristling with confidence that the other National League clubs, including the mighty Giants, can just about forget the 1934 World Series.

It wasn't so much that they had won all five of their starts in the opening drive for the flag that sent the Cub pennant fever up in the 90's. It was the way they did it and the fact the victories were accomplished away from Wrigley Field. To a man, from Manager Grimm down to the bat boy, they figured their notorious road jinx had disappeared.

Road Jinx Broken

"It looks like we are through winning pennants on Wrigley Field and then tossing 'em away on foreign fields" Grimm responded as he accepted congratulation. "Last year, we won 56 and lost 26 at home for an average of .709, only to throw our advantage away by losing 45 and winning 30 away from home. Don't ask me why. It's been one of life's greatest mysteries to me. But here we have won five in a row already on foreign fields at Cincinnati and St. Louis. I think we've finally chased that jinx.

"Added to that, 'Chuck' Klein and 'Tut' Stainback, who looks like one of the finest young players to come up in years, have added 30 per cent. more punch to our attack. We also have about that much more speed."

Championship Stuff

As the Cubs came home with prospects of being greeted in their home debut to-day by a capacity throng of 40,000 fans, a check of their last five games showed how complete their triumphs were. A summary of the five games shows that Lonnie Warneke pitched two one-hit games; that not a single substitute was used in five games, and not a relief pitcher; that only one error—a muffed foul fly by Grimm in the first game—was charged against the defense; that the Cubs batted .304 as a team; and that the pitching of Warneke, Guy Bush, Pat Malone and Charlie Root was so good the Reds and Cardinals batted only .142 against them. Billy Herman led the team in hitting with a .409 average with the other Herman, Babe the Buster, last at .174.

Vancouver Quintet Advances To Final

Winnipeg Cage Team Suffers Elimination in Fifth Game of Series.

WINNIPEG, April 24. — (CP) — Vancouver Province last night defeated Winnipeg Robertson Memorials, 31-25, to capture the Western Canada men's senior basketball championship and the right to meet Montreal Nationals in the Eastern city for the Dominion title.

The British Columbians captured the fifth and deciding game after Robertsons had twice come from behind to tie up the series. Vancouver won the first and third games and Robertsons took the second and fourth. All were decided by narrow margins.

MOUNTAIN CITY BATTLERS LEAD IN RING TOURNEY

Return Three Victories in Four Bouts in Amateur Boxing Eliminations.

7 TECHNICAL K.O.'S.

TORONTO, April 24 (CP)—The annual scramble for amateur boxing titles in Ontario was well under way to-day and the entry list of some 50-odd had been reduced to below the 40 mark following the 15-bout card held here last night.

While it was intended to conclude the championships to-night the extra heavy entry has necessitated another night and the tournament will extend over to Wednesday.

Feature of the opening night was the seven techincal knockouts—four of which went to Toronto boys in intra-city scraps, while Kitchener with two and London with one accounted for the other three.

Hamilton battlers, however, had the best average of any when they returned three victories in four bouts. Alex McCullough pecked out a decision over Leo Belanger, brother of the former worlds' flyweight champion, "Frenchy" Belanger, to register the first Hamilton win and set an example which Russ McCarthy and Len Wadsworth followed in their jousts with Bob Docherty of Toronto and Earl Gallivan of Kingston.

The only Hamilton boy to suffer defeat was Paul Doucet, who put up a sterling battle with Eddie Hutchinson, Toronto, some ten years his senior, but was forced to bow to experience.

Norm Downey of Kitchener battered Keith Sutherland, Forest, Ont., featherweight, into submission before the end of the first round, while Charlie Bear, London middleweight, did likewise with Steve Sloan of Niagara Falls.

It took Harvey Fleet, Kitchener's veteran lightweight, two rounds and the best part of the third to get past Ernie Hicks of Toronto. Fleet knocked down his opponent four times in the second and one in the third before the fight was stopped.

WINGMEN BLAST BEAR PITCHERS FOR 7 TO 1 WIN

Victory Over Newark Gives Cardinal Farm Hands Fourth in Five Games.

TORONTO LEAFS IDLE.

(By the Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings, one of the pre-season favorites for the International League pennant, are living up to advance notices as evidenced by today's standings, which showed St. Louis Cardinals' farm team at the top of the heap.

Combining power with Johnny Michaels' five-hit southpaw pitching, the Wings blasted Newark Bears out of Rupper Stadium yesterday to take the lead with their fourth victory in five games. The score was 7-1.

Syracuse Chiefs also have dropped only one game but they have seen action in only three contests, being forced to call off yesterday's encounter with Toronto because of wet grounds. The defeat at the hands of Rochester was the Bears' second of the season.

Nose Out Orioles

In the only other game played in the circuit, Montreal Royals nosed out Baltimore Orioles 7-6 after the latter's three-run rally in the ninth had fallen one short of tying the score.

The Royals got to Cliff Melton for a six-run lead in the first two innings and although they could do little off the four other Baltimore pitchers, the big advantage was enough to pull them through.

Sarazen-Kirkwood Blaze New Circuit

See Trinidad Greens as Centre in New International Competition Classic.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, April 24 (C.P.).—Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood hopping around the Caribbean from island to island as if each jump were just another hole in a vast golf course, visualized Trinidad as a great international competition centre when they landed here from a Pan-American plane.

The two famous golfers, one United States pro champion and the other the winner of the Canadian open and the north and south championship are missionaries of better golf in this part of the world.

They played exhibition matches at the various halts and made a survey of conditions, studying golf courses and accessibility, with the view of determining whether it would be possible to arrange an international tournament here to attract amateur and professional golfers from the United States, Canada and Europe.

The plan is that the circuit include San Juan, Puerto Rico; Caracas, Venezuela; Port-of-Spain, Trinidad; Kingston, Jamaica; Bogota, Colombia; Maracaibo, Venezuela; Cristobel, Canal Zone, and Mexico City, Mexico.

Sarazen said that no matter what route would be decided upon there was little doubt that Trinidad must be one of the competition courses. He foresaw a great future for Trinidad golf. There was not the slightest reason in the world why Trinidad should not become the winter meeting place of American golfers, amateur and professional.

Joe Kirkwood backed up his brother golfer's views. He said he was an enthusiastic supporter of the plan for a winter tournament circuit. Golfers would go anywhere where there was a good golf course and airplane facilities now made this a comparatively simple task.

If golf in Trinidad were glorified, he remarked, and if its advantages were made public property, there would be a great influx of golfers from the United States and all the big "pots" would be attracted to the island.

BROTHERS MEET AFTER 47 YEARS

Do Not Know Each Other Until Introduced—Separated After Yukon Gold Rush.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., April 24 (C.P.).—A story of how two brothers had met in Nelson, B.C., without knowing each other until they were introduced is told in a letter received here from Duncan Johnstone, a former Cape Bretoner, who recently visited his old home.

The brothers, Duncan and Daniel Johnstone, left Barrachois, C.B., and went west together. They helped clear the land where the Vancouver post office now stands, and then operated a logging camp in British Columbia until the Yukon gold rush, when they separated, Duncan following the trail of the sourdough prospector into the gold fields, and Daniel going to the interior. They did not meet again for 47 years.

Since then Duncan has resided at Whitehorse, Alaska, and before coming to his old home in Cape Breton he went to Nelson, B.C., where his brother lives, and they met, neither recognizing the other. After being "introduced" they swapped stories of their experiences.

In his letter, Mr. Johnstone said he was confident the gold and silver mining industry in the north will boom in the near future.

NEIL WHITNEY ENTRY NEEDS $50,000 MORE

Equipoise's Life Earnings Amount to $328,770, Third to Sun Beau's $376,744.

PHAR LAP IS SECOND.

Famous Handicap Performer to Only Engage in High Class Stakes This Season.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The Saturday just passed will go down in history as one of America's brightest days of the thoroughbred running turf. The generous acclaim of a sport-loving metropolis as reflected in a record attendance in Jamaica's somewhat cramped facilities, was only incidental to the broader outlook for a successful season here and elsewhere.

Not the least of the many striking accomplishments was the triumph of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise in his first start as a six-year-old. In many ways Equipoise is one of the most remarkable thoroughbreds bred in America. For two consecutive years he has ruled as handicap king, although forced to surmount physical handicaps calculated to thwart the gamest racing heart.

A rival well worthy of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand and Albert C. Bostwick's Mate as a two-year-old, the stount-hearted son of the Pennant-Swinging 3 years ago on the morning of the Kentuck Derby developed a blind quartercrack that necessitated the paring away of much of one hoof. He did not race again as a three-year-old, but both as a four and as a five-year-old Equipose was practically invincible in the richest handicaps. He amassed as a result of these successes a total of earnings that now threatens the world record of Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau.

Needs $50,000 to Lead

Equipoise is the only horse in training that has a chance to pass Sun Beau's mark this year. Such successes as he enjoyed in 1933 would accomplish it, as last season he earned $55,700. His successful six-year-old debut in Saturday's Philadelphia Handicap of a mile and a sixteenth at Havre de Grace under 130 pounds to win with ease in 1.44 2-5 (only two-fifths second off the track record) brought Equipoise's life earnings to $328,770, third among the world's thoroughbred money winners and ahead of Gallant Fox. Sun Beau holds the distinction with $376,744, Phar Lap stands second at $332,250. Equipoise has topped Gallant Fox by $605.

If he stands up for one more race, Equipoise should pass Phar Lap, as this year his engagements will be confined to stakes of worth in Maryland, Kentucky, Illinois and New York. He now needs less than $50,000 to pass Sun Beau.

The sterling C. V. Whitney campaigner may find the opposition somewhat more difficult than he experienced a year ago. The Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret proved Equipoise's Nemesis in the 1933 Jockey Club Gold Cup of two miles. If Dark Secret returns to such form as he showed last year, it is doubtful if Equipoise will be able to hold him beyond a mile and a quarter.

Mate and Gusto Abroad

The East's two major cup roces, the Saratoga Cup and the Jockey Gold Cup of a mile and three-quarters and two miles respectively, are both richly endowed and of vital importance in a fight for a new world earning record. The Gold Cup races at Arlington and Hawthorne are at a mile and a quarter, Equipoise's route.

Two of Equopoise's 1933 rivals will not take the lists against him the coming season or at least, not until very late. Mate and Gusto are both in England, pointing to the Ascot Gold Cup. But sterner stuff may be in the offing in William Woodward's five-year-old Faireno; Mrs. John Bosley's five-year-olds, Chase Me, and Winooka, the Australian sprint champion.

In winning the 1932 three-year-old championship Faireno raced almost as brilliantly as had the predecessor of Mr. Woodward's Belair stud, Gallant Fox. Faireno bowed in preparing for the Jockey Club Gold Cup of 1932. He broke down again last Spring and did not get to the races as a four-year-old. He disappointed in his first start, in Saturday's Paumonot Handicap, when unplaced to Sgt. Byrne. Curacao and Kerry Patch. But he pulled up sound and doubtless will benefit by that failure.

Just how good Chase Me may prove this year remains to be seen. A show horse and hunter converted to the flat last Autumn, Mrs. Bosley's big gelding was undefeated in a half-dozen races. He won all of them as he pleased, usually coming from behind in the stretch. Among others he gave weight and a defeat to Mate.

HEYDLER SEES TIGHT CONTEST NATIONAL LOOP

Major League Prexy Impressed With Cubs, Giants, Cards and Pirates So Far.

CHIEF COMMENTS.

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—The one man who has seen all eight National League baseball clubs in action so far this season, within the space of only six days, had no place to go yesterday afternoon. There wasn't a ball game in sight or on the schedule of either major league.

Consequently John Arnold Heydler, president of the National League, gazed thoughtfully at the blasting to be observed from his 19th storey office window, remarked the noise reminded him of Chicago Cubs' batting and resigned himself otherwise to a day of contemplating the signs of baseball's 1934 comeback.

Back from a rapid-fire swing around the circuit, the National League's veteran chief is convinced baseball in general is headed for its best year since 1930 and that his own league will experience another hot pennant race, featuring the attempt of the world champion Giants to meet the challenge of three powerful Western clubs.

"It is still too early to make any flat statements about the pennant prospects," said Heydler, but from the playing standpoint I was much impressed, first, by the hitting and pitching of the Cubs; second, by the great defensive work of the Giants; and third, by the speed and power of the Cardinals and Pirates, both of whom will be hard to stop if they get better pitching as the season develops.

"I found exceptional evidence of fresh interest in baseball, everywhere I went, in bigger crowds and more talk about the big league teams. We have been lucky to have good weather so far, the best in recent years for the early stages of the season, and it looks like the recovery program is in full swing."

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By C. J. P.

Gather around, girls, we're going to register a great big squawk over a matter that concerns your softball league! We want to advocate that an amendment be made to the recent motion to affiliate the loop with the Provincial Women's Softball Union this year, the amendment to read something like this: "The Peterborough Girls' Softball League shall not affiliate with any association this year." And we believe the matter should be left entirely up to the officers and executive of the loop—the executive including the managers of the teams. We panned the motion hard last week and expected a certain amount of criticism for so doing. But we received not a single knock, instead we are in receipt of quite a flock of comments agreeing entirely with what we said! Hence, we're going farther this time, and advocate the rescinding of that motion, or an amendment to the same effect.

• • • • • •

The decision to affiliate was made at the general meeting last week. It was pushed through, the few who wanted it refusing to let the matter lie over for a week so that it could be thought over and a thoughtful decision made. Had we been in the chair that night, we would have informed the promoters that we would not put it to a vote, without a reasonable amount of discussion. As a matter of fact, we don't believe it was a matter to be dealt with at a general meeting at all. The ones interested as far as competition and finances go are the officers, managers and players. Therefore, the players can inform their managers what they want and he can vote that way at an executive meeting. At a general meeting, everyone votes, hence one team may be represented by five girls—that's five votes—and another team by only one girl. It's obviously unfair. It's too important a question to be dealt with by anyone just dropping in to see what the meeting is all about.

• • • • • •

The fans won't care for such an affiliation as it means the schedule, as far as real competition goes, is finished the first of August, instead of a month later. Many of the players won't want it for this same reason. Why cut out four fine summer weeks of softball—and that's what seven of the eight teams would be doing, since only one can win and enter the Provincial playdowns. And the loop officers won't be keen as they'll suffer financially, besides seeing their league race finished long before it would be if the girls did not affiliate. Last year, Keene and Westclox didn't meet in the first game of their five-game playoff series till August 28th, and then they battled for two more weeks.

• • • • • •

Well, if our info is straight, the local gals' league will have to affiliate—if they finally decide to do so—not as an intermediate 'B' league, but as 'A', as it seems there is only the one classification in intermediate. And they will have to have a winner declared by August 15th. That means, if they have a five-game playoff as usual, they should start it early in August, leaving six teams out early in the month, and another one out by the 15th. Those seven squads are through then with another three or four weeks of fine weather! It doesn't listen good to us; what do you think, girls? If you want to see how you go against outside competition, you can always get good teams here for exhibition games. Think it over and let your managers know, and then they can rehash the thing at the May 2nd meeting and vote on it again.

• • • • • •

Before leaving the subject, we might say we called Russ Kitchen up the other day to see if he'd take the presidency voted him when he was absent last week. He said, "First I thought I'd refuse it, but when I thought it over I decided that since they apparently wanted me, I'd take it." That's excellent news as Russ was one of the main organizers of the circuit and headed it for two years out of three. This will be his fourth. We also asked him what he thought of the loop affiliating, and he said: "I agree with what you wrote on the subject. In fact, I can't see any good points at all in such an affiliation." Well, if we're wrong in advocating the above, at least we have no axe to grind. We've always taken a personal interest in this loop since we helped get it started, and we're only thinking of what is the best thing for the players and fans. It's no dough in our kick whatever is decided.

• • • • • •

City Baseball League meets at eight bells Thursday in Duffus' and a large turnout is hoped for. We haven't heard how the committee composed of Jack Deannard, Bill Prindible and Mike O'Brien made out regarding checking up on possible entries, but we trust there will be several new ones when this session is called to order. Now that the senior ball squabble is settled, the youngsters can hop to it and make plans for a good season. With city and town baseball loops being formed in many towns in Eastern Ontario, and a junior league formed along the Lakeshore, it appears as if minor league baseball is coming back up this way. Peterborough was always a contender for Ontario honors and should be again. There ought to be three or four teams each in the bantam and juvenile sections, with a junior squad seeking entry into the Lakeshore League.

• • • • • •

The O.B.A.A. is having its work cut out trying to get senior ball going in Ontario this year. They had a lot of grief trying to line up the Toronto circuits, and failed to do much when Oshawa stated it would not play in the Central League—the Dukes and the C.O.B.L. having to finally reach an agreement between themselves. And now St. Catharines has refused to enter the Niagara district senior loop where it belongs and decided to play in the Hamilton City League. We've had enough grief up our way and certainly won't worry about the O.B.A.A.'s troubles in other parts of the province. The fact remains that amateur sports have been decidedly unsettled all over Ontario—and may become more so yet—ever since the A.A.U. of C. split the province up into nearly as many pieces as a restaurant pie.

• • • • • •

There will be a senior lacrosse exhibition game here this Friday, at 8.30 in the armouries. The North Torontos will play the Petes with proceeds going to the Kinsmen Club. This should be good news to the lads and lasses who follow the boxed game of the gutted-stick experts, and it promises to be a lively number for any sports fan. The Queen City crew has the pick of three of last year's Toronto senior outfits, Native Sons, Torontos and Mount Dennis. And the Petes' lineup will include half a dozen of the best here and the rest district stars. The boys have been practising regularly the past several evenings and promise to dish up a fast, exciting contest. Admission is two bits, so set that date aside and get a load of this tilt.

• • • • • •

Up and down Sports' Rialto: Dick Cowan may reconsider and again enter Regent Theatre in the men's softball league . . . . Brintons hold a practise at six at Central Wednesday and invite all players out . . . . Due to the vast amount of baseball down at Niagara Falls, the city and the industrial softball leagues will not operate this year . . . . Public School Baseball League should be getting started here shortly . . . . Ned Miniocla will likely be the only local scrapper on the Lindsay boxing card this Sat'day . . . . And the proposed fight show here the end of this month will not be held . . . . There may be a rasslin'ca rd, but it's a cinch it won't have any of Tommy McClure's rassiers performing on it! . . . . Applications for umpires and caretaker for the Girls' Softball League should be sent to the secretary, Mrs. J. Mann, 236 Euclid avenue.

GROVE SOON READY FOR REGULAR TURN

Great Southpaw Shows Some of Old-time Form in Exhibition Game.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 24.—(A.P.).—Robert Moses Grove's ailing $125,000 pitching arm is strong again and he will soon be taking his regular turn on the mound for Boston Red Sox.

The celebrated American League southpaw tested his arm for the first time since April 7 here yesterday, by pitching the first five innings against the Holy Cross College nine in an exhibition game, which the Sox won, 6 to 2.

He yielded four hits, one a tremendous home-run smash by Ed. Moriarty, struck out four, passed one and hit another batsman during his five innings on the hill.

Grove didn't really cut loose until the fifth, however, and said afterwards that his arm felt fine and that not a single pitch hurt him.

Phantom Finn Dave Komonen Wins Famous Boston Marathon

Named last year by Canadian sports writers as Canada's outstanding athlete, Dave Komonen, formerly of Toronto but now of Sudbury, Ontario, proved beyond all doubt that the sports writers were right when he flashed home an easy winner in the famous Boston marathon, unofficially the marathon championship of the United States, if not North America—or the world, for that matter. Only a minute or so behind the record, the phantom Finn (he was born in Finland and came to Canada five years ago) finished the race without being pressed. His only regret was that he had not started faster and broken the record. After the race he danced until the wee small hours just to show that running 26 miles, 385 yards is just a day's work. Komonen, who had to go to Sudbury to get the honor due him as a great athlete, was forced to train in snow, slush and mud for this race which makes his achievement just that much greater. The ABOVE layout shows LEFT, George de Meter of Boston placing the traditional laurel wreath on the victor's brow. CENTRE, Komonen, fresh as the proverbial daisy, sprinting across the finishing line as thousands cheer. RIGHT, eating a big meal after the race quite unperturbed over his sensational victory. Canadians acquitted themselves well in the race, winning fourth and eighth places and second place in the team prize.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Miss Florence Jones,
Belleville, Ont.

Your writing tells of a disposition which is as a rule well balanced, but which is also easily upset by seemingly little events. You are really quite a changeable person, yet you do not want to be. You appear to wish to be very determined, and just when you are 'all set' to have your own way, something occurs and you spoil the effect by either smiling or saying something quite different to what you had expected to do. Some of your t' bars are crossed right through, other are either looped or have the bar anywhere but near the letter, this in itself is an indication that your will power is subject to change according to prevailing conditions. All of your capital 'I's' are bent forward and are indicative of artistic temperament, but general fear of expressing yourself. General indications through the script, portray a tendency to allow the health to become below par more often than is good for your constitution. Your birthsign is Libra the Balance. Ruled by Venus. August and December are the best months. Friday the lucky day.

May Baker,
Norwood, Ont.

Your handwriting portrays a lovely disposition, and you should find no difficulty in making many really worth while friends who will love you for just 'being you.' Your capital letters are very artistic, and no doubt you can engage in many lines of artistic endeavour. The small body of your writing indicates a fairly even disposition, and generous qualities are noted. You dot your 'I's with care, but your 't' bars are not at all forcefully expressed. That is quite in keeping with your disposition, because if you were too forceful, it would spoil your otherwise even disposition. You should be very fond of music and also love being out of doors and walking about, because your type of people are fond of anything which pertains to physical culture. They have honest, clean minds, and dislike vulgarity. Nursing, teaching, selling as in specialty lines, or journalistic work, are some of the things which might interest you. You are born under the sign of Gemini the Twins, and you are ruled by Mercury. Your best months are April and August. The best day Friday. Restlessness is sometimes a trait of Gemini people, usually because their mentality is above the average, and they desire to be busy at all times.

James Herman McCall,
Westwood P.O., Ont.

Your handwriting shows that you are inclined to be very impatient and restless. Sometimes you are reserved and secretive, then you forget that you wanted to be secretive and you tell the very thing you had determined not to. We might term this characteristic versatility, but think at your age it should be indecision. Engineering, drawing, mechanic, or woodwork might interest you, but you will have to learn to control your emotions and try to concentrate definitely open one subject, if you are to make a success of it. That tall 't' of yours indicates visionary imagination, and should lead you gradually along the path which you have chosen for a life-work. You are born under the sign of Gemini the twins—with Mercury as your ruling planet. This should endow you with keen mental powers, so have courage and "know" that you will be successful, and that the means to be successful depend entirely upon your own efforts. Your number is 22—a most inspirational number. April and August are your best months. Friday your lucky day.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

While the general trend of events on this day, according to the planetary aspects, may be read as fostering pleasure and prosperity, yet there are certain signs read as inciting friction, inharmony and possible regret.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which much depends on their own discretion, prudence, ability to control tongue and temper and also as to their alertness to duplicity, fraud and secret enmities.

A child born on this day may be bold, aggressive and adventurous, but also lovable, kind and friendly. It should have a happy domestic life.

China's railways are being rehabilitated and extended.

Colombia is considering an extensive plan for the construction of public works, building of airports and landing fields and the installation of radio and other communication systems in areas with small population.

Roulette was placed within an hour of London at Easter time when tables were established at Le Touquet, the fashionable resort, and English and French air lines put on special services for players.

'OLD NICK,' EIGHTY-YEAR-OLD SCRIBE, SPINS HIS LAST YARN

Expatriated N. S. Journalist Wants Ashes Strewn Over Fundy Tides.

AN EXILE IN BOSTON

BERWICK, N.S., April 24 (CP)—"Old Nick," 80-year-old correspondent of The Berwick Register has pounded out his last piece of copy.

An exile in Boston the writer who for many years contributed the Harborville by-the-Sea notes now in a sad message of farewell says "time flies" and "Old Nick's days are numbered." Thus " while still a little alive and able to operate this old machine," he types out his final "30" following an interesting letter of reminiscences.

He is E. W. Kappele and the heartless editor doesn't believe its his last story. Ye editor footnotes: "Our diagnosis, after reading between the lines, is that he is suffering from a bad attack of Spring fever aggravated by a ructious liver, a condition which is sometimes considerably improved by a fairly strong cathartic."

The saddest note is touched when the old journalist who lived by the sea tells that he wants his ashes strewn on the waters of the Bay of Fundy.

"I have a long life love for Harborville, Berwick, and the lovely bay, which in spite of the fact that it gave me many a hard night during past winters, when I was all alone, I love it just the same and want what is left of me to rest there," Old Nick writes.

Here is the wistful appeal of the expatriated journalist: "I hoped that I could once more have got over to the Bay Shore to sit on my old bungalow verandah and look out over the good old bay that I have loved for years, and will never see again; but if my wishes are obeyed by my side-partner when I am gone, I hope my ashes, enclosed in a glass jar, will get free transportation over the Eastern Steamship Line and our Dominion Atlantic Railway to be delivered to my old friend Lem Brown, who will see that either Bloom Morris, Bernard Morris or someone else, will carry them out into the bay I love so well and scatter them on the waves."

Pallor of Anaemia

Tired Eyes and Bodily Weakness

There is a simple test for anaemia.
The lips, the gums, the eyelids are pale and bloodless.
Your blood is lacking in the red corpuscles
Which give color to the blood and vigor to the body.
Girls and young women most frequently have anaemia.
The appetite is fickle, digestion is sluggish,
And the patient is usually nervous and irritable.
There may be palpitation of the heart,
And shortness of breath on going up stairs.
The most important ingredient of the blood is iron.
Iron gives color and nutritive qualities to the blood.
It forms new, red corpuscles.
In Dr. Chase's Nerve Food iron is combined,
With other important ingredients,
To form a powerful restorative for the blood and nerves.
Its benefits are immediate, as well as thorough and lasting.

HIGHWAY BEAUTIFICATION.

FORT ERIE, Ont., April 24 (CP).—William G. Willson, M.L.A., to-day said he was in communication with the Ontario Department of Highways in connection with improvements to the Dominion Highway connecting Ridgeway with Fort Erie at the lakeshore highway intersection.

Asked if the Dominion highway might be included in the proposed 90-mile scenic drive, announced recently by Premier George S. Henry, Mr. Willson said he understood the Dominion route might be included in a supplementary project.

EAST HASTINGS CONVENTION AT MADOC MAY 1ST

New Riding Includes Part of Old North Hastings.

FINLAYSON TO SPEAK.

Jas. F. Hill is Present Member for East Hastings.

The first Conservative convention in the new riding of East Hastings will be held at Madoc Tuesday afternoon, May 1, for the purpose of organizing the constituency and nominating a candidate for the provincial elections.

Redistribution reduced the three Hastings ridings to two. The county was solidly Conservative in its representation, James F. Hill of Shannonville being the member for East Hastings, having been elected by acclamation in 1929. Hon. J. R. Cooke, also returned by acclamation, was the member for North Hastings, and William H. Ireland represented the south constituency.

The Hastings County changes parcelled out parts of North Hastings between the old east and west ridings, some of the townships on the east being added to Mr. Hill's territory, and the western municipalities of Hon. J. R. Cook's riding being tacked on to the south which now extends from the southern to the northern boundaries of the county, including Belleville, Trenton, Rawdon, Sidney, Marmora and so on up to Bancroft.

Mr. Hills' constituency was the least altered by redistribution, and he will again be a candidate with a prospect of some opposition from several aspirants who have been recently mentioned around Madoc.

Nomination date in West Hastings has not yet been announced, and in that section the electoral district changes will necessitate the retirement of either Hon. J. R. Cooke or Wm. Ireland.

BABE RUTH CLUB IS ANNOUNCED

1,000 Prizes Will Be Given Weekly to Club Members.

BABE IS ON RADIO.

The exhibit in connection with the Babe Ruth Baseball Club is attracting plenty of attention in the north display window of The Examiner.

The combination of Babe Ruth and the Quaker Oats Company is going to result in tons of pleasure this summer for hundreds of youngsters. All a child needs to do to gain membership in the Club is to mail name and address, along with the top of a box of Quaker Puffed Rice or Quaker Puffed Wheat, to "Babe Ruth's Baseball Club, P.O. Box 1063, Chicago." Each week more than one thousand prizes are distributed by the club, including 900 baseballs, 100 fielder's gloves and a free trip to New York or Chicago. The chances last from May 1st to July 15th.

Just now, the Quaker Oats Company is starring Babe Ruth in a nation-wide coverage over the N.B.C. Blue Radio Network and supplementary stations. Beginning April 16th, three evenings a week are being devoted to this feature, when the mighty 'Babe' gives a talk on matters connected with baseball, in sports news, helpful hints to beginners and ideas with regard to diet, not forgetting the good results to be gleaned from constant use of Quaker Oats Company's products.

See the window and tell the children about it. This is a fine chance for the kiddies to share in the major and minor prize awards, also to get started on a healthful food regime.

REJOIN PHILLIES FRIDAY.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET IS HELD AT KNOX CHURCH

T. J. Carley is Special Speaker at Well Attended Banquet.

MORE GUIDANCE REQUIRED.

Truth, Honesty and Spirit of Religion Three Important Factors.

The largest Father and Son Banquet in the history of Knox Church was held last evening; total attendance being 130 sons and dads.

T. J. Carley, well-known local lawyer, delivered an inspiring address on the importance of the proper father and son relationships as shown in the Bible and in modern history. He blamed the increase in juvenile crime to the recent three abnormal periods: the war, boom times and now the depression. Public opinion formerly assisted in shaping youth's conduct, but now by means of the motor car young men strive to escape the confines of public opinion.

Require Guidance

Mr. Carley urged that to-day boys require more guidance and sympathy from their fathers than at any time in history. The three most necessary factors in father and son relationships, he said, are truth, honesty and a spirit of religion.

One of the entertainment features of the evening were the four musical numbers presented by Sherman Preston's "New Deal Revue."

George Wallace was chairman and toastmaster at the banquet and the Knox Women's Association provided the most enjoyable supper. Ken McCannan led the community singing, with W. R. Potter as piano accompanist.

Tom Allen, president of Knox Young Peoples' Society, proposed the toast to "The Church," which was replied to by Rev. William McDonald. Bob McKinlay, aged 11, proposed the toast to "The Fathers" which Robert Ralston replied to. The toast to "The Sons" was proposed by Andrew McKenzie, and Jack Archibald expressed the response.

History of Church

J. W. Byers, charter member and secretary of Knox Church since its founding, gave some interesting incidents in the history of the church.

Those who assisted in them usical entertainment were: Miss M. Delaire, Lionel and Everett Doughty, Gerald Monahan, Miss Beatrice Gash, Everett May, Alfrey Pooley, Mrs. O. Laderach, H. Reid, M. Preston, M. Sims, E. Millard, H. Houghton, R. McBride, R. Farr and M. Joiner.

Thanks of the fathers and sons were expressed to the entertainers by John Donaldson, and Jim Lockie expressed the thanks to the ladies.

SIX MAIN AREAS LIFE OF CITIZEN

Y.M.C.A. Through Its Program Helpfully Affects These Functions.

ASSET TO BUSINESS.

In Peterborough, as in other cities, there are six main areas of life to which every citizen, young and old must somehow be related. These sections of community living are: first, home and family; second, school and college; third, citizenship relations; fourth, recreation and entertainment; fifth, business and vocation; sixth, religion and church. The Y.M.C.A., through its program and its influence on boys and young men, helpfully affects all of these vitally important community functions.

With reference to the home, the "Y" supplements its influence by providing a wholesome and healthy place for boys when they are away from their own homes. It is also a home-away-from-home for many a young man.

The "Y" does not try to carry on formal educational classes, but it is all the time engaged in encouraging, stimulating and assisting boys and men to improve their mental capacities and outlook.

Good citizenship, honest, loyal, intelligent and progressive is much to be desired in every community. The "Y" helps make the kind of persons who in time make good cities.

No organization in the city is so active and provides such large opportunities for wholesome, healthy recreation and entertainment as the "Y." As a leisure hour resort it is open every day in the week, and literally hundreds of people pass through its doors each day.

A good Y.M.C.A. is an asset to business because it helps produce men of ambition, honesty and skill. Character is the best qualification in business. The "Y" stands for high grade character.

What a boy or man regards as the main purpose of life definitely affects the things he does at home, in school, at business. The "Y" advocates the Christian Philosophy as the best basis of living and in a practical way helps boys and men understand these principles.

At the Theatres

AT THE CAPITOL.

CONSTANCE BENNETT IN "MOULIN ROUGE."

There is an intriguing theme to this story, in which the Marquise de le Falaise (Constance Bennett to you), does some excellent work. Richard Bennett's proud daughter doesn't miss many tricks when it comes to putting over a role, especially of this type, where her alluring ways and good looks have plenty of scope.

The tale revolves about the efforts of Helen Hall to persuade her husband (Franchot Tone) to allow her to resume work on the stage from which marriage has snatched her. But the gentleman is adamant, believing that women should be content with home and husband. Then the lady disappears and a quick change takes place and she gets lots of amusement out of the resulting complications. To watch her husband fall in love with another woman, even though that woman is herself, is an experience that doesn't contribute much to the joy of life for the blonde charmer.

We don't know whether Miss Bennett really sings her songs or simply uses one of those convenient 'ghost' singers, but, at any rate, she puts them over in grand style. "The Boulevard of Broken Dreams," although slightly hackneyed in theme, is a wow for effect, with plenty of knockout dancing in the background. The spectacular effects of the "show within a show" in this production, are quite thrilling.

Tullio Carminati is a new importation (to Peterborough at least), and injects plenty of interest into the role of Vicky.

The comedy of the program depends on Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly, who are as ludicrous as ever in "Babes in the Goods," while a novel idea is a short film entitled "Vital Victuals," with an honest-to-goodness cooking lesson done up in a brilliant wrapper, so to speak. It is technicolored and is silent, with a facetious gentleman explaining the action as it goes along. This is an entertaining bit.

By the way, it seldom happens that desires for prayers are voiced on the silver sheet. But that occurs in "Moulin Rouge," before the pinch-hitting performer goes on the stage. —Jeanette

Y.M.C.A. DRIVE FOR 1934 BUDGET GETS UNDER WAY

Chairman Charles Shaw Fires Opening Gun at Workers' Rally.

TEAMS SELECTED.

Workers Reminded That Association Worthy of Best Efforts.

The "Y" canvass for the 1934 Budget was officially opened last night by Chairman Charles Shaw with a six-gun salute. The workers of the whole organization met to receive instructions and working materials. The chairman in his remarks reminded his hearers that the Association was worthy of their very best efforts and that they should expect a cordial and sympathetic reception from the citizens on whom they were to call. For their daily encouragement each worker was asked to begin the day with the reading of the 23rd and the 121st Psalms. H. Ballantyne, secretary of the Canadian National Council, addressed the workers, telling them of the successful efforts in other cities in Canada on behalf of the Y.M.C.A. In 25 cities, 20 had received considerably more than last year, St. Catharines $1,500 more and Kitchener $1,400 more than last year. The captains of the respective divisions were introduced and the chairman of the Special Names Committee, W. A. Richardson, thanked the chairman on behalf of the board for his willing acceptance of the leadership in the campaign. Rev. C. D. Daniel and Geo. Nichols led in the spirited community singing. INTERESTING PROGRAM GIVEN AT MILLBROOK RELIEF CONCERT

Second Successful Event Staged Under Auspices of Women's Institute.

MUSICAL NUMBERS

MILLBROOK, April 24 (Examiner Correspondence)—A large and appreciative audience gathered in the Town Hall on Friday evening for the second relief concert and dance of the season, Reeve P. Stinson taking the chair, and warmly congratulating the Women's Institute for its enterprise in undertaking these philanthropic occasions.

The community orchestra, under the leadership of G. E. Burnham, played while the people were gathering and the program opened with a solo, "I passed by your window," by Mrs. R. A. Ford, Miss Ella Elson being the accompanist. Miss Vanita Ingram's selection, "Jjistaw," (Pauline Johnston), given in full Indian costume, was a popular number the recall being "Our Faults," the male quartet, Messrs. H. W. Johnston, W. H. Coombe, M. McDowell and J. L. Byam were heartily encored for their selection, "Keep Sunny Inside," Miss Estelle Hetherington accompanying, the second number being, "If I wait another day." Two young boys, Billy Kerr, who played the violin, and Gordon Jones, who accompanied at the piano, liberally 'brought down the house,' a recall being demanded. Bernice Smith recited, "It's time to go to bed," responding to the applause with, "Something moving."

The clever little girl elocutionist and singer, Leatha Rowland, gave her first number, "Please give me a penny, Sir.' Miss Gwen Hutchison, her teacher, being at the piano; the recall, "The New Baby," in recitation form, was equally popular. A piano duet by Misses Mary Burnham and Bryar Edmunds drew warm applause, and a male quintet, J. Thorndyke, Dick Williams, Stanley Theobald, A. T. Armstrong and Reg McKnight with Miss Ingram accompanying, chose "There's something about a soldier" for their selection which was decidedly in favor with the audience, a melody of popular airs by the orchestra completing this part of the evening's entertainment.

Interest centred in the table of prizes donated by merchants of the community who had been given the relief orders during the current season, the 'draw', made by Councillor W. E. Ball, being the next 'order of business', Councillor P. I. Bentley, chairman of the relief committee, announcing the names of holders of the lucky numbers. The winners included: 1—Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, (ticket No. 180), basket of groceries by Jas. L. Chalmers; 2—Walter Challice, (No. 150), large fruit cake by the Millbrook Bakery; 3—Clifford Elliott, one pound each of tea and cocoa, by W. H. Coombe; 4—R. A. Stone (No. 36), roast of meat by R. A. Ford; 5—Mrs. Eugene Mitchell, (No. 178), tea pot, by G. E. Burnham; 6—Mrs. Sherwin Brown, (No. 77), basket of groceries by E. M. Challice; 7—Norman Armstrong (No. 138), china vase by F. A. Kidd.

The dance followed, the Todd family orchestra providing music, relieved by the Byam family, while L. F. Morton and Jas. Godfrey acted as floor managers for the square dances. The number of young people present increased materially when the dancing was in progress, and the booth, operated by the Institute executive, proved popular, its wares including hot dogs, sandwiches, coffee, etc., going readily, particularly at intermission time.

Between forty and fifty dollars was realized for the local relief program as a result of the evening, the Reeve making it clear that, for every dollar raised locally, the Provincial and Federal Governments each added another dollar—hence one dollar given from the community really means three dollars for relief purposes. Reeve Stinson also mentioned the fine efforts several of the local citizens have been making to provide for their families, under most difficult circumstances, and again expressed the appreciation of himself and the municipal council for the spirit of co-operation which has been in evidence in connection with relief undertakings.

Choice For Trousseau

Two frocks that would be useful for the bride's trousseau, but also suitable for any woman are sketched. The one at left also is a charming model for the bride's mother—or the bridegroom's, for that matter—to wear at the wedding. It is a chiffon, French blue, black, or beige, and is tucked at the top. A vivid two-color sash ties at the side front, and there is a slip to match the dress. The two-piece shirtwaist frock will be an excellent choice for all summer wear, and the silk one shown at the right will be smart as long as it lasts. It is has a tucked bosom and a tied collar. Inverted pleats in the front of the skirt allow fullness. Pretty in copenhagen blue, spring green or navy.

NEAR ST. PAUL.

ST. PAUL, April 24 (C.P.) — Outshooting a deputy-sheriff three men believed to be Dillinger gangsters escaped a highway ambush in St. Paul Park eight miles southeast of St. Paul, shortly before noon yesterday.

Twenty shots were exchanged.

The men were riding in a Ford coupe bearing Wisconsin license No. 92652, which is one of three Dillinger license numbers known to Department of Justice men.

The shooting followed a St. Paul police broadcast ordering all squad cars to assist Dakota County authorities in the pursuit.

Some of the shots were reported to have struck the Dakota County squad car, which continued the chase. Whether anyone had been wounded was not learned immediately.

Later reports said the gunfight started when a deputy-sheriff attempted to stop a car with a Wisconsin license near St. Paul Park. The occupants of the car opened fire without warning, one bullet piercing the top of the deputy's automobile.

The car then turned and sped away.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAINS.

Ontario grains, f.o.b. shipping point: Wheat, carlots, 77c to 79c.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Influenced by setbacks to inflation sentiment, grain values showed a general downward trend yesterday.

Wheat suffered a maximum decline of 1⅝ cents a bushel, with many of last week's buyers selling out, together with deecided lack of any broad new speculative demand. Downturns of quotations were in the face of reports of urgent need of soaking rains throughout 50 per cent. of the wheat producing area of the United States.

Wheat closed unsettled, ½ to 1 cent lower than Saturday's finish; corn, ¼ to ⅝ cent down; oats, ¼ to ½ cent off and provisions at 6 to 15 cents decline.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

Supplies were good and prices tended lower on the Montreal Produce and Dairy Market yesterday. The recent fine weather has stimulated production throughout Quebec, and last weeks' high prices are gradually being reduced.

The butter market was unsettled, with prices a cent lower. Fresh No. 1 was quoted at 29c a pound in carlots or less, while finest No. 1 sold as high as 29½c a pound. Receipts were 398 boxes.

Cheese was off a small amount, with a fresh current make Ontario selling at 11c a pound, and summer what and colored Ontario from 11½c to 12½c a pound. Only 11 boxes were received.

An easier feeling was also experienced by eggs, graded shipments in carlots or less bringing 19½c for A-large, 18c to 18½c for A-medium, 17c to 17½c for "B," and 16½c to 17c for "C." Receipts totalled 2,216 cases.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 24. — Wheat prices eased on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, with Liverpool leading the way to lower levels. Final figures were ⅝c to ¾c lower.

May wheat ended at 65c, July at 66c, and October at 67¾c. The English market closed ⅝d to ¾d lower, and induced scattered selling that proved more than equal to the light support.

Export business was on the small side, with odd lots reported sold, chiefly from Vancouver. Volume of business reached only moderate proportions.

Near the close, however, the market showed signs of recovery as the offerings dried up and a few buying orders made their appearance. Closing quotations were near the day's top.

Cash grains trading was confined to odd lots, while coarse grains took their lead from the major commodity an denided with losses.

BRITISH PRESS CALLS FOR PROBE OF JAP POLICY

Claims Tokyo Should Welcome Chance to Expound Her Intentions.

THREAT TO U. S.

Call on Britain to Keep Out of Trouble But Retain Hong Kong.

LONDON, Eng. April 25. (AP). The London Press, still greatly interested in Japan's hands-off China declaration, made the Tokyo manifesto the subject to-day of comment expressing variously doubt, anxiety and hostility.

The Telegraph cabled for an "inquiry into the exact purpose and scope of Japan's policy. Japan should welcome an invitation to give a clear exposition of her aims as a means of avoiding future misunderstandings, the paper said.

"If she is to claim general supervision over the relations of China with outside power, big adjustments—both of ideas and of existing position—will be necessary."

The News Chronicle, under the caption "Japan's Mailed Fist" said:

"The only fact to set against the picture of crushing the Far East under the iron heel of Japanese militarism is that the immediate result has been to bring British and American diplomacy, startled by the shadow of their common danger, a little closer together . . .

Example of Faith

"Manchukuo (the newly-created Japanese-protected Empire) stands as a startling illustration of how faithfully Japan kept the pledge she gave under the Nine Power Treaty."

The Express declared "Things which will change the course of history for centuries are happening.

"Japan is laying the plan of a new world. She means to cast her mantle over all Asia . . . The Japanese ultimatum essentially concerns the United States. Americans will resist Japanese pretentions, yet it is doubtful if they will make the resistance effective as their country is too disorganized and the nation is too distracted."

This newspaper called upon Britain to keep out of trouble, but to retain Hong Kong. It concluded:

"The rulers of Japan are taking a big bite of other peoples' property to ease their own distresses. They may bite more than they can chew."

LICENSE ISSUER GETS 9 MONTHS

Kingston Man Admits He Stole $2,025 From Own Office.

PLEA UNEXPECTED.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 25 (C.P.)—Ross Graham, former issuer of motor vehicle licenses here, to-day appeared before Magistrate J. M. Farrell in Police Court, pleaded guilty to the theft of $2,025 from the Ontario Government and was sentenced to nine months in the Ontario Reformatory.

The entire proceedings, which had been unexpected, were over in a few minutes.

Graham was issuer of licenses up to two weeks ago, when he reported to police that the office had been entered at noon and the sum of over $2,500 stolen. Later $2,100 was recovered in the attic above the office, and since then investigation resulted in Graham being charged and pleading guilty to-day.

GOING FOR A RIDE

Brown had been offered a lift on a country road, and had accepted gratefully. But he found his benefactor was a reckless driver, and his hair almost stood on end.

"I s-say," he faltered, "you took that curve at si-sixty! You ought to be in an insane asylum!"

"That's awfully clever of you," said the affable stranger, taking another corner at a terrific speed. "This is the second time I've escaped in the last six months!"

Where Dillinger Shot Way Out From Trap

Here are two views of the lodge at Little Bohemia, near Spider Lake, Wis., where federal agents surrounded the Dillinger gang, headed by the desperado himself, only to lose their quarry when the agents fired on a CCC worker by mistake. Two men were killed in the shooting, one a federal agent shot down by one of the fleeing gunmen, the other the CCC worker. Dillinger and his gang later were traced to St. Paul, Minn., when one of the Dillinger cars clashed in a gun battle with a sheriff's car just outside the city. One of the bandits was believed wounded.

WOMAN HIKER STORM VICTIM

Collapses in Cumberstone District, Sister Fails to Get Aid.

BAD STORM RAGING.

WASDALE HEAD, England, April 25 (C.P. Cable).—The body of an experienced woman hiker, victim of a wild storm in one of the most inaccessible parts of the Cumberland Lake district, was found to-day after her sister had staggered to a farm here and collapsed.

The victim was Miss Marion Bartle, aged 38, while the survivor was her 41-year-old sister Clara. The latter managed to make her way to the farm early to-day and before collapsing she cried: "My sister is lying dead out on the Pass."

The two left their home in Southport, Monday, for a walking tour of the Lake District. Yesterday afternoon the couple left Dungeon Ghyll to descend to Wasdale Head, although rain was falling heavily.

Storm Increased

They pushed on towards Black Sail Pass, intending to get to a shelter hut on Ennerdale Pass. The storm increased in violence in the wild countryside as night drew on and they attemped to retrace their steps but Marion collapsed. Her sister covered her with a raincoat and set out alone to seek help.

After going half a mile Clara Bartles' torchlight failed and she returned to her sister, whom she found in a dying condition. She attempted to revive her by sheltering her body from the storm and cold with her own, but Marion died within a few hours.

Clara remained with the body of her sister for the remainder of the night and when dawn broke, sobbing and exhausted herself, she made her way down the Pass to Wasdale.

Shepherds later formed a stretcher party and discovered the body of Miss Marion, covered with two raincoats, lying ten yards from a mountain stream. It took them more than three hours to bring the body here.

BEE CALLS FIRE BRIGADE

DENVER, Colo. April 25.—(CP)—A busy little bee called out the fire department. The insect apparently attempted to start a hive in a fire alarm box and became entangled in the appartus, causing a short circuit that set off the bells. When the firemen arrived the bee had been electrocuted.

Too Anxious

LONDON, Ont., April 25.—(CP)—James Bancroft, 18, who was so anxious to return to a relief camp north of Peterborough that he stole a bicycle and started to pedal his way along the highways, was today released on a year's probation by Magistrate Scandrett in city police court. It was the boy's first offence.

Bancroft reached the Toronto district but was stopped on the highway by a Provincial Constable who took the number of the machine. Becoming frightened, the Londoner hid the wheel in a field and hitch-hiked his way to the north. Subsequently he was placed under arrest.

HOSPITAL BURNS AT PARRY SOUND

Firemen, Volunteers, Staff Unite and Save All Patients.

BUILDING UP 50 YEARS.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., April 25.—(CP)—All patients were removed from the General hospital here today when fire swept through the building.

The blaze originated in a cupboard in the right rear wing of the three-storey frame structure and advanced rapidly to other parts of the building.

All patients were removed without mishap.

Firemen, volunteers and staff organized to clear the building of patients and equipment before the flames had enveloped the half-century-old institution.

The fire broke out at about 1:30 this afternoon and although it was discovered early, it was impossible to check the advance of the flames through the old dry wood.

The hospital was erected 50 years ago during the early lumbering days of the village. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

BANK CHEQUE INCREASE

OTTAWA, April 25 (CP)—An increase of more than $600,000,000 or 32 per cent was shown in financial transfers or cheques passing through banks in the 32 clearing house centres in March, when they amounted to $2,489,000,000, as compared with $1,887,000,000 in the corresponding month last year, says a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

ICE GOES OUT CHEMONG LAKE

Floating Bridge is Damaged When Ice Goes Out of Lake.

RAILING BADLY BROKEN.

Chemong Bridge—mile long floating structure crossing Chemong Lake and connecting Smith and Ennismore Townships, sustained severe damage in the annual spring break-up of ice which went out this week.

A 50-yard section of the bridge close to the Smith shore was dislodged by the force of the ice jam and was swept down the lake for some hundreds of yards, bearing with it Garner Nicholls, the bridge caretaker, who had been working on that section of the bridge immediately prior to its being carried away. In addition, it is reported that practically the entire length of the railing on both sides of the bridge was smashed by the impact of the huge ice blocks.

Mr. Nicholls, it is stated, was working on a section of the bridge attempting to uncouple it to make a passage for the ice jam, when his purpose was forestalled and the section on which he was working was carried down the lake. Marooned on the broken section of the bridge, Mr. Nicholls welcomed the arrival of John Broadley, who took him off in a punt.

High winds prevented the repair gang from attempting work on the bridge to-day, but with the lake now free of ice, it is anticipated that work will be started tomorrow.

OLD TOBACCO SMOKERS HAVE TO CHANGE BRAND

OTTAWA, April 25 (C.P.).—Old traditional tobacco smokers, delighted with a certain make of tobacco for years, have been forced by their wives and children to shift to other brands because the families like the coupons of the other companies. This has happened in England, Prof. Archibald Leitch, tobacco grower of Western Ontario, told the mass buying committee today.

The entire system of giving coupons with tobacco products was vicious, Prof. Leitch thought. In England each coupon was worth so much. In Canada the coupons had to be matched.

"We're poker players here," interjected Hon. H. H. Stevens.

Henry Amos recently celebrated his 101st birthday in Haddington, Scotland.

Dustbanks

RED OAK, Ia., April 25 (C.P.). — Snow plows are busy in Montgomery County, chugging out defiance to spring breezes and a balmy sun

The reason is Monday's dust storm, that lashed the States of Nebraska and Iowa, left the roads in this county clogged with dust in some places one to three feet deep. The snow plows were called out to clear the roads.

CANADA FAILED TO IMPLEMENT PARTS OF PACT

Counsels Charge in Tariff Reference to Supreme Court.

THREE QUESTIONS ASKED.

Government Asks for Decision of Powers of Tariff Board.

OTTAWA, April 25 (C.P.). — Counsel for importing firms concluded their arguments this morning in the Tariff Board reference being heard by the Supreme Court. In the reference the Government asks for a decision on the powers of the board to order a refund of dumping duties collected on items exempted under the British preference.

An order by the Minister of the Department of National Revenue continued the collection of these duties on jute twine, after an amendment to the Customs Act exempted them.

The Departmental order charged that importers were circumventing the spirit and intention of appraisers' bulletins setting values for duty purposes.

Powers Not Clear.

Col. O. M. Biggar, associate counsel with Aime Geoffrion for the importing firms, today charged that the Dominion had failed to implement parts of the Empire trade agreements, which would have more clearly defined the powers of the Tariff Board.

Chief Justice Duff told counsel that the Supreme Court had been asked by the Governor-in-Council to pass upon three questions only, not the extent to which the trade agreements had been carried out. However, he requested that counsel provide any Orders-in-Council that may have been passed subsequent to the agreements which had to do with tariffs or valuation for duty on goods from the United Kingdom, or which specified the powers of the Tariff Board.

Further argument by Dominion counsel will be made this afternoon,

TUG IS OVERDUE WITH 5 ABOARD

Eight Other Vessels Sent Out From Port Dover to Comb Lake.

MAY BE OUT OF FUEL.

ERIEAU, Ont., April 25 (CP) — Fears are felt for the safety of the fishing tug Almidart and her crew of five. She left here yesterday but has not returned. Eight tugs are out searching for her today. She is owned by Norfolk fisheries of Port Dover.

The crew of the Almidart beside Capt. Matthews, is William Morris, Charles Gamble, and two men named Parker. All are residents of Port Dover.

PORT DOVER, Ont., April 25 (CP)—Officials of the Norfolk Fisheries' office here said to-day they did not fear for the safety of the tug Almidart, which failed to return to Erieau from a fishing trip yesterday. The boat sailed yesterday morning and was due to return last night, but company officials said it was likely the craft had run out of fuel oil and in all probability would be picked up by one of the eight tugs searching for her.

They pointed out the weather had been calm and said it was not an uncommon occurrence for a tug to remain out overnight when caught short on fuel. If the Almidart was without lights, they said, she would not have been able to make known her plight to other members of the fleet and easily would be lost in the darkness without the other fishermen missing her.

LACK OF WATER HINDERS FIGHT TO HALT FLAMES

All Equipment in Building Destroyed—Nearby Structures Saved.

$75,000 LOSS.

Finding Temporary Quarters for 165 Students Puzzles Board.

MADOC, Ont., April 25. — (CP)—Fire early today swept through the high school building here with an estimated loss of $75,000.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, was discovered shortly before dawn by Thomas Burnside. Madoc fire-fighting equipment was brought into play and volunteer brigade was organized but, hampered by lack of water facilities, they could do little to check the advance of the flames.

Faced with the necessity of finding accommodation for the 165 students the school trustees called a special meeting. Efforts will be made to find temporary quarters for the pupils.

The three-storey, brick building was completely gutted but the blaze was prevented from spreading to adjacent buildings. The chemical laboratory and all equipment together with books and furnishings in the institution, were lost in the fire. Loss was partially covered by insurance.

The school was built here in 1888 and served the population of 1,500. None was injured in the fire.

PORT HOPE LAD KILLED BY AUTO

Victim Aged 9 is Struck Down Dashing Across Street.

INQUEST ADJOURNED.

PORT HOPE, April 25.—Darting out from behind a parked car on Ridout street shortly before five o'clock last night John Reilly, aged nine, sustained injuries when struck by a sedan driven by Stanley B. Gray, R.R. No. 1, Port Hope, which resulted in his death before his arrival at the Port Hope General Hospital.

The driver of the car was not held by Constable William Harvey, who investigated. The body was removed to the undertaking parlors of A. W. George and Son where a preliminary inquest was conducted by Dr. F. W. Diamond, coroner, here last night. After the remains had been viewed, the probe was adjourned.

Gray was driving west near the outskirts of the town while a car was parked on the south side of the street. Reilly attempted to run to the north side of the street and was thrown to the pavement when hit by the radiator of the auto, which was proceeding at a moderate speed. The youngster suffered injuries to his chest and head.

Allan B. Mann Sown 4 Acres Of Barley

Allan B. Mann, Reeve of Smith Township, reports that he has just completed the sowing of four acres of barley. Holding what is probably the record for early seeding this spring, Reeve Mann has stolen a march on his fellow agrarians at a time when agricultural operations in this district are said to be backward on account of unfavorable weather conditions.

50,000 WORKERS STRIKE

BOMBAY, April 25 (C.P.-Havas)—The number of strikers in the cotton mill dispute had risen to 50,000 heree to-day, and all of the city's 40 mills were either completely deserted or crippled. A detachment of British policemen was despatched to the scenes of trouble.

Yesterday the strikers numbered only 20,000. The leaders, however, aggravated the situation by giving a political turn to the dispute, urging the workers to form a united front against the proposed constitutional reforms.

Saving

MIAMI, Fla., April 25 (C.P.). W. D. Davis, negro, widely known for the frugality of his mode of life, died on January 4, leaving nothing to show he had an estate.

A small safe in his real estate office was opened, the Probate Court was told, and out fell a pile of cash bonds and bank books.

The negro's total wealth was found to be $102,637.68. The court decided his four children should share it equally.

Norfolk Planter Points to Brand in England Boosting Dominion Product.

IMPERIAL FIRM RAPPED.

Professor Blames Company for Causing Overproduction.

OTTAWA, April 25 (CP)—An All-Canadian cigarette is the solution of the difficulties now confronting Canadian tobacco growers, in the opinion of W. S. Kingstone, operator of a large plantation in the Norfolk-Elgin area of Ontario. Appearing before the Stevens Committee on Mass Buying and Price Spreads to-day, Mr. Kingstone said such a cigarette was enjoying wide popularity in Great Britain and was increasing the demand for Canadian tobacco.

Prof. Archibald Leitch, who also operates large plantations in the same area, placed the blame for over-production of tobacco on the shoulders of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada.

For year prior to 1930, the professor declared, the company had urged Canadian growers to increase their production. In 1930, high prices had been paid for a mediocre crop and many persons unknowingly rushed into tobacco growing. He warned the Imperial concern of the danger of overproduction, he said, and elicited the reply from an official: "What are you kicking about; you're getting a fair price for your tobacco."

The Imperial Company had evaded the responsibility for a "situation it had created itself," when the tobacco grown exceeded the requirements, he said.

Efforts to place Canadian tobacco on the British market, continued Prof. Leitch, had continued for some years and were proving slowly successful. The All-Canadian cigarette, with which premiums were given, had proven so successful, other cigarette manufacturers also had to give premiums. Then when the premiums were re-

TOURIST TIDE TURNING TO U.S.

30,000 European Expected to Visit America Before August.

CHEAP DOLLAR.

NEW YORK, April 25 (C.P.). — The tourist tide had officially turned to-day in favor of the United States. A party of 125 Europeans the first to take advantage of the cheap American dollar in terms of francs, guilders, marks, and liras, arrived on the German cabinship Ilsenstein yesterday.

As the party assembled around the cashier's desk at their hotel and had their money changed into dollars, it was particularly noticeable that, out of all the questions asked as to the value of various denominations, not one was heard to ask: "How much is that in real money."

But there will be more chance for this in the future when other passengers arrive. Already, steamship statistics show, 42 per cent. of travel is being done by Europeans, whereas it used to be seven.

The lines expected 30,000 Europeans to visit the United States between now and August. In Paris trips are being offered to America and back for $144.

Among the passengers was Emil Merwart, former Governor of French Guedeloupe. When a car backfired in Times Square, he said: "Oh, bombs, gangsters."

LOCAL INDUSTRY PLANS ADOPTION OF FAST TIME

Some Factories Make Change Over Next Monday Morning.

OTHERS IN JUNE.

No Definite Decision as Yet Made By Several Plants.

Many of Peterborough's citizens will work on Daylight Saving Time this summer despite the fact that, as the result of the plebiscite taken by the City Council on New Year's Day, the city officially will remain on Standard Time.

With only a few exceptions all of the city's factories will operate on fast time throughout a large part of the summer, it was learned yesterday by The Examiner. Several plants will adopt Daylight Saving Time on Monday, chief among these being both factories of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds Company, Nashua Paper Company and A. Wander Company.

Other plants that will in all probability adopt summer-time in June are: Brinton Carpet Company, DeLaval Company, Peterborough Lock Company, Western Clock Company, Peterborough Canoe and the Raybestos Company. In two other plants, the Quaker Oats Company and Canada Packers, while the factory will continue to operate on Standard Time the office, sometime in June, will adopt a summer time schedule.

C.G.E. Not Decided

No definite decision on the question of summer time has been reached by the Canadian General Electric plant. "We have the matter under consideration," C. A. Salmonsen, plant manager, said. "But as yet no decision has been reached regarding the change."

Most companies reported that the majority of employees were fully in

HOUSE BURNED IN TRENT RIVER

United Church Also Threatened—Havelock Send Aid to Village.

FORM BUCKET BRIGADE.

TRENT RIVER, April 25.— (Examiner Correspondence.)—A disastrous fire which for a time threatened the whole of the village occurred here yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, when the house and contents of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Revoir was completely destroyed. The fire broke out in the attic and a defective chimney is believed to have been the cause. Mrs. Revoir was alone in the house at the time. The crackling of the flames attracted her attention and she immediately put in a call for assistance. Mr. Revoir was down the street a short distance but when he reached home the house was a mass of lames. He tried to get some of the contents out, but was driven out by the flames.

A high wind from the wets drove the flames across the street in the direction of the United church and it was thought at one time that the church would be destroyed. As there is no fire protection in the village, a bucket brigade was formed by close to 100 men who gathered to fight the fire. The men kept pouring water on the roof of the church and shed and by this

LIBERAL RANKS LOSE WARRIOR ON MARKET ACT

First Split Comes as Motherwell to Support Second Reading.

HAS SUGGESTIONS.

Senate Resumes Debate on McRae Move Canada Should Quit League.

OTTAWA, April 25 (C.P.).—With the first break in the hitherto solid Liberal opposition to the Government marketing bill on record, the House of Commons to-day continues debate on that controversial measure. Hon. W. R. Motherwell, former Liberal Minister of Agriculture, announced yesterday he would support the bill on second reading, although he would be constrained to oppose it at later stages unless substantial changes were made.

Other Liberals who continued the debate yesterday and last night opposed the measure and the stand of the official Opposition drew the criticism of Michael Luchkovich, United Farmer member for Gevreville, who said the Liberal Party was becoming conservative and the Conservative party progressive.

Mr. Motherwell thought the bill was too sweeping and ambitious and believed, for a start at least, it should be limited to certain products such as milk, bacon, honey, and maple sugar. He was opposed to using the bill as a vehicle for controlling the marketing and export of wheat.

The veteran Saswatchewan farmer said agriculture was staggering to its fall and politicians should be prepared to ease up a little in their political alignments in order to do something for it. He was prepared to work through the medium of a Tory Government to get a marketing bill on the statute books which would help but the present bill would have to be considerably "expurgated." It was a mixture of good, bad and indifferent and in some cases the bad features outweighed the good.

Canada And the League.

The Senate yesterday turned to international affairs and resumed debate on Senator A. D. McRae's resoluiton that Canada should withdraw from the League of Nations. Senator James Murdock assailed the proposal and claimed the accomplishments of the League, though not spectacular, had been substantial. It should not yet be con-

Hope Prince's Lead Will Aid Hat Trade

OTTAWA, April 25. (CP).—Because the Prince of Wales last year flaunted a straw hat, Canadian manufacturers of this article anticipate that it will again attain the position of dignity and prominence which it formerly enjoyed in the male wardrobe this year.

L. L. Kahn of the Canadian Panama Company, Toronto, stated before the tariff board yesterday that for a few years there had been a very regrettable lull in the straw hat industry in Canada, not so much from foreign competition, but because of the "hatless age" which had descended upon the youth of the land. However, with His Royal Highness adopting straw last year, there had been a noticeable improvement in the demand during the 1933 season. It was expected this demand would be even more marked during the coming summer.

The board was considering an application presented by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association on behalf of 10 hat manufacturers for an increased rate covering the importation of hats in various forms into Canada.

Coroner's Jury Enquires Into Death of Marvin Roy Redden at Campbellford.

RECOMMEND GUARDS.

Should Place Wire Mesh Railing Between Footpath and Driveway in Lift Bridge.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 25 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — A coroner's jury last evening at Campbellford, inquiring into the death of Marvin Roy Redden, aged seven, who died on April 16 following a car accident which occurred on the Campbellford bridge, when he ran into a car driven by Miss Helen Tate of that town, laid no blame on the driver of the car, and also brought in a rider strongly recommending that the Government lift bridge, the part of the bridge where the accident ocurred be properly guarded by the erection of a wire mesh guard between the footpath and the driveway. The verdict, which was read by the foreman A. T. Linton, was as follows:

"We, the jury empannelled to inquire into the death of Marvin Roy Redden, aged about seven years, find that he died on April 16, 1934, from a fractured skull caused by coming in contact with a car driven by Miss Helen Tate, at about the west-end of the Government lift bridge at Campbellford. We also find that no blame can be attached to the driver of the car." Also: "The jury strongly recommends that immediate action be taken to erect heavy mesh wire guards about four feet high, at each side of the driveway of the Government lift bridge, and also at the east side of the Campbellford bridge."

The jury was composed of A. T. Linton, foreman, G. A. Kingston, C. H. Davidson, Percy Sherwin Dr. S. L. O'Hara, P. J. Sarginson, George Haig, and Charles Duncalf. The coroner, Dr. W. F. Loucks, presided over the inquest, which was held in the Campbellford Public Library, the examination being conducted by Crown Attorney Col. W. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg. Ross Douglas of Campbellford looked after the interests of Miss Tate.

The evidence of Miss Tate was to the effect that she was driving across the Campbellford bridge, going west, about six o'clock on the afternoon of April 16, her mother being with her in the front seat of the car, which was a Dodge touring 1924 model. She saw some boys on the south side of the bridge playing around. "All of a sudden there was a bang on the side door where I was driving. I stopped the car, but I was so near the end of the bridge, that I ran the car into the curb and then ran back," stated Miss Tate.

Travelling at Slow Rate.

She said another boy had pulled the injured child up off the cement on to the bridge. There was no protection between the sidewalk and the driveway, and none where the boy ran off. She was going at a slow rate of speed at the time, about ten to fifteen miles an hour and she did not see the boy until he hit the door of the car.

Mrs. T. Tate, mother of Miss Tate, said that the first she knew of the accident was when the boy struck the side of the car. She did not see the children before. They were nearly at the end of the bridge at the time, and travelling at a slow rate of speed.

Grant Elliott's evidence was to the effect that he was standing at Anderson's corner on the evening of the accident when he saw two boys on south side of the bridge. He saw a car coming across but did not know who was driving it. All at once the boys ran across in front of the car, and he saw the car stop. It looked to him from where he was standing, about 70 to 100 feet from the spot, that the boys started to cross in front of the car, running, and that the car hit one of them. "The car seemed to be travelling at

Second Nelson

LONDON, April 25 (CP Cable) —England to-day was laughing at the story of how Sir Edward Hilton Young, Minister of Health who lost an arm in the 1918 raid on Zeebrugge, got a post-war job with the Admiralty.

The story was told yesterday in a speech by Lord Riddell. Sir Edward, Lord Riddel said, came back from active service and sought a position with Admiralty, only to be told there was "no room for a one-armed man."

Sir Edward, he said, retorted: "Well, come with me to Trafalgar Square and I'll show you a one-armed man who did great things for England."

That, concluded Lord Riddell, was too much "even for the Admiralty," and one of the Chiefs replied: "If you are another Nelson, we will take you on."

HEPBURN SAYS RHODES WRONG UPON GOLD TAX

Dominion Over-stepping Rights Reaching Into Provincial Coffers.

ELECTION ISSUE.

Denies Ontario Party Split—Liberal Women's Banquet.

TORONTO, April 25. (CP)—Considerable fillip was lent the controversy surrounding the Dominion Government's 10 percent tax on gold to-day as more emphasis was given the contention it was unconstitutional.

Mining men who are paramountly interested in the situation were studying a speech made last night by Mitchell F Hepburn which supported an earlier statement by Premier L. A. Taschereau, of Quebec, that the Dominion Government was over-stepping its rights when reaching into Provincial coffers for profits from gold production.

The Ontario Liberal leader told guests of the annual banquet of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association he was going to make the legality of the new tax an issue in the coming Ontario general election.

The British North American Act, declared Mr. Hepburn, protected natural resources of the provinces from Dominion taxation. "This grasping greedy Bennett Government" was seeking to recover monies lost by Tory Governments —"and the Ontario and Dominion administrations are hand in hand."

Denying rumors of internal rupture in the Ontario Liberal party, Mr. Hepburn wondered as to unanimity of opinion between Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, his Minister of Mines, Hon. W. A. Gordon, and the Ontario Minister of Mines, Hon. Charles McCrea. He was sure the views of these men were irreconcilable on the gold tax question.

Optimistic Air.

An air of unqualified optimism pervaded the banquet hall as more than 350 members from all parts of the province listened to campaign speeches appealing for "every effort to wipe out conservatism and bring back normal times."

Hon. Ernest Lapointe gave an interesting defence of democracy, in which he reviewed the history of representative government and pleaded to all Canadians to guard against developing the "shirt" complex as now rampant in several foreign countries. The British system of parliament was one of Canada's proudest possessions, but the former Minister of Justice declared the Bennett Government was "undermining" those principles in its

Ontario's Liquor Sale On Upgrade

TORONTO, April 25. (CP). — After three years of continued decrease, sale of liquor in Ontario is on the upgrade, Stewart McLenaghan, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, said yesterday on return from a tour of Eastern Ontario.

DUG INTO CITIES OF ANCIENT RACE

Party in Persia Finds Skeletons and Relics Believed of Indo-European Origin.

STOCKHOLM, April 24 (C.P.).—Through extensive excavations at the foot of the Elbrus Mountains in North-Eastern Persia, Dr. Ture Arne, Swedish archaeologist, believes he has found the long sought for original home of the Indo-European race.

In an ancient mound at Shah-tepe, Dr. Arne found numerous and highly interesting remains of a 5,000-year-old town, which for some reason, probably a catastrophe or some climatic change, ceased to exist about 2,000 years B.C. This early habitation belonged to the copper age, finely wrought articles of copper, such as statuettes, daggers, trinkets and lamps, having been found by the Swedish expedition.

The bulk of the finds, however, consists of beautifully made ceramics painted in bright colors. About 40 skeletons have also been brought to Sweden by the party. The shape of the craniums of these early inhabitants indicates that they belonged to an earliest Indo-European family.

Human sacrifices evidently were part of the religious rites of the inhabitants of Shah-tepe, and it is thought possible these discoveries and future excavations in the same district may lead to the solution of several important prehistoric problems.

Dr. Arne is at present busy arranging an exposition of his finds in the former barracks of the Swedish heavy artillery in Stockholm, which will ultimately be transformed into a large historical museum.

BEER AND WINE THREATEN SPLIT BRUCE LIBERALS

Temperance Group May Enter Own Candidate if Dry Candidate Not Chosen.

PARTY LEADERS RALLY.

Deny McQuibban Seconded Motion Reaffirming Support in Hepburn.

TORONTO, April 25 (CP)—The beer and wine question in the Ontario general election campaign today threatened to split the ranks of Bruce constituency Liberals. While Premier George S. Henry and Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, addressed Toronto meetings last night, Bruce Liberals heard a demand for a Dry candidate.

Bruce supporters of the Liberal cause met at Kincardine, where Paisley representatives declared if a Dry candidate was not chosen temperance workers might enter their own candidate. The meeting, however, decided the candidate would not be bound to either Wet or Dry sections, but would make his own decisions on the matter of extension of wine and beer sales.

Southampton was selected as the convention scene, May 9, when Harry Nixon, Ontario Progressive leader, is expected to deliver an address. A large number of names are mentioned as possible candidate material.

Little of what occurred at the rally of Liberal candidates and party leaders in Toronto yesterday was forthcoming when deliberations were completed. It was announced Dr. er, who opposed his party's stand on er, who opposed his partys stand on the beer and wine question, seconded a resolution reaffirming support in Mr. Hepburn, but it was later explained Dr. McQuibban had not seconded the motion.

Took No Active Part.

Harry Johnson, Liberal secretary-organizer, said Dr. McQuibban had not taken any active part in the resolution proceedings. The resolution appeared at the end of the meeting when hand-clapping and confusion reigned.

It was stated beer and wine was not discussed at the meeting which also was attended by S. C. Tweed, Liberal member in the Legislature for North Waterloo who voted with Dr. McQuibban against the government's beer and wine legislation despite party instructions to favor

UNGUENTINE QUICK!

KEEP A TUBE IN THE KITCHEN

KEEP A TUBE IN THE MEDICINE CHEST

For Blessed Relief from BURNS, SCALDS AND CUTS

SECONDS count like hours when you've been badly burned by splattering fat . . . hot handles . . . pans . . . dishes . . . irons . . . scalded by steam or boiling water. Save yourself needless pain and prevent danger of ugly scars, by having a tube of Unguentine within instant reach and where you can apply it quickly, for all such "kitchen" accidents.

It's almost unbelievable (unless you've tried it) the way Unguentine relieves the pain from searing burns or disfiguring scalds.

Cooling, antiseptic, Unguentine penetrates the surface and quickly relieves the inflamed, smarting tissues underneath. Rarely is a scar left.

Unguentine is a powerful antiseptic, too. Unlike many other applications Unguentine does not dry out and lose effectiveness. It continues to ease pain and is actively antiseptic while in contact with the burn or scald. Dressings can be removed easily, without pain. These are reasons why eight out of every ten hospitals use it.

Why suffer needless pain? It takes time (that seems like hours) to get Unguentine from your nearest druggist when you have been burned or scalded. Be sure. Be safe. Always keep a tube of Unguentine within instant reach in your kitchen—and another in the medicine cabinet for cuts, infectious scratches and bruises.

FACTS ABOUT HYDRO — No. 3 of a series of official announcements by the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, representing the Municipalities who own the Hydro-Electric System of Ontario.

Why Hydro Buys Power

Hydro has always obtained its power supplies from whatever source has, from time to time, been determined to be most economical.

In the earlier years of Sir Adam Beck's administration, 98% of the power distributed to Hydro municipalities was purchased from private sources. Then it became economical to build or acquire generating stations. At the present time Hydro owns forty power-producing plants.

Power demands must be provided for—years in advance. The Commission was prevented, by international and other circumstances, from further development of Ontario's large power resources on the Niagara, St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers. The only economical course left was to purchase—as the Commission did—low-cost power from available sources.

The following table sets forth the growth of your great Hydro undertaking through the years:

Growth of Municipalities and Consumers Served and Electric Power Generated and Purchased

Period	Average Number of Municipalities	Average Number of Consumers	Peak Demand All Systems	Power Generated Horsepower	Power Generated Per Cent.	Power Purchased Horsepower	Power Purchased Per Cent.
1910 to 1914 Incl.	45	77,853	91,338	1,863	2	89,475	98
1915 to 1919 Incl.	205	175,702	325,046	242,634	75	82,412	25
1920 to 1924 Incl.	345	343,280	769,952	726,867	94	43,085	6
1925 to 1929 Incl.	528	486,521	1,163,744	960,193	82.5	203,551	17.5
1930 to 1933 Incl.	728	603,880	1,514,040	974,084	64.3	539,956	35.7

It is the considered opinion of this Association that Hydro has pursued a cautious, business-like, and far-sighted policy in the purchase of supplementary power and that present power reserves are not excessive.

The general policy of the Commission respecting purchased power has been initiated with the approval of the municipalities and endorsed by the Hydro associations. These Hydro municipalities know the power requirements, and are obligated to supply the ever-growing demand for low-cost Hydro service in their respective districts.

ENGLAND' ITALY TALK ON ARMS

Not Aiming at Pact But to Clear Way for General Conference.

FRANCE MAIN SNAG.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 25 (C.P. Cable)—With Britain striving to avoid a threatened race in armaments which would almost inevitably repeat the history of 1914, British and Italian leaders yesterday conferred again for two hours on the question of disarmament. Further meetings will be held.

The object is not to reach any particular agreement between Britain and Italy, but rather to clear the way for a meeting of the general commission of the disarmament conference, expected to be held at Geneva on May 29.

Fulvio Suvich, the Italian Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, conferred with Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, Captain Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, Lord Stanhope, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Sir Robert Vansittart, permanent under-secretary.

France has made it clear that she wants the renewed discussions at Geneva to be real. The fact she is pressing for guarantees of execution of any disarmament agreement is taken to imply she expects the conclusion of a definite convention —otherwise there would be nothing to guarantee.

France has already told Italy she will not agree to legalizing German re-armament.

For her part Italy advocates effective recognition of Germany's claim to armament equality as the best way of avoiding clandestine re-armament. She would then stabilize armaments at the existing level to prevent another race in armaments.

a slow rate of speed," he said.

Questioned by Col. Boggs, Elliott said that there was a sidewalk each side of the bridge, but that there were no railings from where the bridge swings up to the west side, which was about 107 feet. The other part of the bridge was protected. The boys were on the swing part of the bridge, he said, and that on this part of the bridge iron supports also obstruct the view.

No Protection

John White saw the accident from about 300 feet away. He saw the car coming and three boys strike out to cross the bridge, one boy being knocked down by the car. He also stated that there was no protection here, and that it would be far safer if there was.

David Leeson did not see the accident occur, but was approaching the bridge and saw Miss Tates' car coming over, and the boy laying behind it some few feet. The car was going slow at the time, and two boys were on the north side of the bridge. There were no rails on the government part of the bridge, he said; "if there had been the boys would not have run out."

Arthur Tripp was at the scene of the accident when the car stopped. The boys had the injured boy up on the side of the bridge at the time. Mr. Leeson picked the child up and he took him from Mr. Leeson and carried him to the doctor.

Died From Concussion

Dr. F. B. Brintnell gave evidence that Marvin Redden died of concussion of the brain and a fracture at the base of the skull caused by the accident. The child was brought to his office at about five minutes to six, his clothes being soiled on the left side. He made an examination and found that he was suffering from head injuries, and that the left side of his head and back were brused. At that time there was no definite sign of fracture. He died about six hours later. "I know the bridge and I would think railings were very necessary, I don't think the accident would have happened with one there," he stated.

Provincial Constable Gordon Campbell of Brighton stated that he was called to Campbellford on April 17 in connection with the accident, and had investigated. He described the car and stated that although it only had two-wheel brakes, these were in good condition, for he had tested them and had stopped the car in 32½ feet going at twenty miles on hour. He had observed the bridge since the accident, he said, and found that the iron girders obstruct the view, especially of pedestrians, and that it would be easy for a small child to duck out in front of a car without being observed. He thought that rails were not only advisable but very necessary.

It was an unfortunate thing that a young boy should lose his life in such a manner, Col. Boggs stated, in his address to the jury. Although there were too many highway accidents these days, he said that in this case there did not seem to be any negligence on the part of the driver of the car. "But there does seem to me," he said, "there should be railings on that part of the bridge, as well as on the other end, and if you see fit, make this recommendation."

FARMERS DEMAND FAIR CONDITIONS

B. C. Organization Protests Leasing of Indian Lands to Orientals.

DUNCAN, B.C., April 25 (C.P.) — Declaring unfair Oriental competition was aggravating conditions in the farming industry, the Cowichan Agricultural Society, by resolution, condemned the practice of leasing Indian Department lands to Orientals and asked that all existing leases be cancelled.

The resolution recited the Oriental had an unfair advantage over the "legitimate white farmer" owing to the low rental and non-taxation of the lands. It was declared the hours of labor and rate of pay allowed to the Oriental workers created almost a system of slavery.

The renting of Indian lands to Orientals was detrimental to the future fertility, as he did not in any manner build up the soil while under his cultivation, the resolution said. It was further declared the close intimacy of the Oriental to the Indian was detrimental to the morale of the latter, and the Oriental was a notorious vendor of liquor to the Indians.

means kept the flames from setting fire to the building. The house of H. Pollock which is one door north of the Revoir home, was also threatened but the bucket brigade also did yeoman service there.

Calls were sent to Havelock and Campbellford for aid and a fire engine arrived from the former town. It arrived too late to save the Revoir home, but was used in preventing the flames from spreading.

Along with the entire household effects which were destroyed in the Revoir home was the money which Mr. Revoir and son Clayton had received the day previous for the furs which they had caught during the season. The house was a seven room dwelling and was built 65 years ago by Roland Scriver of Hastings. It was valued at $2,000 and was partly covered by insurance.

Young People's Play Is Very Successful

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 25.—Under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Anglican Church Warkworth, a very delightful comedy entitled "Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick" was presented on Friday evening, April 13, in the Town Hall with a large crowd in attendance. This was the first play undertaken by the young people and those who witnessed it declared it was among the best plays presented in the village.

The play was bright and peppy including singing and dancing, Potter's Orchestra providing the music for the evening. Great credit is due Mrs. W. Mowat who directed the play. The rector, Rev. T. H. Floyd, voiced his appreciation of the enthusiasm and interest displayed by the audience, and thanked them for their attendance.

The cast of characters was as follows: Aaron Slick, Fred Ward; Wilbur Merridew, Matthew Allman; Clarence Green, Leslie Tolly; Mrs. Rosy Berry, Mrs. A. Maidens; Gladys May Merridew, Mrs. George Brooks; The Girl In Red, Miss Rose Allman, Little Sis Riggs, Miss Edith Allman and hotel guests.

method of governing through Order-in-Council.

Senator A. C. Hardy, a former president of the Ontario Liberal Association, spoke briefly—"chiefly to deny rumors of diversity of opinion and purpose in the Liberal party." He had never seen a "more unanimous, absolutely solid body of men."

Mr. Hepburn's speech was a general castigation of the past record of the Conservative Government and an assurance he would, on assuming power, wipe out "corruption and graft" and cut administration costs in half through abolishing the 23 boards and commissions "now a haven for defeated Tories."

No Wholesale Firing.

The Liberal Leader assured his listeners he did not intend making wholesale dismissals of "the little fellows" in Government employ. He was "after the big shots—the Meighens, the Cookes, and the Gabys." The high salaries of these men would be turned into channels which would help the people of the province in general. (Hon. J. R. Cooke is chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and F. A. Gaby chief engineer.)

The Abitibi Power bonds question was referred to by Mr. Hepburn. Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen had "violated a public confidence" when he had bought these bonds with knowledge and provincial government would later purchase them at increased prices, charged Mr. Hepburn. But no progress could be made with this charge, he added, since Premier Henry—"Honest George"—had himself made $25,000 in the deal.

The Liberal Government however, would have no hesitancy in "cleaning up" affairs of Hydro, the Ontario Liquor Control Board, and ridding the province of profiteers and despoilers of its natural resources.

The delegates of the association continued their meeting to-day with various reports being presented, under the chairmanship of Mrs S. F. Grenwood, St. Catharines.

the bill. Discussions surrounded the campaign plans and the Voters' List Act which was believed not to include some opposition supporters' names.

Harry Nixon, Progressive leader, described the amendments to the Voters' List Act and the Election Act.

Later Mr. Hepburn addressed the Ontario Women's Liberal Association annual convention and questioned the constitutionality of the Dominion Government's 10 per cent gold tax. He said under the British North America Act only the provinces can impose direct taxation and he asked if Ontario citizens were "going to stand idly by while the grasping, greedy Bennett government taxes your natural resources."

At Sudbury Board of Trade meeting, however, Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, expressed himself as "satisfied" there would be a revision of the tax "so that it will not halt the flow of capital for the development of our mines."

Henry in Squabble.

Premier Henry appeared before the Danforth Ratepayers' Association and delivered an address which was followed by a clash with the chairman, who is president of the association, during which cheers and boos enlivened the proceedings. Premier Henry had been questioned by one of his listeners about the York County Children's Aid Society probe and his reply was considered by the chairman as a breach of confidence because Mr. Henry mentioned a man named "Wylie."

"What do you mean coming out with that?" the chairman asked.

Mr. Henry made no reply, and the chairman added, "To h——l with you."

demned because it had not accomplished all that had been expected from it in the way of ensuring world peace, particularly as it was the only agency in sight capable of exercising a restraining influence on the trend towards warfare.

Protests continue to come to Ottawa against the Government's gold tax, but the activity of the protesters has somewhat subsided as a committee of mining experts is at work on a plan for submission to the Government which would modify the tax in such a way as to impose a more equitably distributed burden on the mines.

Engaged in a series of conferences with the Federal Government in connection with continued financial assistance to his province, Premier T. D. Patullo of British Columbia with several of his Ministers is in Ottawa. No announcement has yet been made on the progress of the negotiations.

Premier George S. Henry of Ontario is another Provincial leader in the capital to-day. It is understood he plans to interview Federal Ministers in connection with unemployment relief in Ontario.

Evening is Spent in Games, Musical—Address by L. Petherick.

RUSH POINT, April 25 (Examiner Correspondence). — Miss Mae Seeney was the League vice-president responsible for the last regular meeting and a goodly number of members were present. The Rev. Mr. Kemp conducted the opening exercises. Miss Corinee McArthur read the Scripture lesson, Lloyd Petherick gave the topic, a discussion on the right ways of spending money. Mr. Reg. McQuigge gave a comic reading "Proposals." A vocal solo by Miss Jean Pollock, "No Night There," was greatly appreciated. Betty Petherick recited "Something Left," Miss Luella Keating rendered two selections on the celestophone, "Lamp Lighting Time in the Valley" and "Two Little Girls in Blue," receiving hearty applause. Lloyd and Winston Petherick sang "How Beautiful Heaven Must Be," with banjo accompaniment. The contest was in charge of Miss Marjorie Newton—the answers all requiring the word "nation" as the ending. The Blues and Khaki were tied with 20 points each, while the Whites and Reds got 5 points each.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1934

IT'S A DIFFERENT PROPOSITION.

It is always easier to promise economies when out of office than it is to put them into effect when the responsibilities of government have to be assumed.

During an election campaign the "outs" assail the extravagances of the "ins" and picture vividly the improved conditions that may be expected from a change of government; but when the "outs" become the "ins" the scene shows a remarkable change.

That fact has been illustrated recently in Nova Scotia where last year a Liberal Government was successful in ousting the Conservative administration, largely on the strength of explicit pledges of lessened governmental expenditures and consequently a lighter burden of taxation.

The new Government has found it impossible to implement its pledges; not only is it not able to reduce taxes but it has had to resort to more to obtain the revenue needed to carry on public business.

There has been a sharp jump in provincial taxes.

The gasoline tax has been raised to eight cents a gallon, and more money is to be obtained from banks, trust and loan companies, finance companies and telephone companies.

New levies are to be collected from chain stores, gasoline stations, telegraph companies and smaller corporations.

The telegraph tax, for instance, will claim five cents on every telegram, with some minor exceptions, passing from one point to another in Nova Scotia.

Banks are to be required to pay a flat rate on head offices and branches, plus one-tenth of one per cent. each year of the paid-up capital which they employ in Nova Scotia, plus again one-twentieth of one per cent. of the volume of business they do within the province up to $1,500,000, and one-sixteenth of one per cent. above that figure.

Not bad for the first year of a Government elected to out down taxation.

THE TRUTH COMES OUT.

When the Stratford furniture strike was in progress last fall a number of Ontario newspapers, including The Examiner, felt it necessary to sound a note of warning in regard to the Workers' Unity League whose agents took an active part in the Stratford trouble.

The journals which took that position were assailed in many quarters as being hostile to the interests of the workers because they stressed the Red nature of the W.U.L. and declared that the chief purpose of the organization was to stir up trouble.

That the newspapers were right is evident from the news now coming from Stratford where ninety-five per cent. of the employees of the city's largest furniture factory have announced that they want nothing more to do with the Workers' Unity League or with its agents.

The warnings of last fall have been justified, and Stratford workers are able to see the truth of what they were told months ago, namely that the Workers' Unity League was more concerned with causing disturbances than it was in securing better wage and working conditions for the furniture workers.

As a matter of fact, the Stratford strike would have been settled weeks earlier and probably on more satisfactory terms than were finally secured had it not been for the insistence of W.U.L. agitators that the league must be recognized before the men returned to work.

In the long run the league was not recognized, the workers were kept out of employment weeks longer than there was any need for them to have been, and the industry was badly crippled, all because the Workers' Unity League sacrificed the workers to the prestige of their own trouble-making organization.

NEW GOLD PROJECTS.

While public opinion seems to favor the gold tax in so far as the more prosperous mining concerns are effected, there is undoubtedly much to be said in support of a modification of the levy in the case of low grade ore propositions.

As a consequence of the high price of gold there has naturally been much new activity.

British Columbia, for instance, is witnessing a rejuvenation of many of its old placer camps, some of which have been virtually abandoned for years, we learn from the National Revenue Review.

One of the areas being given considerable attention is the northern section of the Omineca district, where gold was first discovered in 1861 and which for a time enjoyed wide fame as a placer gold producer.

The current activity in the area in search of gold presents a striking contrast with that of the early days.

Crude hand methods were employed by the old-timers and the extensive use of machinery was not possible.

Nowadays with the extension of roads and with air transport available, heavy machinery is being shipped into the district.

Successful operations will depend largely upon the use made of scientific methods in the search for deposits. Shrewd prospectors of the past overlooked few readily accessible deposits, many of which were worked, even though they eventually proved to be too low grade for profitable operation.

By employing modern mechanical prospecting methods it will be possible to map the surface of the bed rock and to follow the old channels, even though they may be deeply buried, and by drilling the value can be testified.

Thus there are distinct possibilities in this once famous section of British Columbia, but the tax on gold, unless modified to some extent, may interfere with many projects that had sprung into being because of the price to which gold had climbed.

POWER RESERVES.

In the latest advertisement of the series through which the Ontario Municipal Electric Association seeks to inform the public as to various features of the Ontario Hydro-Electric system and its operation, the acquisition of power from private sources is justified.

The provision of adequate electric power to meet actual demands with a sufficient reserve margin to ensure continuous service has always been a matter over which there has been argument.

There are several considerations that should be taken into account.

In the first place, the normal rate of growth in demand is of importance.

The records in this regard show that the growth in electric demand in Ontario during the eighteen years up to 1930 was around 11 per cent. per year.

It is evident that to meet such a demand it is necessary to arrange for fresh supplies of power well in advance because these cannot be obtained at a moment's notice.

With a big system like the Ontario Hydro it becomes necessary that hundreds of thousand of horsepower must be planned or contracted for or under construction in addition to the power actually in use.

Then there is the question of how much reserve power should be kept actually available in excess of demands.

While some large power undertakings keep a reserve capacity on hand of 30 per cent. or more, the Ontario Hydro is able to maintain its service, according to officials, with a minimum reserve capacity of ten per cent.

It is claimed that the power users of Ontario are in a fortunate position to-day as a result of the Hydro's provision of new power supplies from the Chats Falls plant and from purchased power of having available a reserve supply of power sufficient to safeguard Ontario industries and workmen from the delays that without such reserves would have hampered the process of return to fuller activity.

BUT IT WORKS BOTH WAYS.

Figures presented by Hon. E. N. Rhodes in his Budget address showed that during the 11 months ending February 28, 1933, our exports to the United Kingdom were $170,195,000, while for a similar period ending with February of 1934 they had risen to $204,747,000, showing an increase of $34,552,000. During the same time we had purchased from the United Kingdom $79,366,000 in the 1933 period and $95,277,000 in the 1934 months, making an increase in our purchases $15,921,000.

In short, the increase in what Britain bought from us was $34,562,000, while the increase in our purchases from Britain was $15,921,000. We prefer to sell to Britain much more than we purchase from her. We follow the same system in our dealing with the Empire in general, as our sales were $248,667,000, and our imports amounted to $127,393,000.

Referring to this tendency, the Toronto Globe has an explanation. We quote:

> "It must be remembered that Canada is debtor to the United Kingdom for great sums of money advanced to build railways, to finance commercial enterprises and loan companies, and in a lesser degree to construct public works. The only way in which we can pay interest on these loans—and provide funds in London for repayment of principal—is by sending out an excess of exports over imports. If our exports, as a whole, were no greater than our imports it could only mean that we were not paying the interest on our debts."

We think it would be difficult enough to make this line run straight through. The people who put up money in Britain for the development of railways or any other enterprises in Canada would be private investors. They would put up their money just the same as people in Canada might for the exploiting of an oil field in Mexico or a railway in Brazil, and we cannot see where such investors would have a right to call upon the Government to make trade agreements for their special benefit. Nor would they have any right to expect the manufacturers in their country to look for greater markets in Canada, only to find that the greatness was very much on the other side.

The greatest good we can receive is an outlet in the British market for our farm produce, and we have been getting it. Britain has exhibited a willingness to implement in a practical way the undertakings to which she subscribed at the Ottawa conference, while we have shown tardy progress to carry out our obligations. The batting average at the end of the first 11 months seems to be 34 to 15 in favor of Britain.

We admit it would be an ideal arrangement if we could be certain of paying our foreign obligations by always being able to export more than we import, but we believe Britain has as much right as we have to measure the trading by the same sort of a yardstick. Truth is, this paper has not yet been convinced that Canada has gone as far as she should in seeking to put into operation the trade agreements into which we entered with Britain and the rest of the Empire.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It looks as if "all dressed up and no place to go" will describe the plight of dry electors in the coming provincial campaign.

London (Ont.) police have refused to issue a permit for a May Day parade. The precaution may be justified, but most people will feel that it would have done no harm to permit the would-be paraders to let off steam in that way.

Liberals and C.C.F. members in the Federal Parliament are wide apart in their appreciation of most issues, and the situation must be a source of satisfaction to the Government.

The gold mining industry is being called upon to provide ten million dollars in federal taxes. Last year the tobacco users of the country contributed two and a half times that sum to the Dominion treasury.

Unemployment is steadily decreasing, according to official figures, but relief operations will be necessary for a long time.

A rise in prices follows an improvement in trade as an effect of the latter. We cannot reverse cause and effect.—Professor J. H. Jones, of the University of Leeds.

The slang-whanging indulged in at Ottawa this week by Hon. Peter Heenan and Mr. Eccles Gott does not add to the dignity of parliamentary procedure.—Toronto Globe.

STORM DRIFT

By ETHEL M. DELL

Tiggie took no note of tide or time or indeed of anything else as he fared forth upon this new journey. His main idea was to fill in an empty evening, and to walk was the only feasible means that occurred to him of so doing. That he was already tired did not somehow seem to matter. He was only dimly aware of fatigue, and the goad to do something, get somewhere, before the day was over, was considerably stronger than any bodily discomfort. The vague mist that hung over the sea was somehow expressive of his state of mind. He was dully miserable without definitely knowing why. It was not active jealousy of Harvey's power to attract interest, so much as discontent with his own complete inability to do so, that possessed him. He was convinced now—fully convinced—that Harvey had lied to him that afternoon. He had not probably been in a state to differentiate between truth and fiction, and it had given him a moment's fantastic amusement to flatter Tiggie in his odd, left-handed fashion. But he had been a fool to have let himself be taken in by it. He always was more or less of a fool, he reflected, digging his heels with a certain vindictiveness into the yielding sand. What wonder that people sought to take advantage of him—even maniacs like Harvey—even the shipwrecked like Viola?

He tried to shut out the latter thought, but it clung. Had not she herself confessed to it? His very foolishness, his vulnerability to fraud, had led her to seek refuge on his raft, well knowing that he would not refuse it to her, even though the added burden swmaped them both. How could he ever hope to possess anything more than her gratitude mingled with her pity for his softness?

That was what he was. He was soft!—And every woman who came near him sensed it. It was a quality that had no real appeal for women. He remembered with bitter self-contempt that old affair of his, when he had helped little Peggy Musgrave to achieve the desire of her heart—in which he had never had any place. Would she have liked him better perhaps if he had been more selfish, more assertive of his own rights and interests? Had he failed to win her love because he could not command her respect?

Reason told him no, but he continued to torment himself with such questionings notwithstanding. He was just an amiable fool to the rest of the world, and it was only by a queer perversion of egotism that he could view himself in any other light. They were all wrong, but he could not prove it to them. He was cursed by an ineradicable humility with which some asinine fairy godmother must have presented him at birth, and he was incapable of claiming any position for himself save that allocated to him by others. Whatever he did, by some unwritten law, he was compelled to fall into line with the needs and circumstances of other people. To strike out for himself was for some reason forbidden. His was the task to place himself at the disposal of all the rest, to be ignored or made use of according to necessity. While everyone else fought and grabbed for what they wanted, he could retain nothing for himself but must forever hand on such prizes as came his way. And it was useless to attempt to rebel and desert his post. Fate, the inexorable, invariably brought him back to it. It was all he was fitted for since the edict had gone forth that he should never fight for himself.

Thus and thus filed the dreary parade of Tiggie's thoughts as he pursued his solitary way along the rocky shore. And the hours went by unheeded, and the tide rose with a muffled roaring which any but a fool like Tiggie would have taken for a warning; and the day died with a strange, metallic suddenness long before its time in the ever-gathering, ever-spreading smoke screen of the coming storm.

The breaking of the storm was as sudden and infinitely more compelling than the dying of the day. There might have been a few preliminary rolls of thunder, but if there were they were so mingled with the incessant roar of the incoming tide that as such they were not distinguishable.

But there was no mistaking the storm when it burst in a blinding downward tremor of lightning like the swift unsheathing of a sword, and close upon it a crash as though all the chariots of heaven had charged the gates. Thereafter came the seething hissing rush of the rain as it left the sky, and then in a moment it was descending in torrents that whipped the rocks and sand like a thousand flails and dropped a quivering black curtain upon the awe-stricken world.

It was a tempest of almost tropical intensity and even Tiggie was startled out of his absorption at last. He made a dive for shelter towards a dim rock that loomed at hand, but the storm demons laughed at his puny effort, and for the next few seconds it seemed to him that the elements all combined against him in the endeavor to reduce him to a powerless pulp. Before he could have counted 20 he was completely drenched as though he had plunged headlong into the sea. Another vivid flash of lightning gave him some idea of his surroundings and he swiftly quitted his first inadequate shelter to plunge inwards towards the cliffs. Here he knew were caves in plenty though he had never explored them, never in fact throughout his stay in Farne had he wandered so far. By the flickering lightning which speedily became almost incessant, he saw that he had reached a small inlet from which the little fishing village was not visible, being cut off by a jutting headland which he had passed unnoticed some distance back. A further belt of rocks in front of him seemed to hem him in, but he was not concerned with this, for he had no intention of pursuing his way any further along that storm-swept shore. The rain had become hail, and large stones battered him with a violence which drove everything but the immediate need for an asylum of some sort out of his head. He ran as he had not run for years, pounding over the slipping shingle through the raging tempest till the great cliffs barred his progress, and then turning and springing from stone to stone till he found a hole into which he could squeeze himself and find comparative dryness.

Thence, panting and exhausted, he looked forth upon the tumult, good-humoredly cursing himself for his folly.

"Of all the damned fools," he said, "I am the damnedest."

It was a wonderful sight upon which he gazed. The whole sea was lit up with the amazing lightning that crossed and double-crossed the thunder-riven sky. Great masses of torn cloud hung like tattered scenery over the water which no longer looked solid but was whipped into foam by the great storm-wind that drove across it. The magnificence of the spectacle compelled Tiggie's admiration though he would gladly have sacrificed it to have been allowed to walk home in peace. The terrific downpour, however, made this quite impossible, and so finding a damp ledge in his retreat on which to sit, he resigned himself as cheerfully as possible to the inevitable.

To and fro the great storm raged, now near, now far, turning the fallen night into pandemonium, while Tiggie remained a prisoner, feeling as if prehistoric monsters were rending the rocks in search of him. Not being super-imaginative, he did not feel greatly alarmed, though he did presently admit to himself after a prolonged interval of deafening noise that it was getting beyond a joke. He blinked at the lightning which flamed across the heavens like mighty balls of fire flung from a giant's hand, and earnestly wished that it would cease. The streaming rain almost blotted out the sea, though now and then between the crashes of thunder he heard the roar of the waves as they hurled themselves upon the shore.

It was a long time before the sound, gradually increasing in volume, conveyed anything in the nature of a warning to Tiggie. The storm was so paramount that he had thought for little else, and it was not till this began gradually to abate that he realized the sea was claiming its own share in the general tumult, was in fact slowly becoming the dominating factor thereof.

When that realization dawned upon Tiggie, it did not for several minutes scare him. He knew that the coast was described as tricky by Joe Penny and others, but that any tidal tricks could ever be played upon him was a possibility which with his limited and purely fair weather knowledge of the vicinity had never crossed his mind. It needed more than noise to imbue him with a sense of danger, and as though the storm fiend that had imprisoned him became suddenly impatient of his lack of understanding, the elements abruptly combined to drive the lesson home. In a downward-flickering flash of lightning, a huge wave became terribly illuminated, towering above a tall rock in the foreground, broke with a crash, and swirled in a mass of foam almost up to the very entrance of Tiggie's hiding place.

That taught him all he needed to learn. Ere the wave receded, he was out in the open, stamping on the shingle, waiting for another illuminating flash to show him a way of escape. Once more he called himself a fool—this time with more vehemence. To have forgotten the tide! To have wasted all that precious time in watching the raging elements, when one of them had in effect been gradually closing in upon him as a monster advancing upon his prey! And now to find himself cut off!

But this was unbelievable, unthinkable. There must be some means of deliverance. To be caught there by his own arrant carelessness—like a rat in a trap—was one of those absurd situations that could not possibly materialize. The cliffs—he was sure they were not unscalable. If only the lightning would flash again! Here in the murky night he could discern nothing.

But the storm was passing. The lightning was less frequent and far less vivid. Only the overwhelming clouds remained—and the rising, wind-driven sea.

Desperately he stood and waited till presently a vague illusive shimmer of light glanced upon the scene and was gone. It showed him no path up those frowning cliffs—only the narrowing space between them and the oncoming breakers which had drawn far nearer than he had thought possible even in those few moments that he had stood on the beach. But though at this point he fully realized all to which, hitherto, he had been blind, he kept panic at bay. He had at least that advantage over his more sensitive fellows. His nerves were of the steadiest. He might be slow to see an emergency, but he had his full strength to cope with it when he did.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

SASKATOON, SASKATCHEWAN

The city of Saskatoon attained its present size as a result of the growth of two towns on opposite banks of the South Saskatchewan River. That portion on the east side of the river was originally known as East Saskatoon, and the portion on the west side as West Saskatoon. As the original villages grew and confusion between the similarity of names increased, the name of East Saskatoon was changed to Nutana, a word which is claimed by some to have had an Indian origin, meaning "first-born," because it was the first settlement.

The name "Saskatoon" is derived from the Cree name "Mis-saskquah-too-mina" or "Mis-sak-a-too-mina", and sometimes contracted into "Sask-a-too-mina." These words are the plural. The singular is secured by dropping the final "a." The name was given by the Indians to the berry which is found in such profusion in the vicinity. According to a member of the original townsite survey party, the Indians used to gather large quantities of these berries and walk through the camps selling them, crying what sounded to the members of the party, "Saskatoons, Saskatoons."

A Thought

TIME

Much of our time is wasted and our energy dissipated by fruitless worrying and waiting for our dreads and fears to materialise. Today is the morrow we worried about yesterday, and there's nothing wrong with today, except as it is marred by our foolish fears or careless acts.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

TWO M.P.'S FOR ONE SEAT

On this date, in 1871 the House of Comons of Canada formally declared two men elected for the same seat. It is a peculiar story. The first election in Marquette after the admission of Manitoba into the Confederation was held March 2, 1871. The return of the returning officer showed that each of the two candidates, Angus McKay and James S. Lynch, had received the same number of votes, 282 each. If such a thing happened now the returning officer would give the deciding vote, but there was then no provision for such a decision and so he made the return to Ottawa as required by law.

In due course the matter was brought before the House of Commons, which referred it to the committee on privileges and elections. The body held several sittings and reported to the House that the returning officer should have declared both candidates elected.

On April 25 the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery attended and was ordered by the House to amend the return so as to declare both candidates elected. This was done, and Dr. Lynch, who was present at Ottawa, forthwith subscribed to the oath and took his seat. Then Hon. Hilyard Cameron drew attention to the rule which provided that a member must withdraw while the matter of his election was before the House, whereupon Dr. Lynch withdrew. On May 13 Mr. McKay arrived in Ottawa, presented himself took the oath and his seat; but the rule of absence during investigation was again invoked and he had also to withdraw.

The final result was that Marquette had no representative that session for the investigating proceedings were long drawn out and before they were concluded Parliament was dissolved. Neither McKay nor Lynch contested the seat in the election of 1872.

Voice of the People

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I would like to make a slight but important correction to Dr. Wyllie Clark's reply in the Saturday issue, to a correspondent in reference to the Buddhist religion.

In the main his answer is correct and very fair but it must be pointed out that Siddartha Gautama, who became "a" not "the" Buddha never taught, nor did he imply that "Nirvana" meant "extinction," as Dr. Clark states. This is a very common mistake of the western world and does a grave injustice to a great and noble religion; a religion so sublime that many hold a careful study of Buddhism is essential to a proper understanding of our own Christianity. Be that as it may, what Gautama did teach was that the goal of the human soul, Nirvana, was the attainment of a state of conscious unity with the Absolute, an at-one-ment with God. Not a blank nothingness of non-being, but a true mystical union absolutely parallel with the Christian doctrine of the mystic unity with Christ as enunciated in our New Testament, which is a very different thing than "extinction."

I am aware that Buddhism today is split into many differing sects and that some have departed from the primitive teachings. The same holds true of all religions, including our own. But among the purer forms of the Buddhist religion, notably the Len sect, the doctrines are held in their pristine purity, both in the outward form "for the multitude" and also in the more esoteric teaching for the few that are spiritually ready, and the difference between esoterie Buddhism and esoteric Christianity is so slight that it amount to no more than a coloring as it were of the essential truths based more upon racial characteristics than upon any real difference.

The Rosicrucian Order has many thousands of members of all religions and nationalities and while the Order itself is not a religious body, being devoted solely to truth in all its aspects, and indeed has no religious qualifications for membership save a belief in God, yet in justice to our Eastern membership who are sincere followers of the religion into which they have been born I would be glad if you would kindly publish this letter and so help remove a misconception. We are too apt to forget that the Master said "Other sheep have I, but not of this fold," and the remarkable parallelism between the Buddhist scriptures and our own, affords a certain amount of ground, even for the thoughtless for belief that God is not thoughtless or unkind in causing one human soul to be born into one religion and the other into another. It is not by our human will that some of us are born of this nationality or that, in this part of the world or in another. Thanking you.

Yours truly,
R. Farthing.

IN DAYS GONE BY

Items Taken From Old Fyles of The Examiner

APRIL 25, 1924.

The local Radial Railway will curtail its Sunday service for the summer, Sunday street cars proving a non-profitable business.....Two barns, belonging to John Hodson, below Downer's Corner, burned with the loss of implements, fifteen cows and five horses.

APRIL 25, 1914.

The local Auto Association plans to post signs on main roads throughout Ontario, reading: "This way to Peterborough."....There are about two hundred automobiles in this city now, a ratio of one auto to every hundred people, or one to every twenty families.

APRIL 25, 1904.

Seven shop and twenty hotel liquor licenses were issued locally for 1904 yesterday.....J. Murphy, hostler at the Clunan House, was kicked by a horse this morning and removed to the hospital, suffering a fractured shoulder blade.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

I CAN'T DO IT

Perhaps I'm stubborn. (It's been suggested that I am.) Perhaps I'm lazy. (That's an idea, too.) And perhaps it's just that I don't like being put on the spot....Whatever the reason, I don't think I'll write the letter.

It is one of those chain letters I've been asked to copy and send to nine of "the most intelligent" among my friends. If I do that, "good luck and good cheer will continue to follow this chain." The letter says: "The chain was started in Flanders by an American general in the artillery and must go around the world three times. Forward, if possible, before 24 hours. During the nine days to follow, count the days, a happy event will take place and fill you with joy.

If you take this as a joke, bad luck will befall you. Mr. Brown of Victoria won $250 on the ninth day. The Wilcox home burned down because they failed to take this seriously. Pola Negri attributes all her good luck to having carried out instructions."

And I ought to do it because all those other people did....I'd be in good company, too....I see the names of a Mrs. Alfred DuPont, of a Baron Ailney, of a Judge Holme, of Pauline Lord and Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy and Ann Pennington and Vivian Segal and lots of other people—and if they took the trouble to make nine copies and keep the chain going, then why shouldn't I do the same. It's such a little thing to ask—why don't I?

Well, I don't like the threat that something terrible will happen to me if I don't do it....And I'm sorry for the postal service—think of the poor postman if every person made nine copies and sent them and every receiver made nine more and so on....And I AM lazy and I AM cantankerous and I don't put much stock in that American artillery general in Flanders.

And perhaps I'm too superstitious to keep the fortune chain letter going on and on forever....Those other people copied it and sent it because they WERE superstitions. For the same reason I'm NOT going to do it. I'm afraid my luck would change if I did. I'm sure something unfortunate would happen to me if I relied on a chain letter instead of my own energies or my personal luck.

Arrival of latest models of American cars has boosted Belgium's auto business.

Heavy Buying in Brewery Corporation Stocks Brings Market Out of Rut.

INTERLISTEDS LOWER.

TORONTO, April 25 (C.P.). — Heavy buying of the Brewing Corporation stocks pulled the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange out of the rut to-day and secured a sufficient following to give the board an even break on losses and gains. The influence of the New York market was on the downside, the interlisted shares closing lower. Steels and utilities were also firm to strong.

Brewing Corporation Preferred was carried up to a close at 28¾, a net gain of more than 3 points and a new record price. The Common, closed at 10⅛ for a gain of ⅝. Cosgrave added ⅝ but the other beer shares finished fractions higher.

Distillery issues moved within a narrow range and closed unchanged or within ¼ point of Tuesday's final prices. Volume was heavy in Walkers and fair in Distillers Seagrams.

LONDON (CP)—The application by the Association of British and Irish Millers for an increase of the present duty of 10 per cent on foreign flour has been rejected by the Imperial Duties Advisory Committee.

ROOSEVELT AIMS TO HURRY NAVAL CONSTRUCTION

Over Hundred New Ships to be Built—No Total Set For Year.

$1,500,000,000 TO SPEND.

Legislation Already Allows Putting U.S. Tonnage Up to Treaty Limits.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt intends to ask authority in a forthcoming supplemental appropriation bill to start actual naval construction to bring the United States fleet up to treaty limits.

This would permit the president to begin the construction program any time he sees fit.

Legislation recently enacted authorized a building program up to treaty limits.

The appropriation measure, totalling a little less than $1,500,000,000, will go forward to congress as soon as the revenue bill has been finally framed.

This is the general lump sum recovery appropriation outlined by the president in his budget message and $500,000,000 of it will be tagged for public works construction.

The president has not decided how many ships, if any, of the more than 100 new ones authorized by Congress will be built at this time.

However, he does want authority to use the new general funds for this purpose if he desires.

With new labor disputes nearing the White House, President Roosevelt also renewed efforts today to establish a definite industrial arbitration board.

SLIGHT LOSSES MINE LEADERS

Golds and Base Metals Reflect Weakness in New York Market.

SILVERS UNSETTLED.

TORONTO, April 25 (C.P.). — Traders in the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange took a gloomy view of the outlook to-day and sold stocks in sufficient quantities to depress prices generally though losses at the close were limited to about 75 cents among the leaders. Silver stocks were unsettled by the drop for bar metal and the golds and base metals merely reflected the note of weakness in the New York market.

Although 25 cents to 50 were nipped off Lake Shore, Dome and McIntyre, these issues came out sparingly. Hollinger met with freer sale and a drop to $16 showed a loss of 50 cents. Teck Hughes recovered to show a gain and Wright Hargreaves were off about 10 cents. Bralorne and Pioneer receded 25 cents each.

VICTIM OF KNIFE WOUND.

TORONTO, April 25 (C.P.). — Condition of Maurice Toultan, suffering from knife wounds allegedly inflicted by his brother-in-law, was reported at hospital to-day as 'fair' and resting more easily. It was expected he would recover.

Police allege that Toultan was stabbed by James Ferguson, 45, during a quarrel at the former's home. Mrs. Toultan was also wounded and taken to hospital. She was allowed to return home after treatment. Toultan suffered internal injuries from a deep knife wound.

Red Lake Prospector Deserts Mining Field Fruits And Vegetables Are Scarce

TORONTO, April 25.—(C.P.) — Husky, broad-shoudered youth, J. C. Biron, self-described Red Lake prospector, was in Toronto to-day, dressed in shorts, open neck sweater and wearing a green eye shade, though the sky was dull and the weather was the coldest of the last two weeks.

Biron, looking more like a homeless athlete than a prospector of the rugged north country, said he never had seen a "talkie" and expresed disappointment at not finding a constant stream of air traffic.

"Haven't they got any airplanes here?" he asked.

Student of "natural flying," the youth said he deserted the northern mining field because there were not enough fruits and vegetables there to maintain his health, and he found it necessary to pay 75 each for grapefruit and 60 cents a dozen for apples.

After a visit to his family at St. Croix, Que., the erstwhile prospector plans, he says, to purchase a fruit farm in the Okanagan Valley, B.C.

INSULL ADMITS HIS MISTAKE WAS TURNING TRAMP SHIP BACK

Claims Turks Tricked Him by Holding Vessel Over 24 Hour Limit.

WAS NEVER PRISONER.

By JOHN LLOYD.
(Copy right, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

S. S. EXILONA, April 25.—Headed out to sea again, on the last leg of the voyage which will end with his trial in Chicago, Samuel Insull, Sr., to day revealed his personal story of his detention in Turkey.

The aged man, who eluded United States' authorities 15 months, was up early to-day despite a slight heart attack which he suffered last night before the ship sailed from Casablanca, Morocco.

He appeared in good health again to-day.

Looking back on events, Insull was quick to admit that his decision to halt his ecape ship, the S.S. Maiotis, during its passage of the Black Sea, the error that precipitated his downall. Nevertheless, it was understood that his ship would have been stopped by the Turks if it had not heaved to of its own accord.

Legally, he insists, the Maiotis' position was sound under the terms of the Bosphorus Straits treaty which gives ships stopping for less than 24 hours the privilege of transit and accompanying guarantees.

Tricked by Turks.

He accuses the Turks of obliging him to remain in the harbor at Istanbul beyond the 24-hour limit by placing policemen aboard and thinking up pretexts to delay the departure. He says his original plan was to stay at Istanbul only three hours.

Insull says he virtually gave up hope of avoiding delivery to American authorities the moment he was obliged to set foot on shore after the ship had overstayed its transit limit.

He says, however, that he was astounded when he was transferred from a hotel to the detention prison

Insull insists he was not a prisoner in Istanbul and was just under detention, pointing out that he occupied a room in the administrative suite rather than being herded in with the ordinary inmates

So hopeless did Insull consider the situation that he says he told his lawyers there was no use spending his money in further legal moves. They insisted there was still hope, so he finally allowed them to proceed.

moved, the sale slumped for a time but was now coming back.

Operated On Share Plan

Mr. Kingstone said he was operating alone, his farms being operated on the "share" plan. He had, at one time, 42 tenant farmers on his privately-owned land. The most economical unit for tobacco-growing was about 30 acres for a "one-team" outfit.

When he started to grow flue-cured leaf in 1927, the tobacco was selling at 45 cents a pound. In 1928, top price was 40 cents, and the largest of his ownings, or 500 acres, was hailed out. There was no hail insurance at that time, although there was now. The only two crops he saved sold at 38 cents.

In 1929 the average price was 35¾ cents. His tobacco had been ruined by sand storms and he had replanted three times. Then frost came and he lost $120,000 worth of leaf as a result. In 1930 average top price was 40 and he averaged 37. In 1931 top was 30 and he got 27. Some of this tobacco was sold in England.

As a result of the drop from 40 cents to 30 cents, the best of his growers had quit. In 1932 top price was 24 cents and he averaged 17¾. But the quality was improved very much, he admitted. The tobacco companies had asked the growers to change from heavy to light types of leaf and to change the methods of harvesting.

Good growers did not like to hazard their own money in the crops because of the dangers of weather, and as prices dropped they simply left the farms and went away.

Urges 35-Cent Minimum

In 1933 top price was 25 cents and he received an average of 20 cents for his total production, of more than 1,000,000 pounds. Last year was the biggest crop he had for years.

The price of 17 cents in 1932 was well below cost of production, Mr. Kingstone said. The minimum price for tobacco, whereby a small return would be possible, would be 35 cents top price, which would bring the average of about 30 cents throughout the district. Even this would bring only a very small return, and would make no allowances for bad luck. The average yield per acre was about 900 pounds.

The drop in prices might be accounted for by increased production, Mr. Kingstone continued. There was a heavy crop in 1931. There was no reduction to the consumer, so far as he knew.

Imperial Tobacco Company usually opened the market, and the first price offered was usually the top bid. The other buyers took that as their "cue" in fixing the price.

Mr. Kingstone suggested a cigarette of All-Canadian manufacture would help considerably. There was an All-Canadian cigarette in England. The sale would be helped by reduction of the excise from $4 to $2, with the difference being made up by increasing the excise on United States cigarettes.

Cigarettes made in Canada and labelled "All Virginia" were a "slap in the eye" for Canadian growers. For the implication was they contained All-American tobacco when this was not so. Tobacco grown in Canada was of the "Virginia" type, witness said.

Prof. Archibald Leitch of Wingham, was next witness. He operated several large plantations in that area, he said, and was vice-president of the Ontario Flue Cured Association and numerous other organizations.

Encouraged Production.

The policy of domestic buyers, he continued, up to 1930 was to encourage the volume of production as quickly as possible. This policy was consistently followed up to that time.

Prices were remunerative up to 1930 so far as efficient growers were concerned and were justified on the basis of supply and demand alone. Prices reached as high as 60 to 70 cents a pound during this period. Production increased rapidly and new growers entered the industry.

His two plantations represented an investment of $876,000 in cash in the business with 64 tobacco units in operation.

In 1930 the Imperial "evaded the responsibility for a situation it had created itself," Professor Leitch continued. The crop was poor but the Imperial "led people astray" by paying high prices for below-average tobacco and knowing, under ordinary circumstances, there would be a surplus in other years.

Some growers had taken warning and prepared for the surplus by making contacts with British markets. Prof Leitch said. The small producers were unable to make these contacts, because they did not have sufficient supplies. He had personally told Imperial of the danger and the reply was: "What are you kicking about—you're getting a fair price for your tobacco, aren't you."

FRESH LETTER IN SKULL CASE

Ginrovitch Now Claims He Threw Girl's Legs, Clothes in River.

INQUEST ORDERED.

KITCHENER, Ont., April 25. — (C.P.).—Apologizing profusely for misleading police, and admitting that he killed a woman here in 1925 and buried her dismembered body, Jacob Ginrovich, Hamilton asylum patient, has written another letter to police. Addressing Police Chief Hodgson as "Dear Bill," he writes:

"I am sorry that I misled last time you and the gentlemen of the jury leading all to the wrong and not the right spot. Bill, I think you know well that I had to do something to escape the consequences, but as I see the fate is foresaking me, therefore in these few lines I'll tell you the rest of the truth.

"The skeleton was on the right spot, though I think not all, because the legs and hands I cut to small pieces piled up in her skirt with the shoes and the rest of her clothes and took it to the Victoria Park and dumped all in the water not very far from the south bridge of the island. The mentioned fur coat after I threw in an empty freight car on the C.P.R. yard.

"The legs and hands I cut with the shovel; beside these I must have stricken her on the chest and head too.

"Dear Bill, please help me if you can but a little to ease my worrying and unhappiness, and in future I'll pray for you."

An inquest into the woman's death has been ordered for Monday afternoon.

$4,000 Loot Taken From Akron Bank

AKRON, O., April 25 (CP)—The Mogadore Savings Bank in suburban Mogadore, was held up and robbed of $4,000 by two bandits shortly after noon to-day. The robbers kidnapped two clerks and two customers, releasing their captives about 1½ miles north of the city near the Cleveland-Akron road.

The captives gave Akron police Illinois license No. 161193 as the one attached to the car used by the robbers. The police began an immediate check to determine whether this was one of the "Dillinger gang" cars which fled a trap in Northern Wisconsin 48 hours ago.

GOLD TAX IDEA NOT ENCOURAGED BY QUEEN'S PARK

Voiced Opposition When Consulted Before Levy Announced Says Henry.

SEES BENNETT TO-DAY.

Claims Election Date Not Even Been Discussed in Cabinet.

OTTAWA, April 25 (C.P.).—While he did not think it was his responsibility to make any specific recommendation as to how the new gold tax should be modified, Premier George S. Henry said that at his conference here to-day with the Prime Minister he would ask for some modification. The proposed tax should not be allowed to interfere with the low grade mines, the Premier said.

"We have done everything possible to encourage the development of low grade ore mines in the province," said Mr. Henry, "and we are expecting many more will open up."

Asked if the Ontario Government had been consulted prior to announcement of the tax, the Premier replied in the affirmative, "but," he added, "we discouraged the idea."

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, who accompanied the Premier, recalled that the average price of gold last year was $28. As the tax would not operate to the point of reducing the gold price below $30, the mines would be in no worse position than last year.

The tax did not violate the provisions of the British North America Act, the Ontario Cabinet members were agreed. The Dominion could enter any field of taxation. The gold tax, however, was direct taxation, similar to the income tax.

Discussing M. F. Hepburn's statement that a Provincial general election would be held in June, Premier Henry commented that the Liberal leader "regarded himself as an authority upon such matters." The election date had not even been discussed in Cabinet.

when Gleen Osler, Toronto, will review the submissions of the counsel for the importing firms. These companies are Thomas Bonar & Co. (Canada), Limited, Anderson Macbeth, Limited, and the Commercial Twine Co., Limited.

Aime Geoffrion, Montreal, for the importers, argued the right of the Tariff Board to examine and construe sections of the Customs Act.

"When a duty is applied it is necessary to construe the provisions of the Act, is it not?" Justice Rinfret questions.

"If the right to construe on one section applies," Mr. Geoffrion suggested, "then it applies to all sections."

"All of this hingers upon the technical interpretation of the word 'determine'," the powers of determination given to the Tariff Board," Chief Justice Duff stated.

Mr. Geoffrion contended that there was no statute requiring that every decision of the Tariff Board be subjected to the approval of the Minister. "There are some sections which require the Boards' decision to be approved by the Minister," he said, but suggested that the jute twine decision need not necessarily have demanded Ministerial approval.

He closed his case with the contention that the Tariff Board is an independent, quasi-judicial body to arbitrate duty valuation disputes, with the right of appeal to the Governor-in-Council reserved. "Where approval of the Minister was formerly required, this is now done away with," he concluded.

SPAIN'S CABINET RESIGNS OFFICE

Split With President Over New Political Amnesty Law.

DISORDER GROWS.

MADRID, April 25. (AP).—The government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux resigned to-day as a result of differences with President Niceton Alcala Zamora over Spain's new political amnesty law.

Despite the breach, well informed circles said the President probably would recall Lerroux and urge him to form another cabinet.

President Zamora, it was said, feels that it will be impossible under present conditions for any government except one similar to the resigned ministry to rule.

The Lerroux cabinet was formed only last month, on March 3.

The crisis was not expected to last long, although recurrent strikes and disorders in many parts of the nation brought a grave situation throughout.

The political amnesty law, which went into effect to-day, finally was signed by the President only after the cabinet had threatened to redesign unless he did so. But the President imposed conditions that would have necessitated re-submission of the bill to the Cortes, it was said.

The cabinet threatened to resign if Zamorra published a full explanation of his reasons for delaying signature. Zamorra declined to withdraw his reservations and rather than face the divided Cortes again the cabinet resigned.

CHEESE FACTORIES TO OPEN ON MONDAY.

Several Factories in District Ready to Start Season's Operations.

Some of the cheese factories of the district will begin operations next Monday, M. J. Moore, dairy instructor, told The Examiner to-day.

Most of the cheese makers attended a meeting of their association Saturday night at which the silver cup given by the Lakefield branch of the Bank of Commerce was presented to George Wilson of Hall's Bridge. This district trophy was held last year by J. J. Brethour of Warsaw.

Arrangements were made for a series of meetings this season, and it was decided to contribute six dollars to the Peterborough Exhibition for a special prize at this year's exhibition for cheese produced in Peterborough and Victoria counties.

REV. GEORGE W. TEBBS ADDRESSES LOCAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

"The Garden Beautiful" is Subject of Illustrated Address.

AN IDEAL GARDEN.

"Do you know that radio is mentioned in the Bible? In the second chapter of Genesis, it says that when Adam was asleep, the Lord removed one of his ribs and from the spare part made a loud speaker.—And man has been listening in ever since.

"When the dogs scratch up your garden, dont' use bad language—say 'Assouan'—that's the biggest dam in the world.

"Did you ever hear of the Englishman who said his own countrymen raved over their rose, the Irish talked about the shamrock and the Scotch about the thistle. 'But,' he finished, 'give me 'ops every time'."

"The Garden Beautiful" was the subject of the talk, illustrated by a number of beautifully-tinted lantern slides, that was listened to with intense interest by about one hundred and twenty-five people in the Public Library last evening, when the Rev. George W. Tebbs of Burlington addressed flower-lovers of the city under the auspices of the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

The horticultural aspect of the address was not its only charm. The many chuckles that greeted the dry humor of the speaker attested to the fun that this genial gentleman can inject into any lecture. The Rev. Mr. Tebbs must have an amusing life. He loves flowers, he has the ability to talk about his hobby in an entertaining way, and he has a fund of jokes and anecdotes that appears to be inexhaustible, with which he colors his sentences in just as an effective a manner as he tints the slides that portray the beauties of his subject. The opening paragraphs of this account give an idea of the diversity of his style.

The Idgal Garden

"This is the type of garden that I consider the best, where there is some mystery, where you can wander about all day, if you wish, and find something unexpected at every turn,' he said of the beautiful garden of extremely natural type that formed one of the last of the pictures. It had grass growing beneath tall pine trees and winding green paths with unending vistas and little informal flower beds strewn here and there.

A glimpse of trees and water with quantities of yellow crocus lining the banks of a little stream, was vouchsafed in the first picture, while "snowdrops on stilts," the white narcissi that grow in the Swiss Alps, came next, recommended for a rock garden.

"Crazy paths" for these same lovely rock gardens were made of flat stones, but the speaker did not recommend the type he once trod on in the Old Country, where the owner had requisitioned stones from an abandoned cemetery and the wayfarer walked over miniature monuments extolling the virtues of the departed.

The English laburnum flourished in the lovely view of Hampden Court gardens, and the Rev. Mr. Tebb remarked on the success of the importation to Canada of these wonderful Old World trees.

A combination that appeared very lovely on the screen was a tulip bed bordered with pink and blue forget-me-nots, while an extraordinary bit of beauty that had been contrived by the society in a small village in Canada included a little Chinese pagoda, with a water-lily strewn streamlet and stone steps leading to a shrubbery background.

"Come and see my iris beds any time you are passing by," invited the speaker, "I have no 'keep off the grass' signs there and there are no fences around them."

Many varieties of beautiful iris were illustrated, including lovely colors, like the lavender and purple Cardinal, the purple and mauve hybrid, "Burlington Beauty," the cream "Bride," and the dark "Ambasador," formerly costing five dollars for each sample.

Lilies

Lilies came next — the superb Easter lily of Bermuda; the Honsonii lily from gardens in England rendered fruitful by fertilizer brought from a nearby brewery; the 'lilium gigantum' that grows from twelve to fourteen feet high in the peaty loam of England; the gorgeous Regal lily that came here from the mountains of China, a few years back; the spotted Sutzuzenyzs lily of Japan and the yellow lily of Siberia.

Delphiniums displayed a marvellous combination of soft colors; mottled blue, rose and yellow in the Lady Gwendolyn, pink and electric blue, the violet hues of Pompadour; the soft blue of Mrs. Hargreaves; the sea blue of Sir Douglas Haig, and the forget-me-not blue, splashed with white, of Constance.

Sunken gardens were another beautiful item in the pictures. "The Songs of Solomon mention the 'garden close'," reminded the speaker, who pointed out the formal sunken garden of to-day as the counterpart of those nurtured in the time of Queen Anne and King Henry Eighth.

"People call these lily ponds," he remarked, pointing to a sunken pool," but I call them pollywog ponds."

An English teahouse had a wealth of Dorothy Perkins roses climbing over its roof. The Rev. Mr. Tebb referred to the English lavender which is so much prized and told of a young Canadian girl of his acquaintance who is making her way through school by cultivating and selling this perfumed flower.

And still another young Canadian stenographer, of Gueiph, had carried off a prize for many years for the beauty of her rock garden fashioned from an ancient stone quarry. On the screen, it was indeed a thing of beauty.

And then there was the lovely garden where the speaker grew so romantic, "that I could have proposed to my own grandmother," and the equally interesting old garden cultivated by an old lady "who didn't know the name of anything except a rose and told and told me she was going to have some of that scarlet 'saliva' in her garden."

Beauty Spots

Gardens made a brave showing, from the formal gardens of old England, some of them cultivated during the past four centuries, to the garden on Manitoulin Island where an Englishman has contrived a spot of restful peace and beauty, walled in by high, square-topped hedges, and sown with old-fashioned flowers; pinks, pansies, lavender, thyme, gilly flowers, roses, all between winding grass paths.

One of the loveliest of the lot was a mixture of moonlight and roses, with a sundial as a center.

"But there is more to your credit for what you are doing here in places like this than in carrying on gardens started four centuries back," he concluded. "I have been around your city and you have some nice spots but there are several things I wouldn't agree to, like those little shrubs dotting your boulevards here and there."

As a prelude to the lecture of the evening, the president of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, S. T. Harris, who acted as chairman, spoke of several projected exhibitions by the organization.

On May 14th, weather permitting, a window display of tulips and other spring flowers will be made, with roses and delphinium on view in the latter part of June. Probably a small silver cup will be presented for the best delphinium spike in the latter exhibit.

On August 16th, the big Flower Show will be held in the Legion Hall, with entries in sixty classes, with prizes and two cups, one for the best gladioli spike, the other for the greatest number of points attained in the show.

Lawn and garden competitions, with many different sections, will be held as usual, during the summer.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the vote of appreciation to the speaker was voiced by Jack Smith and seconded by George Benton.

The Rev. Mr. Tebbs is probably well-known to radio fans in Peterborough, as he is the "Old Man Sunshine" who broadcasts over CKOC, Hamilton, at 9.15 each morning. He announced that he has given eight hundred and seventy-one radio talks, to date.

Police Clash With 6,000 in Crowd Outside Cleveland Plant—Woman Beaten.

TRUCK DRIVERS QUIT.

WASHINGTON, April 25 (C.P.).—Strike disorders sharpened the capital-labor controversy in the United States automotive industry yesterday, while negotiations went forward for settlement of the railroad and Alabama coal wage disputes.

At Cleveland mounted police restored order among a crowd of 6,000 strike sympathizers who crowded around the Fisher Body Company's plant, where about half of the 8,000 employees walked out in a demand for union recognition. One woman was reported beaten and several persons were chased when strikers tried to keep men from entering the plant.

A picket was stabbed at St. Louis, where 3,000 workers left their jobs at the Chevrolet Motor Company and Fisher Body plants, asking union recognition. Eight men were arrested for stoning trucks carrying workers from the plants. Several persons were struck by the flying stones.

Leo Stanford was stabbed in the left lung. His companions, William Meyer and Melvin Green, also strikers, said a knife was wielded when they approached a group of workers who had refused to walk out.

At Toledo, 1,900 automotive workers remained on strike.

The National Automobile Labor Board worked at Detroit to restore peace in the industry, hearing both manufacturers and labor leaders.

At Cleveland gasoline truck drivers joined a strike of 2,000 filling station attendants. Higher wages, shorter hours and union recognition are the demands.

SPRINGTIME IS CAMERA TIME

Budding Photographer Grasps Trusty Camera and Goes to Country.

BEAUTY EVERYWHERE.

Primavera, as the poets label spring, the time of primroses, is the season when the budding photographer grasps his trusty camera and hies him forth to catch and preserve some of the new beauty of field and dell.

Little streams, breaking forth from parent rivers, trees whose dress is yet but a sketchy affair of buds and leafy stalks, pussy willows with silvery branches against a blue spring sky, a busy jenny wren gathering sticks and wisps of straw and bits of string for a home for her children—they can all be immortalized in the camera's eye.

"Look for beauty, and you find it," says the sage, while still another tells you that "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." Emerson said, "In the mud and scum of things, something lovely always sings." Perhaps that is why the true photographer does not seek for stereotyped beauty. Blonde loveliness and willowy, slender forms and graceful legs do for magazine covers. When you want the real human touch, you may not need to go far afield. One of the most effective bits of camera magic seen in a long time was the first prize-winner in a recent contest for snapshots conducted by Liberty Magazine.

In this picture, a tiny, mischievous girl steals up behind her sleepy grandfather and claps her hands over his eyes.

And did you ever go down to the market on Saturdays and see the tiny puppies that will sit up in baskets and view the world out of blue eyes? And what about those stately white Pekin ducks in their crates. An artist in search of material made a sketch of the market one morning and included several of the vendors, whose delight was extreme later when they saw the sketch and recognized their own stalls and their very own vegetables.

A visiting lady from Hamilton remarked on the beauty of rain-swept streets in the twilight of a spring evening, and enthused over the gleaming cross of the Cathedral, lifting itself against the sky at the height of Hunter street.

And then, what of the beauty of the river, and those magical little islands below the Hunter street bridge. What of the hills that rise on every side of the town and the trees in Jackson Park and Nicholls Oval, each place having a distinctive beauty all its own.

Sky, trees, landscape and water scenes, human beings and little children and animals, even the comforting atmosphere of an old, warm homestead or the tragic loneliness of a forsaken, dark old house, each and all have a charm of their own, and the camera can catch and hold it for this and future generations to see and marvel over.

Cameras of all types are available—large and small—with the latest, up to date gadgets and in well-known models. Make a bit of beauty your own through the medium of the camera's eye.

$1,317 SECURED IN Y. CAMPAIGN

Fire Chief George Gimblett's Team Leads First Day Drive.

$7,250 REQUIRED.

The Y.M.C.A.'s canvass for the 1934 budget, with $7,250 as its objective, made a splendid start yesterday, it was reported last evening when 56 workers in the drive met at luncheon in the "Y" to furnish reports on the results of their first day's work.

During the day the workers made a total of 147 calls, securing 119 subscriptions for a total of $1,317, or 18 per cent of the objective. The number canvassed represents 17 per cent of those who will be asked for subscriptions.

Fire Chief George Gimblett's team led the parade for results, reporting subscriptions of $150, or 83 per cent of his objective. R. J. Goring's team made the largest number of calls, 20, and J. A. Bell's team reported the largest number of new subscriptions, 5. The Special Names' Committee, with W. A. Richardson as captain, reported $590 in subscriptions as their day's work.

Charles Shaw, chairman of the Campaign, presided at the luncheon. He expressed the hope that citizens would prepare themselves to receive the canvassers and be ready to make a subscription to the "Y" in order that the association might successfully carry on its work. Harry Ballantyne, of the National Council, who has been loaned to Peterborough for the campaign, stated that the first day's subscriptions were encouraging, but the workers needed the support of every thinking citizen in order to make their efforts successful.

The campaign, planned to last three days, will probably close tomorrow evening. Another report luncheon is being held this evening at the "Y".

DEFIES TERRIFIC 104-FOOT DROP

Studebaker bodies are so strong and safe that one of them emerged almost unscathed from two test drops into a 104-foot Pennsylvania rock quarry. Doors opened and closed perfectly and car was instantly started and driven away easily after each fall.

GET STUDEBAKER PRESTIGE AND PERFORMANCE AT SENSATIONALLY LOW PRICES

PRACTICALLY all other cars are substantially higher in price today than last year. But prices of the new skyway style Studebakers of 1934 are still $265 to $755 lower. Studebaker is giving the greatest value in its long history in these cars. They're finer than the finest that Studebaker ever offered before. Come in and take out a 1934 Studebaker for a convincing trial drive. No other car will do, once you've driven a Studebaker.

There's a full 58 inches of width in the front seats of all Studebaker sedans. And that's true of the low priced Dictators as well as Commander and President. Very few, even among the costliest cars, are as commodious in rear seats or front seats as these new Studebakers. Compare them all and see.

$25 ONLY CASH REWARD POSTED FOR DILLINGER

Million Dollar Killer Now Has Army of 5,000 on Trail.

NATIONS BEST SLEUTHS.

Sen. Copeland Raps Lack of Co-operation Federal, State Officials.

MERCER, Wis., April 25.—(AP)—Million dollar murderer of United States with a puny $25 price tag on his head—and the blood of 13 men across his bullet-blazed trail—mocked today an army of more than 5,000 officers who hunted him.

"We'll have John Dillinger before long," said the United States Department of Justice through its division of investigation at Chicago.

The earnestness of the government's determination was witnessed by both the great number and high calibre of agents they threw into the hunt.

But there was no word of the desperado despite the intensity of the hunt.

Rumors flew, but all simmered down to the fact that John Dillinger vanished Sunday night from the Little Bohemia resort near here and has been unreported since.

10 Month Career

In a criminal career dating only from last June—not yet a year—this 31-year-old, small town man from Indiana has cost an estimated $1,500,000 in law enforcement funds and another $500,000 in loot from banks he has robbed; yet the only reward offered today for his capture is the nominal $25 which the state of Indiana offers automatically for the arrest of parole violators.

All the Dillinger furore, the Dillinger desperadoism, and the Dillinger deaths have occurred during a period in which, except for a parole, he would still have been in a prison cell. He was freed on his plea that he was not an habitual criminal, and that he was needed for the support of an aged father.

"I think John would make a good policeman, if they'd give him another chance," the father said, as the federal government, playing its aces, pushed the hunt for the son, dead or alive.

Forces Mobilize

From the Attorney-General at Washington on down, the government pointed its full strength at this one man. Re-enforcements went into the field to-day, among them W. A. Rorer, the officer who brought about the arrest of another public menace, George (Machine Gun) Kelly, kidnapper-gunman now serving a life sentence in federal prison.

Rorer was in command of the small army of government officers concentrated in the wooded section of Northern Wisconsin where Dillinger's Sunday night escape from a tavern left two dead in his wake.

The federal men, however, formed only a small part of the still larger army of approximately 5,000 state, city and county officers who were combining the underworld haunts of five middle-west states, confident that it was only a question of hours before they would either have Dillinger alive or send him back to Indiana in "a wooden box."

The consensus among the investigators was that Dillinger's gang had split into two sections, one hiding out in Minneapolis or St. Paul and the other heading south and east into Illinois, Indiana or Ohio.

Co-operation Lacking

United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, chairman of the Senate anti-racketeering committee charged at Washington that there had been a "pathetic failure of co-operation between federal, state, and local authorities" in the Dillinger hunt. The charge was denied by Melvin G. Passolt, superintendent of the Minnesota Bureau of Criminal apprehenson, and others.

At Washington Attorney General Homer Cummings asked for aeroplanes, armored cars and additional forces to wipe out Dillinger and his men.

If Dillinger is captured alive the State of Wisconsin will put in a bid for his return on charges of murder, growing out of the Mercer shootings.

"A big reward wouldn't hasten Dillinger's capture. It would just cause a lot of squabbling if he were caught."

Indians On Trail?

LONDON, April 25—(AP)—Indians have taken the war path against John Dillinger, readers of one London morning newspaper were told today.

"Even some red Indians joined the hunt today with bows and arrows," read a paragraph in the newspaper's vivid account of the search for the number one public enemy of United States.

The account was contained in a dispatch from the newspaper's New York correspondent.

Another paragraph told how an army of citizens was assisting police—an army "composed of lumberjacks armed with pickaxes and choppers, farmers with shotguns and laborers with pitchforks and crowbars."

One paper printed a dispatch under a Chicago dateline which said that the "entire middle west is suffering from a bad attack of the 'Dillinger jitters' and until the gangster is brought to book sleepless nights will be passed by anxious householders sitting up with guns in their hands."

LOCAL INDUSTRY PLANS ADOPTION OF FAST TIME

favor of working on Daylight Saving Time during the summer months. Several plants had taken a vote on the question among the employees.

D. G. H Melton, manager of the Bonnerworth plant of Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, said, "Mr. Sanderson, manager of the Auburn plant, and myself conferred on this question and it has been decided that both plants will adopt Daylight Saving Time on Monday, April 30. This decision was brought about not only because of business reasons, the fact that Toronto and Montreal will be on fast time, but also most of our employees favor summer time. It is not definitely decided but the plants will probably remain on the summer time schedule as long as Toronto and Montreal are on it."

J. R. Marshall, manager of the Nashua Paper Company's plant, said, "Our whole plant will operate throughout the summer on Daylight Saving Time, starting Monday."

Charles Shaw, manager of A. Wander Company's plant, stated, "Our factory and office will work on the fast time starting Monday. In the factory the male help will start work at 6 o'clock, the girls at 7, and the office at 8 o'clock. The factory employees will have lunch between 11 and 12, but the office between 12 and 1. The whole plant will close down at 4 o'clock in the afternoon."

Employees Favor It

R. V. Dawson, manager of the Brinton Carpet plant, said, "We are considering this and its very probable that will adopt Daylight Saving Time throughout the plant. We are working an eight-hour day, and with the new schedule will start at 7 and work until 12, and from 1 to 4. The men in the plant are in favor of this and it is advisable owing to business reasons."

E. H. Howson, manager of the Lock Company, said, "It is more or less decided that our plant will adopt Daylight Saving Time about June 15 and continue on it for several months. The employees want it. I thought the Daylight Saving Time the city had used for the past several years was ideal and we will adopt fast time for about the same period."

Robert Abbott, manager of the Raybestos plant, stated that the factory would probably adopt summer-time, but not immediately. "We had a vote on the question and the employees voted strongly for it," he said. "Since then we have hired considerably more hands and another vote will probably be necessary. I think we will adopt it sometime in June, if the employees still desire it."

Not Warm Enough

W. R. Breyfogle, manager of the DeLaval plant, said that no change in the work hours of the plant was being considered at the present time, but it is possible that when the weather becomes warmer the plant will adopt Daylight Saving Time.

J. H. Vernor, manager of the Western Clock Company, stated that a test vote to secure the feeling of the employees on the summer time question would probably be taken at an early date. "The weather is still too cool to give any benefits from Daylight Saving Time, but it is possible we might adopt it sometime in June, if the employees desire it."

W. A. Richardson, manager of the Peterborough Canoe Company, said that his firm did not plan any change in the time schedule of their factory at this time. "As it gets warmer, we may start an hour earlier and quit earlier," he explained. "But that would not be until about June."

G. S. Matthews, manager of the Canada Packers' plant, said the factory would not change to fast time, but that it was probable the office would start at 7 o'clock work through to 12 and then quit for the day at 4 o'clock. "The office employees would prefer to work on fast time," he explained.

J. E. Sullivan, of Quaker Oats Company, said that the plant contemplated no change in its time schedule, but that later in the summer the office would probably start work at half an hour earlier and so be enabled to enjoy a half hour more sunlight in the late afternoon.

CONVICT'S SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY MAY REVOLUTIONIZE FUEL SUPPLY

Forger Has Process for Extracting Hydrogen From Water.

EXPERTS RUSH TO "PEN"

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25. — (By Central Press Canadian), — From an improvised laboratory behind the bars of California's "hard-boiled" penitentiary at Folsom, has come a convict's scientific discovery that some day may revolutionize the world's supply of fuel for home and industrial use.

The inventor is James Fred Burke, though at Folsom he's known only by a number. He entered two years ago, a convicted forger. Yet scientist have taken Emerson literally—they have made a path to his cell.

Frankly they are puzzled by his claims. But Burke is certain that he can prove the soundness and practicability of what he calls his "electrogen process"—a process for extracting hydrogen from water.

What It Promises.

If that process can do what Convict Burke promises for it, here are a few things that it offers:

A new liquid fuel, superior to gasoline, that can be manufactured at a cost of less than one-third of a cent a gallon.

Production of sufficient hydrogen gas for seven cents to equal the heat provided by a ton of coal or four barrels of oil—

Production of liquid substitute for gasoline at one-third of a cent a gallon, affording more power and less carbon deposit than gasoline.

Scientists years ago discovered the electrolytic medium for extracting hydrogen and oxygen from water. The process since has been used commercially to obtain oxygen for welding and similar purposes, but it is far too costly as a means of obtaining hydrogen for general fuel purposes.

Secret Formula.

But Burke now claims to have discovered a far cheaper way to taking the hydrogen out of the water. He says he accomplishes this by means of a special compound of secret formula. One pound of this compound, he claims, will extract the hydrogen from 425 gallons of water. And the cost of the new compound is less than five cents a pound!

The gasoline substitute, which Burke says he can produce to revolutionize industry, is made by combining the hydrogen taken from the water with carbon monoxide and certain other elements. The liquid, he claims, will propel automobiles, trucks, motorboats and aeroplanes with more power to the gallon than gasoline.

Many Impressed.

For months delegations of industry have visited Burke. They have watched him turn an electric current into jars of water and have seen hydrogen appear in high ratio.

The precise use of his compound he conceals during his demonstrations, but many have been highly impressed by what he has accomplished.

Before his conviction Burke devoted much time and study to chemistry and upon entering prison pleaded for a chance to continue the experiment he had begun outside. Burke formerly resided in Michigan.

Science Losing Fight On Leukemia Victims

NEW YORK, April 25 (C.P.).—Science struggled anew to-day, with scant hope of success, to save two little girls from the deadly leukemia, baffling malady of bloodstream.

A second blood transfusion was arranged for Mary Laboradoldan, three years old, who was growing steadily weaker in a Buffalo, N.Y., hospital.

Four-year-old Roma Garrett, being treated at Grasslands, N.Y., likewise was reported gradually losing strength. She is too weak to talk.

Leukemia, a strange disease which drives red corpuscles from the bloodstream and steadily saps the strength of its victims, has brought death to three children in the last ten days.

Cunrd-White Star Merger Is Opposed

LONDON, April 25.—(A P)—The legal challenge to the Cunard-White Star shipping lines merger opened before Justice Eve of the Chancery Division today when the International Mercantile Marine Company of New York moved for an interim injunction to restrain the agreement from being carried into effect.

The I.M.M. filed proceedings seeking an injunction on March 26.

The president of I.M.M., P.A.S. Franklin, declared the White Star lineowed his company $11,000,000 due for 36 ships and that the I.M.M. holds stock in the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, which owns the White Star Line, as collateral against the amount due.

He added he is not agreeable to the merger arrangement whereby he said Cunard would receive 62 percent of the stock in the new corporation.

Fan Dancer Freed, To Continue Show

VANCOUVER, April 25. (CP).—Free from custody of immigration authorities, Miss Mary Nebel, known on the stage as Miss Fay Baker, and her brother, Charles W. Nebel of Chicago to-day were preparing to continue theatrical engagements at the Pacific coast.

Miss Nebel, a fan dancer, and her brother were taken into custody and held for 24 hours while immigration authorities studied their passports. F. W. Taylor, Commissioner of Immigration, ordered their release last night when both proved permits allowing them to remain in Canada until July 1.

Calgary records showed Miss Nebel was married March 31 to Constable J. H Leslie of the Regina detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The marriage announcement was withheld at the request of both parties. Miss Nebel's home is at Waterton, Wis., while Constable Leslie's home is in Vancouver.

BACK TO GARDEN IN CITY LIMITS

Toronto Committee Hopes to Provide for 5,000 Unemployed Families.

RAISING VEGETABLES

TORONTO, April 25 (CP)—Reviving the "back to the land" fervor of war days and taking a leaf from the Old Country book of garden "allotments" several Ontario cities are this year actively developing the "Community Garden" plan for the unemployed.

Last year saw the scheme in successful operation in the city of Hamilton. Families to the number of 5,157 were provided for on 234 acres of land producing vegetables having a retail value of more than $75,000. The average cost for seed, etc., on a lot 25 by 100 feet, was $1.72.

Following the initiation of the movement in a small way in Toronto last year, a meeting of representatives of commercial and industrial concerns under the auspices of the Board of Trade this year authorized a committee to carry out the scheme on a big scale. The committee visualizes many of Toronto's unemployed happily and healthfully busy in community gardens. Plowing has already been done on some of the lots.

Sponsored by Mayor W. J. Stewart and the City Council, the general committee, of which M. L. Davies is chairman, and the executive under the leadership of Prof. H. Wasteneys, worked out the preliminaries of the project along these lines:

(a) To secure vacant land suitable for gardening purposes and have it prepared for garden use.

(b) To register, through the social agencies, all unemployed persons interested in cultivating vegetable gardens.

(c) To provide seeds, plants, fertilizer, tools and supervision to the would-be gardeners.

(d) To provide instruction in the proper making of gardens, times of sowing and cultivation.

Many large vacant properties within Toronto's boundaries or close to the city have been offered for the purpose of the gardens. It has been estimated at least 400 acres will be needed. The problem is to select the most suitable ground within the reach of watering facilities if possible. Plows and other farming equipment were placed at the disposal of the committee by various agricultural implement concerns.

Toronto's community garden effort will be on as large a scale as resources will permit. The committee hopes to provide for 5,000 families in the project with a "set up" fund of $10,000 now being raised for the purpose. Three thousand applications for plots have already been received.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 25. — Butter and cheese prices continued to ease on the Montreal Produce and Dairy Market yesterday, while eggs and potatoes held steady.

Fresh current make Ontario cheese eased a quarter of a cent at 10¾c to 11c a pound, and summer white and colored Ontario held firm at 11½c to 12c a pound. A total of 250 boxes was received.

Graded shipments of eggs in carlots or less were mainly firm, although A-large declined half a cent at 19c to 19½c a dozen. A-medium sold at 18c to 18½c. B at 17c to 17½c, and C at 16½c to 17c. Arrivals amounted to 4,466 cases.

Quebec potatoes per 80-pound bag were quoted at 95c to $1.00, and New Brunswick Mountains in 80-pound bags at $1.00 to $1.05 Prince Edward Island Mountains sold at $1.20 to $1.25.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 25 — Dominated by heavy liquidating sales on the part of holders who bought some time ago because of inflation talk, wheat prices underwent material setbacks yesterday.

Many traders in wheat were apparently impressed by a sharp break of quotations for silver futures and by comparative lack of market response to reports of widespread shortage of moisture in leading wheat states, the spring crop belt in particular. Forecasts of damp weather in some sections of the dry area tended also to pull the values down.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅝c to 1¼c under Monday's finish; corn, unchanged to ⅝c lower; oats, ¼c to ½c off; and provisions at 2c to 7c decline.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 25. — Wheat prices ambled through a dull session on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, heeding Chicago's weakness rather than Liverpool's strength, and finished ⅜c to ½c low. May delivery closed at 64⅝c, July at 65½c, and October at 67¼c. Absence of export demand was a discouraging factor.

Tirmness in the English market resulting in gains of ⅝d to ¾d per 100 lbs., was attributed to a better demand for wheat and a growing belief raising of export prices would be achieved by the Wheat Conference.

Cash trading was dull. Demand for top grades of wheat for shipment at the opening of navigation was indifferent. Coarse grains were devoid of interest, and sagged with wheat.

TRENT RIVER

Three of our local boys who are employed at Burleigh Falls road construction camp have met with somewhat similar accidents within a few days of each other. Fred Alley had the index finger of his left hand hit with a sledge hammer, splitting the finger to the first knuckle necessitating entering St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough for treatment. Johnny Tyler was hit with a large boulder causing injury to his foot while Ted Chaplin was also hit by a sledge hammer on the foot.

Mr. H. H. Pollock is one of the first to open navigation with motor boat, making a trip down the river Monday morning, many canoes have been seen since the opening of the trapping season.

W.I. DECIDE ON SCHOOL AWARDS

Regular Meeting of Seymour West Branch Held at Mrs. Gordon Johnston's.

FINANCES SOUND

CAMPBELLFORD, April 25 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent) — Holding their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Gordon Johnston of Seymour Township on Thursday last, the Seymour West, Women's Institute decided after discussion of the advisability of continuing the destruction of woodchucks, crows and crows' and sparrows' eggs, that was launched last year as a school fair prize, to pay into the school ten cents apiece for woodchuck tails and crows' beaks, and fifty cents for one hundred crows' or sparrows' eggs, these to be counted at intervals by the home and school committee and the teacher.

A total of thirty-five members attended the meeting, Miss Dorothy Watters presiding at the piano for the opening ode. The financial statement, which was presented, showed that the branch was in a very sound condition.

A letter from the Ontario School Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association was read urging the Institute to see that the women attend the annual school meetings and the county educational meetings and there bring in resolutions and take part in the discussion. It was felt that the men are often concerned mainly with the administrative functions of the school and forget the finer qualities which make real life. This was where women were needed and can exert a great influence on the welfare of our youth.

It seems probable that the branch will have a summer speaker this year, for which plans are being made. The provisional program for the year was read and seemed quite satisfactory. The July meeting of the Institute was specially spoken of as being a "school children's day," to which the new Hastings branch will probably be invited.

The program included: piano solo, Miss Dorothy Watters; reading, "A Wedding," Miss Helen Watters; vocal solo, Miss M. Huycke of the Hastings Institute; a very excellent paper on "Moral Rectitude" given by Mrs. Roy Fleming.

A flower contest put on by Mrs. Ed McConnell was won by Mrs. Ray Free's and Mrs. Howard Clark's groups, the award being a box of maple candy, which was shared by the whole gathering. A dainty lunch was served by the hostesses and a goodly number of flower slips were taken by those wishing them, and the exchange of bulbs made.

Peoples Of Japan, Is Theme Of Topic

CAMPBELLFORD, April 25 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent) — "The Peoples of Japan" was the theme of the topic delivered by the Rev. F. G. MacTavish of the Seymour charge, when he addressed the weekly meeting of the Young Peoples' League of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, on Monday evening. The president gave a devotion reading entitled "The White Fire,' 'and the scripture reading was read by Ruth Taylor. The program was in charge of the missionary department, Miss Verna Sanders being in the chair. This included a discussion period led by Dr. E. V. Frederick; a vocal solo by George Lucy; reading by Marjorie Ferguson; piano solo by Thelma Menzies, and the topic.

ARTICLES REQUIRED.

We are trying to procure a black dress and slip, a black Straw hat and two pairs of black stockings for a woman in mourning who has no money to buy clothes.

We would also like to get a baby's cradle or high chair, a tea kettle and two oil lamps, and a woman who is trying to get money by making soap would be glad to have supplies of beef tallow or fat.

Please telephone Miss McCarthy at The Examiner and these things will be placed to advantage.

GIRL IS RESCUED.

Ruby Dwyer, 12, daughter of Mrs. Mary Dwyer of George street, was rescued from an unfortunate predicament last evening by Mable Perry and Tommy Shields.

Playing on Dalhousie street, Ruby lost her ball when it rolled into the Jackson Park creek. Determined to recover the lost plaything, the child followed its course down the creek, and stepping on a plank to effect her purpose overbalanced and splashed into the water.

While the child succeeded in hanging on to the plank until her playmates could effect a rescue, it was not learned whether or not she retrieved the ball.

WHEREABOUTS OF MAN SOUGHT.

Information is sought as to the whereabouts of the brother of Mrs. Letitia Robinson, aged 64, former resident of Peterborough, who died recently in Toronto. The name of her brother is not known but it is understood he was formerly employed here. Information should be forwarded to Chief Newhall.

CLOTHING NEEDED

Miss Batten, who is in charge of the City's Relief Depot on George street, where clothing is dispensed, would be very glad to receive supplies such as hose, sweaters, children's shoes, men's pants and work shirts and boots, also any other articles of clothing, linen, bedding or household furniture that might be found in closets and attics during house-cleaning operations.

"KING OF SWATTERS"

On display in The Examiner show window there is a fly swatter that has the merits of a real swatter—which is in fact claimed by the inventor to be "king of swatters".

A Peterborough product made by hand, the leather swatter is rivetted to the handle besides being cemented, and is claimed to be sanitary and to possess the advantage that it will not scratch furniture.

The handles of the swatters come in various colors, making them attractive as well as useful. They may be obtained through local dealers about May 1st.
